(l) Workplace Nurseries—The Service does not operate any workplace nurseries.

Maternity leave/pay and paternity leave are entitlements. The other provisions are discretionary within the operational requirements of The Service, and subject on a case by case basis to the agreement of line managers and personnel management.

Letter from Jim Norton to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 7 May 1996:

Question: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, what provision is available to employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) childcare allowances, (n) carers' leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case.

I have been asked to answer the questions you raise on behalf of the Radiocommunications Agency.

(a) and (b) maternity leave/pay—Permanent staff with more than one year's service and who intend to return to work after their maternity leave are entitled to apply to take up to 52 weeks maternity leave comprising 14 weeks paid maternity leave at full rate of pay and up to 38 weeks unpaid maternity leave. Casual staff and staff with less than one year's service are entitled to the usual statutory provision.

(c) Paternity leave—Fathers may take up to 2 days paid paternity leave at the time of the birth of their child or during the weeks following the birth. Line Mangers may allow up to five days paid special leave to fathers where there are difficulties at the confinement or to care for other young children in the family.

(d) Parental leave—The Agency has no formal parental leave. Line Managers are encouraged to understand the problems facing staff who are balancing their work and child care commitments.

(e) Flexible working hours—There is a flexible working hours scheme which applies to staff in the Agency's Headquarters.

(f) and (g) Part-time work, job sharing—Any member of staff may apply to work part-time or to job share. This is subject on a case by case basis to the agreement of line managers.

(h) Need to care for sick children—Parents may apply for up to five days special paid leave to nurse a sick child.

(i) Homeworking—There are arrangements for staff within the Radio Investigation Service to work from home. Applications are judged against three criteria, a) that the Officer lives within his or her defined area of work and b) that the officer's average travelling time to the nearest Agency office from his or her home is greater than one hour and c) more than half of the offices normal work is within 15 miles of his or her home address.

(j) and (k) Term-time contracts, Annual Hours contracts—There are no staff on such contracts within the Agency.

(l) Workplace nursery—The Agency does not operate a workplace nursery. Staff can apply for places at a school holiday playscheme run by DTI in Central London.

(m) Childcare allowances—Staff may apply for reimbursement of additional childcare costs incurred as a result of a temporary change to their working routine.

(n) Carer's leave—Staff may apply for up to five days paid special leave to nurse a sick relative or dependant. Carers may also apply for a career break.

(o) Career break scheme—Permanent staff who have a satisfactory performance marking and attendance record may apply for a career break of up to five years to resume home care responsibilities for a dependant.

Maternity leave pay and Paternity leave are an entitlement. The other provisions are discretionary and subject, on a case by case basis, to the agreement of Agency line management.

Letter from John S. Holden to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 7 May 1996:

You recently asked the President of the Board of Trade for information about various aspects of the personnel provisions for his department. I am replying as Chief Executive of Companies House, and give this Agency's details below. The sub-paragraphs reflect the labelling in your PQ.

(a) & (b) Maternity Leave/Pay: Permanent staff with more than 1 year's service and who intend to return to work after their maternity leave, are entitled to apply to take up to 52 weeks' maternity leave. This comprises 14 weeks paid maternity leave at full rate of pay and up to 38 weeks unpaid maternity leave. Casual staff and staff with less than 1 year's service are entitled to the usual statutory provision.

(f) & (g) Part-time Work/Job Sharing: Any member of staff may apply to work part-time or to job share.

(h) Leave to Care for Sick Children: Parents may apply for up to 5 days special paid leave to nurse a sick child.

(i), (j) & (k) Home Working/Term Time Contracts/Annual Hours Contracts: Companies House does not operate home working/term time contracts/ annual contracts on a formal basis. However, managers use their discretion to allow staff to work from home during a domestic crises situation where operationally possible. Staff may apply to take unpaid special leave during school holidays.

(l) Workplace Nurseries: Companies House does not operate any workplace nurseries. However, it buys into a school holiday playscheme in Cardiff and is considering offering financial support to staff where they live outside Cardiff and use a registered playscheme.

(m) Child Care Allowances: Staff may apply for reimbursement of additional child care costs incurred as a result of temporary change to their working routine.

(n) Carers Leave: Staff may apply for up to 5 days paid special leave to nurse a sick relative or dependent. Carers may also apply for a career break.

Maternity leave/pay and paternity leave are entitlements. The other provisions are discretionary and subject, on a case by case basis, to the agreement of line managers and any other local arrangements that may be in place.

Ms Jowell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what provision is available to employees of his Department for (a) maternity leave (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job-sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) child care allowances, (n) carers' leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [27598]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The answers to the questions raised are as follows:

(a) and (b) Maternity Leave/Pay—Permanent staff with more than one year's service and who intend to return to work after their maternity leave are entitled to apply to take up to 52 weeks maternity leave, comprising 14 weeks paid maternity leave at full rate of pay and up to 38 weeks unpaid maternity leave. Casual staff with less than one year's service are entitled to the usual statutory provision.

(c) Paternity Leave—Fathers may take up to two days paid paternity leave at the time of the birth of their child or during the weeks following the birth. Line managers may allow up to five days special leave to fathers, where there are difficulties at the confinement or to care for other young children in the family.

(d) Parental Leave—The Department has no formal parental leave. Line managers are encouraged to understand the problems facing staff who are balancing their work and childcare commitments.

(e) Flexible Working Hours—Some parts of the Department operate flexible working hours schemes. Arrangements are made locally.

(f) and (g) Part time Work/Job Sharing—Any member of staff may apply to work part-time or to job share.

(h) Leave to care for sick children—Parents may apply for up to five days special paid leave to nurse a sick child.

(i), (j) and (k)—Homeworking/Term-Time Contracts/Annual Hours Contracts—A number of such working patterns are operating in the Department. Staff may apply to take unpaid special leave during school holidays.

(l) Workplace Nurseries—The Department does not operate any work place nurseries. However it runs a school holiday play scheme in central London, and supports a number of local schemes at Government office locations.

(m) Childcare Allowances—Staff may apply for reimbursement of additional child care costs incurred as a result of a temporary change to their working routine.

(n) Carers' Leave— Staff may apply for up to five days paid special leave to nurse a sick relative or dependent. Carers may also apply for a career break.

(o) Career Break Scheme—Permanent staff who have a satisfactory performance marking and attendance record may apply for a career break of up to five years to assume homecare responsibilities for a dependent.

Maternity leave/pay and paternity leave are entitlements. Apart from the play schemes for which places are available on a first come first served basis, the other provisions are discretionary and subject on a case-by-case basis to the agreement of line managers and any other local arrangements that may be in place.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what criteria are used to define a small business; how many people (a) in number and (b) as a percentage of the total workforce, are currently employed by small businesses in the United Kingdom so defined; how many small businesses are currently operating in the United Kingdom at the latest estimate; and what were the numbers in 1987, 1990 and 1992. [28218]

Mr. Page: There is no single definition of what constitutes a small firm. A range of definitions is used in practice according to the context in which they will apply, for example in setting boundaries for schemes targeted at small firms. For statistical purposes, a small firm is often defined as having fewer than 100 employees.

The latest estimates show 10.4 million people, 50 per cent. of the private sector work force, employed in such small firms at the end of 1993. Estimates of the numbers of small firms operating in the United Kingdom are given in the table.

Numbers of small[1] firms in the United Kingdom

Year	Number (millions)
1990	3.77
1993	3.56

Orimulsion

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which regulatory authorities he is consulting about the proposed use of orimulsion fuel for electricity generation in Pembrokeshire; and when he expects to receive their views. [27920]

Mr. Page: The Pembrokeshire county council, the Environment Agency, the Countryside Council for Wales, the Welsh Office and the Department of Transport are being consulted. It is too early to give an indication when my right. hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade will receive their considered views as they are currently considering other associated matters.

Gas (Complaints)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President to the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to improve the performance of British Gas as a result of complaints registered in the north-west region by the Gas Consumers Council. [28101]

Mr. Eggar: The performance of British Gas is a matter for the company. It has said in response to the Gas Consumers Council's annual report of performance in 1995 that it is working very hard to restore high levels of service.

The Government are ensuring, through the phased introduction of competition in domestic gas supply, that consumers have a choice, as they have at present in gas servicing.

Business Links

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his department's policy regarding bulk buying for business links. [28152]

Mr. Page: Business links, as independent companies, are fully responsible for their own purchasing arrangements including securing best value for money, taking account of all factors.

My Department is keen to encourage business links to develop collaborative bulk-buying which will secure greater value for money in their purchase of equipment and services. I therefore welcome the establishment of the business link network company which, when fully operational, will provide a range of support services to the business links including the development of purchasing arrangements of this type.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which business links have achieved the Investor in People standard. [28153]

Mr. Page: Business Link, Teesside achieved recognition as an Investor in People on the 22 April 1996. Other business links, such as Lincolnshire, operate as divisions of training and enterprise councils and are therefore part of the existing recognition of the TEC. As a requirement of the business links accreditation process, all business links must become recognised Investors in People within three years of opening.

Loan Guarantee Scheme

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many catering firms (a) in total and (b) in each parliamentary constituency will be excluded from applying for a loan under the loan guarantee scheme as of 1 September. [28177]

Mr. Page: Given that eligibility for the loan guarantee scheme depends on factors other than the business sector it is not possible to determine how many catering firms will be excluded.

British Coal Enterprises

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he had with the chairman of British Coal Enterprises, prior to privatisation, with regard to maintaining the services provided by British Coal Enterprises, to small local businesses, with particular reference to loans at advantageous interest rates; and if he will make a statement. [27947]

Mr. Page: My Department has had regular contact with British Coal about the privatisation of its British Coal Enterprises subsidiary. Throughout the sales process, British Coal has made clear that it would be considering proposals for BCE in the light of its statutory duties and the importance of ensuring the continuation of effective assistance to coalfield communities. I understand that the purchasers of BCE's business funding activities are committed to a programme of continued investment in the coalfields.

Medicines

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received concerning the effects of ending resale price maintenance on non-prescription medicines, and the effect this will have on small pharmacy businesses; and if he will make a statement. [27949]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Secretary of State has no statutory role or discretion in relation to the review being undertaken by the Office of Fair Trading. Representations sent to me have been forwarded to the Director General of Fair Trading.

Mining

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many deep mines were in production in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) the United Kingdom as a whole, in each year since 1982; and if he will make a statement. [27440]

Mr. Page: The number of British Coal deep mines was as follows:

	England	Wales	Scotland	United Kingdom
End March 1983	143	35	13	191
End March 1984	131	30	9	170
End March 1985	n/a	n/a	9	169
End March 1986	105	19	9	133
End March 1987	89	15	6	110
End March 1988	78	12	4	94
End March 1989	74	10	2	86
End March 1990	66	6	1	73
End March 1991	59	5	1	65
End March 1992	45	4	1	50
End March 1993	45	4	1	50
End March 1994	n/a	2	n/a	17
End December 1994	n/a	n/a	n/a	16

British Coal and Digest of Welsh Statistics.

At the end of 1995 there were a total of 32 large deep mines in operation in the private sector.

Privatisation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade for what reasons Her Majesty's Government placed on the market in separate tranches shares in BT and BP. [27335]

Mr. Lang: Decisions on privatisation offer structures, including the amount of particular shareholdings offered for sale at particular times, take account of issues such as the size of the company being sold and market conditions at the time of each sale.

Asylum and Immigration Bill

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations his Department made to the Home Department regarding the extra work imposed on small firms by the Asylum and Immigration Bill. [28151]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Officials from my Department have been in touch with those from the Home Office about various aspects of the Bill during the normal course of business.

Particle Physicists and Astronomers

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received from Sir Arnold Wolfendale about the provision of money for particle physicists and astronomers; and if he will make a statement. [27560]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 2 May 1996]: I have received a letter from Sir Arnold Wolfendale arguing for extra funds to support particle physics. In the current financial year the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council has been allocated an additional £10 million, over and above the £8 million allocated last year, to protect its budget from the increase in the sterling cost of its CERN and ESA subscriptions arising from exchange rate and national income movements. Funding priorities between particular areas of research within its remit are quite rightly for the PPARC.

Coal Mining (Safety)

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to increase the powers of the mines inspectorate so that owners who fail to produce a valid certificate of insurance will have their licence to work a mine withdrawn. [27295]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

I have no such plans. However, failure to produce a valid certificate of insurance can lead to prosecution.

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the latest figures for the major injury rate per 100,000 manshifts in the United Kingdom coal mining industry for the year beginning 1 April 1996. [27298]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not available.

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many notices have been served on private mine owners by the mines inspectorate because of their failure to produce a valid certificate of insurance. [27296]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

None.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Trade Unions

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what financial or other assistance the Overseas Development Agency provides to trade unions in developing countries in Africa; [27960]

(2) what financial or other assistance the Overseas Development Agency provides to trade unions in developing countries in Latin America; [27961]

(3) what financial or other assistance she provides to trade unions in developing countries in Asia. [28026]

Mr. Hanley: Under the British aid programme, over £1 million has been committed since 1987 through the joint funding scheme for the development of trade unions. Of this £434,000 was spent in Africa, £263,000 in Asia and £355,000 in the Caribbean. In addition, £200,000 a year has been available since 1995 through the workers' development scheme for projects to promote employee working conditions in developing countries. None of these funds have been committed in Latin America.

Aid

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the level of overseas development aid given by each member state of the European Union as a percentage of the gross domestic product for each of the last three years; and what is the European Union average. [27956]

Mr. Hanley: Figures for the percentage of GDP spent on official development assistance by EU member states on a financial year basis are not available. Figures for net ODA expenditure as a percentage of gross national product for these countries in 1992–94 are as follows:

Percentage of GNP

Austria	0.30	0.30	0.33
Belgium	0.39	0.39	0.32
Denmark	1.02	1.03	1.03
Finland	0.64	0.45	0.31
France	0.63	0.63	0.64
Germany	0.38	0.36	0.34
Greece	0.07	0.07	0.11
Ireland	0.16	0.20	0.25
Italy	0.34	0.31	0.27
Luxembourg	0.26	0.35	0.40
Netherlands	0.86	0.82	0.76
Portugal	0.36	0.29	0.35

TRANSPORT

Aviation Standards, Jamaica

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment (a) his Department and (b) the Civil Aviation Authority has made of Jamaica's adherence to aviation standards set down by the International Civil Aviation Organisation. [26750]

Mr. Norris: None. However, the Civil Aviation Authority has a contract to advise the Jamaican Civil Aviation Department on matters relating to airworthiness and flight operations standards.

Aircraft Inspections

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many inspections have been undertaken by (a) the Civil Aviation Authority and (b) his Department into aircraft leased by aircraft operators in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [26908]

Mr. Norris: The Civil Aviation Authority does not believe that additional safety checks are necessary on aircraft leased between UK operators. Wet leases of non-UK registered aircraft by UK operators are permitted only in order to meet temporary needs. If necessary, and requested by the UK operator, the CAA may carry out an audit of the lessor airline to confirm its safety standards.

Merchant Navy Uniform

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to amend the law on the wearing of Merchant Navy uniform; and if he will make a statement. [27114]

Mr. Norris: There are no plans to amend the law on the wearing of Merchant Navy uniform.

British Rail Route Structure

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the cost of the backlog on the British Rail route structure. [27817]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack's asset maintenance plan for track and route structures, developed with the assistance of independent consultants W. S. Atkins, forecasts the expenditure required over the 10-year period from 1 April 1994 for sustaining the operating capacity of the assets in accordance with Railtrack's operational policies and standards and to comply with its statutory obligations. The plan also takes into account the longer-term maintenance requirements of the assets.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what part British Rail maintenance experts played in estimating the costs of maintenance of the route structure for the Railtrack Pathfinder prospectus. [27813]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack developed its asset maintenance plan for track and route structures with the assistance of independent consultants W. S. Atkins. I understand that the preparation of the plan included making extensive inquiries of experts in the rail industry, and that this included a number of past and present employees of British Rail.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the forward projections of maintenance costs made over the last 10 years by British Rail. [27814]

Mr. Watts: This information could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport why the maintenance figure for the Railtrack route structure for the 10 years after flotation given in the Pathfinder prospectus is the same as expenditure by British Rail in its last 10 years. [27790]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 2 May 1996]: It is to be expected that the costs of maintenance of railway structures will be similar over time, given the long asset lives of the categories of asset concerned, which are preserved by ongoing maintenance and partial renewal and are rarely replaced in their entirety. Railtrack's asset maintenance plan for track and route structures, prepared with the assistance of W. S. Atkins, forecasts the expenditure considered to be necessary to sustain the operating capability of the relevant assets in accordance with Railtrack's operational policies and standards.

Fuel Rebate Duty

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the sums paid by his Department in each of the past five years in fuel rebate duty to (a) British Bus plc, (b) First Bus plc and (c) Stagecoach Holdings plc and its subsidiaries. [27612]

Mr. Norris: It would not be appropriate for the Government to disclose this information, which is regarded as commercially confidential, about private sector bus operators.

UK Fleet (Aid)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the advantages of giving financial aid to the United Kingdom fleet to encourage the employment of British ratings. [27613]

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 1 April, Official Report, column 32 to the hon. Member for South Antrim (Mr. Forsythe).

London Underground (Power Cut)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what were the conclusions of the quantified risk assessment undertaken in respect of the power failure on London underground on 6 April in respect of potential loss of life; [27811]

(2) what analysis had been conducted of the local power cables shortly before the power failure on London underground on 6 April; what was the estimated residual working life on those cables at that date; and what actions he plans to prevent a recurrence of the incident. [27812]

Mr. Norris: A report into the electrical failure on the London underground on 6 April will be placed in the Library once the investigation has been completed and a report for publication has been approved by London Underground Ltd.

Railtrack (Loans)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what purpose the loans of (a) £75 million on 5 March 1993, reference 2343E, (b) £100 million on 19 March 1993, reference 2344E, (c) £75 million on 25 March 1993, reference 2345E, (d) £100 million on 2 April 1993, reference 2346E, (e) £75 million on 19 April 1993, reference 2347E, (f) £75 million on 30 April 1993, reference 2348E, (g) £50 million on 2 July 1993, reference 2349E, (h) £50 million on 8 January 1993, reference 2342E and (i) £100 million on 29 May 1992, reference 2336E were made to the British Railways Board and then transferred to Railtrack; and for what reasons they are now to be written off under the Railways Act 1993 (Extinguishment of Loans) (Railtrack plc) Order 1996. [28106]

Mr. Watts: The loans listed were made for the purposes of section 19(2) of the Transport Act 1962 and transferred by a transfer scheme made for the purposes of section 85(3) of the Railways Act 1993. Liability for the loans was extinguished so that, in the private sector, Railtrack will have a capital structure—debt and equity—appropriate to give the best overall value to the Government and the taxpayer, and to enable Railtrack to finance the programme of expenditure outlined in its network management statement.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what value of loans was incurred by the British Railways Board and transferred to Railtrack and written off by the Railways Act 1993 (Extinguishment of Relevant Loans) (Railtrack plc) Order 1996; what value of Government stock Railtrack has been or will be obliged to buy to offset these loans; and if he will make a statement. [28105]

Mr. Watts: The sum of the liabilities extinguished by the Railways Act 1993 (Extinguishment of Relevant Loans) (Railtrack plc) Order 1996 is £1,229,418,952.18. The loans in question were all made to the British Railways Board and transferred to Railtrack. On 29 March 1996, Railtrack issued three debentures to Her Majesty's Government acknowledging indebtedness in the principal amount of £589 million.

Rail Bridges and Tunnels

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the life expectancy of existing rail bridges and tunnels. [27936]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack's route structures are preserved by ongoing maintenance and are rarely replaced in their entirety. Railtrack inspects its bridges and tunnels on a cyclical basis and maintains them as long as can be economically justified. Maintenance includes the replacement of component parts of the structure so that the life span of the entire structure is extended. Many bridges and tunnels dating from the very earliest days of railways in this country and abroad continue to give satisfactory service.

Railway Maintenance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what allowance was made in calculation of the costs of maintenance of the rail structure by W. S. Atkins for the backlog of inspections on maintenance left undone by British Rail. [27918]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack's asset maintenance plan for track and route structures, prepared with the assistance of W. S. Atkins, forecasts the expenditure considered to be necessary to sustain the operating capability of the relevant assets in accordance with Railtrack's operational policies and standards.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on the relevance of Bayesian probability theory to the maintenance costs of the rail structures, with particular reference to the allowance made in such analyses for the age of the asset and its condition; and what assessment he has made of the comparative value of (a) Bayesian analysis of cost estimates and (b) estimates based on inspection of the assets; [27935]

(2) what the estimated costs of maintenance of the rail structure were in the W. S. Atkin's report before and after refining by Bayesian probability theory. [27934]

Mr. Watts: Bayesian probability theory is an established modelling technique relevant to determining estimates of maintenance expenditure for rail and other structures. Independent expert consultants, W. S. Atkins, employed by railtrack to assist in the development of its asset maintenance plan—AMP—for track and route structures, used Bayesian statistical techniques in its analysis of data on the condition of certain assets, gained from sample surveys. The estimates in the Atkins report were derived from Bayesian analysis throughout for those assets to which it was applied.

Second Severn Crossing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) for what reasons the opening of the second Severn crossing will not take place until after the official opening ceremony; [27951]

(2) if he will arrange for the second Severn crossing to be open to traffic before the official opening ceremony. [27952]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 7 May 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the opening of the Second Severn Crossing.

The bridge cannot be opened to traffic until construction has been completed and the permit to use has been issued. This will be issued shortly before the official opening ceremony.

We intend to open the road to traffic as soon as is safely possible after the ceremony.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provision he will make for traffic diversions to circumnavigate the M49 pending its completion when the second Severn crossing opens. [228401]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Rhodri Morgan, dated 7 May 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question asking what arrangements are being made for traffic pending the completion of the new M49.

Traffic will continue to use the existing M5 to Junction 18 (Almondsbury) and the M4 until the M49, which will join the M5 (Junction 18) to the Second Severn Crossing at Pilning, is opened.

Northern Line

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with London Transport underground services, regarding the developments that are to take place on the Northern line, to ensure that there will be adequate alternative means of transport pending completion of the work; and if he will make a statement. [27962]

Mr. Norris: I have discussed with London Transport on several occasions the temporary closures on the Northern line to facilitate essential engineering works, including the alternative transport arrangements it is making.

Road Development (Greater London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the present approved and funded major road developments for the Greater London area. [27959]

Mr. Norris: The national trunk road schemes currently under construction in London area listed in table 2 of "Managing the trunk road programme", published by HMSO in November 1995. A copy of this publication can be found in the House of Commons Library.

The major local authority schemes currently under construction in London area are as follows:

Thamesmead Spine road (phase 4)

A206 Woolwich road improvement

Wealdston by-pass

A409 Sheepcot road

A402D Uxbridge town centre

Hounslow town centre

East Ham town centre by-pass

Strateford Gyratory modifications.

Driving Tests

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the present waiting time for driving tests in (a) Greater Manchester and (b) London; how many examiners have been moved on a temporary basis from Manchester to London; and for what reasons. [27958]

Mr. Norris: The average waiting time for a car test in Greater Manchester is currently 12 weeks. In Greater London, it is 16 weeks. During the period from 1 January to 28 June, 10 examiners have been, or are to be, transferred temporarily from Manchester to London for a total of 64 man weeks. The Driving Standards Agency regularly monitors waiting times to ensure that they do not vary radically between major conurbations in Great Britain. For example, if all examiners currently attached to London returned to their home centres, it is estimated that the waiting time in the capital would rise to 20 weeks.

MV Derbyshire

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons his Department has declined to form a formal partnership with the technical advisers to the Derbyshire Families Association. [28161]

Mr. Norris: We are considering the Derbyshire Family Association's—DFA—written request, received on 30 April, that the Department should form a formal partnership with the technical advisers to the DFA. When considering the DFA's request, we will have regard to a number of issues, including the reasons for mounting the return expedition and the position of other parties with a legitimate interest in the return.

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the cost of engaging technical experts to take part in the second survey of the MV Derbyshire wreckage field. [28162]

Mr. Norris: The independent technical assessors appointed to oversee the return expedition have to undertake a range of tasks including the planning and supervision of the return, assessment of the data obtained on site and completion of their report for submission to Ministers and the European Commission. The cost of engaging the assessors will depend on the amount of work they will have to do, including the time needed to assess and report on the data collected. No accurate assessment of the likely costs can yet be made.

"Transport: The Way Ahead"

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the cost to his Department of the consultation of "Transport: The Way Ahead." [28027]

Sir George Young: For the costs of compiling, publishing and distributing "Transport: The Way Ahead", I refer the hon. Lady to the reply my right hon. Friend the Member for Peterborough (Dr. Mawhinney) gave to the hon. Member for Derbyshire North-East (Mr. Barnes) on 22 June 1995, Official Report, column 360.

The further costs of Ministers and officials attending seminars and discussions, and analysing responses, cannot be separated from the running costs of the Department.

Employees' Rights

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provision is available to employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) child care allowances, (n) carers' leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [27597]

Mr. Norris: Each of the Department's executive agencies has delegated authority in all areas cited.

I have asked the chief executives of the agencies to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 7 May 1996:

I am responding on behalf of the Marine Safety Agency to your question to the Secretary of State for Transport about provision for maternity leave etc:

(a) Maternity Leave: There is provision for a total of 52 weeks paid and unpaid maternity leave provided that no more than 41 weeks are taken after the date of birth.

(b) Maternity Pay: There is provision for 18 weeks paid maternity leave—3 months 1 week at full pay and 4 weeks at the lower rate of statutory maternity pay.

(c) Paternity Leave: 2 days automatically—but up to 5 days if individual circumstances merit.

(d) Parental Leave: No specific provision—but up to 5 days may be granted to cover "urgent domestic distress".

(e) Flexible Working Hours: Available in all MSA offices.

(f) Part-Time Work: Requests are considered on an individual basis. There have been very few so far, and we have been able to meet the requests.

(g) Job Sharing: We have received no requests to date. If any are received, they will be considered on an individual basis and will be met if it is possible to do so.

(h) Leave Care for Sick Children: No specific provision—but see (d) above.

(i) Home-working: No provision.

(j) Term-Time Contracts: No provision.

(k) Annual Hours Contracts: No provision.

(l) Workplace Nurseries: No provision.

(m) Childcare Allowances: No provision.

(n) Carers' Leave: No provision.

(m) Career Breaks: Up to 5 years. To date, requests have been few, and all have been met.

All cases are treated individually and are assessed according to their own merits.

Letter from Derek Harvey to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 7 May 1996:

A copy of your question to the Secretary of State for Transport about certain conditions applicable to staff in the executive agencies within the Department of Transport has been passed to me so that I may answer you directly about the situation in VCA.

The VCA Framework Document does allow VCA delegated authority in all of the areas mentioned, however, the current position is as follows.

The provisions available to employees in VCA for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (g) job sharing, (h) leave care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) childcare allowances, (n) carer's leave and (o) career break schemes and the criteria used to judge eligibility in each case are the same as those applied in the Central Transport Group (CTG) of the Department, with one exception. In the case of (e) flexible working hours VCA have retained the old level of the maximum hours to be carried forward, whereas CTG now allow an additional 4 hours and 12 minutes to be carried forward.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from B. L. Herdan to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 7 May 1996:

I have been asked by the Secretary of State for Transport to reply directly to your Parliamentary Question, number PQ1905/95/96, which is for answer on 7 May 1996.

The Driving Standards Agency's delegated authority is to determine its policies in all the areas cited in your question, although in practice it currently follows the appropriate principles as set out in the Department of Transport's Staff Handbook.

There are fixed criteria for maternity leave and pay and flexible working hours arrangements.

Those other circumstances mentioned which involve types of leave, whether paid or unpaid, are not considered as automatic entitlements but as discretionary concessions. Applications are treated sympathetically, with consideration given to the needs of the Agency and whether the application is necessary and justified.

In relation to the provision of variable working patterns, namely part-time work, job sharing, home-working, term-time contracts and annual hours contracts, the Agency either already makes them available to, or is prepared to consider adopting them for, its employees.

Although the Agency does not at present provide workplace nurseries it will consider requests for financial assistance to operate them, or the granting of an allowance towards the funding of an individual employees proposed childcare arrangements during school holidays.

Letter from Ron Oliver to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 7 May 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to respond to your question on what provision is available to employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) childcare allowances, (n) carers' leave, and (o) career break schemes, and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case.

Further to Mr. Norris's Written Answer today, the information for the Vehicle Inspectorate is as follows:

(a) Maternity leave—minimum 18 weeks, maximum 52 weeks, dependent on length of service.

(b) Maternity pay—staff with at least one year's service may receive 3 months and one week's (or 14 weeks, if greater) full pay, followed by up to a further 4 weeks' Statutory Maternity Pay. Other staff will receive any statutory payments as appropriate.

(c) Paternity leave—2 days entitlement, with up to a further 3 days at the discretion of line managers.

(d) Parental leave—paid and unpaid special leave is available to staff who have adoption and fostering responsibilities, the number of days allowed by management depending on the circumstances of each case.

(e) Flexible working hours—the Inspectorate operates schemes for this, available to all staff employed in its Headquarters offices in Bristol and Swansea, and in its Legal and Prosecution Services Office in Cambridge. Customer service requirements preclude this, however, at Heavy Goods Vehicle Testing Stations and Road Transport Enforcement offices, where flexible working patterns are more prevalent (see below).

(f) Part-time work and (g) Job sharing—the Inspectorate encourages flexible working patterns wherever possible. About 13% of our workforce are either part-time, or job share.

(g) Leave to care for sick children—line managers may approve up to 5 days paid special leave for this. Beyond this, unpaid special leave can also be granted.

(h) Homeworking, Term-time contracts and Annual hours contracts—these arrangements are all available to Inspectorate staff, and requests are considered sympathetically against the exigencies of our business needs.

(i) Workplace nurseries—the Inspectorate makes no provision for these.

(j) Childcare allowances—the Inspectorate re-imburses staff for any additional childcare costs they might incur as a result of official business, attending training courses, etc.

(k) Carers' leave—staff may apply for up to 5 days special leave, with pay, to care for a sick relative. Unpaid leave can also be granted for longer term care and domestic responsibilities.

(l) Career breaks—up to 5 years special leave, without pay, can be granted for child-rearing, and full-time study. Requests are considered sympathetically, but approval is subject to the business needs of the Inspectorate, and the practicability of holding a post open for the intended period of absence.

Letter from Dr. S. J. Ford to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 7 May 1996:

As DVLA's Chief Executive I have been asked by the Secretary of State for Transport to write to you directly with the details in answer to your Parliamentary Question on a range of employee provisions.

For ease of reference I have set out the details in the attached table.

By way of background, you may wish to know that DVLA currently employs some 4,460 staff. Retention of trained, experienced staff helps to ensure that the Agency delivers a professional and efficient service to our customers. Initiatives and conditions which enable staff to combine their work and domestic responsibilities help to reduce loss of expertise. The Agency was named Employer of the Year by the Working Parents Association in 1994 in recognition of its development of family friendly initiatives and provision of support facilities.

I hope that this is helpful.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 7 May 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about Maternity leave.

The Coastguard Agency has not varied the terms and conditions of employment set out in the Department of Transport Staff Handbook. Copies of which are available to all staff.

Details on specific areas are covered in the annex attached.

Maternity Leave

The rules with regards Maternity leave vary depending on the contract the member of staff has with the Agency and the length of their reckonable service.

A member of staff with over a years service is entitled to a maximum of 18 weeks paid Maternity leave and a maximum of 34 weeks unpaid leave. However an employee may only take a maximum of 41 weeks leave, paid and unpaid, after the date of birth.

For staff with over 26 weeks reckonable service but under a year the maximum length of time changes to 18 weeks paid Maternity leave and 22 weeks unpaid leave of which a maximum of 29 weeks can be taken after the birth.

Staff with less than 26 weeks service 15 weeks before the expected week of birth are entitled to 18 weeks maternity leave, unpaid except for Maternity allowance paid for by Social Security, and a further 11 weeks unpaid.

An employee is entitled to 18 weeks paid Maternity leave, of which a maximum of 11 can be taken before the birth. Job-Sharing

The Agency does not currently employ anyone on a job share but would consider requests on their individual merits. All new posts are advertised as being open to applicants wishing to job share.

Leave Care for Sick Children

Special Leave with pay for 1–3 days (5 days in exceptional circumstances) is available for caring for a sick child.

Home-Working

The Agency does not have any officers who work on a regular basis from Home but would consider requests from staff on an individual basis.

The Agency will consider every case on its merits and where felt necessary additional special leave with or without pay may be granted.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the basis for his statements of 22 April, Scottish Grand Committee, Official Report, column 10, and Official Report, column 36; and what response he has had from the European Commission in respect of this matter. [27661]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 2 May 1996]: Since the onset of BSE, we have followed the best available scientific advice from the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee and introduced strict controls for the protection of public health. The World Health Organisation has endorsed our actions. All of this is on record. However, despite this independent scientific endorsement of the safety of British beef, the European Commission placed a complete ban on all beef-related exports to any part of the world. It has not offered any scientific justification for this and Commissioner Fischler has publicly stated:

"I would not hesitate to eat beef in England. I see no medical reason not to."

There is therefore no alternative valid interpretation to that offered by my right hon. Friend on 22 April.

Wind Farms

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what written objections he has received to proposals to develop wind farms at West Garty and Gartymore, Sutherland; and if he will make a statement. [27893]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has received a total of 355 letters about proposals to develop wind farms at West Garty and Gartymore, Sutherland. Of these, 10 support the proposal, with 345 opposed to the development. Those in favour cite the positive aspects of green energy whereas those against argue on grounds of environmental impact, noise, visual intrusion and concerns about restoration.

ENVIRONMENT

EU Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the directives which have affected his Department in each of the past three years and (a) the United Kingdom legislation introduced as a result of the directives, (b) the United Kingdom legislation which goes beyond the minimum standards set out in the directives, and (c) the clauses within each piece of United Kingdom legislation which amplify the minimum standards set out in the directives. [27084]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 29 April 1996]: The directives which have affected my Department in each of the past three years and the main UK legislation or measures introduced by my Department as a result are shown in the following table. (b) and (c) cannot be answered without incurring disproportionate cost.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of England in (a) area and (b) population is currently covered by unitary local authorities; and what the figures will be when the changes arising from the proposals of the local government commission have been implemented. [27434]

Sir Paul Beresford: At present 11 per cent. of the area and 43 per cent. of the population of England are covered by unitary local authorities, including London boroughs and metropolitan districts. Once all the structural changes which the Government have accepted have been implemented the percentages will be 16 per cent. and 54 per cent. respectively.

Battersea Power Station

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions are taking place, and with whom, on the future development of Battersea power station; and if he will make a statement. [27621]

Sir Paul Beresford: Discussions are continuing between Wandsworth council, English Heritage and consultants appointed by the owners on a master plan for the whole Battersea power station site. The Government would like to see the future development of this important site on the River Thames resolved as soon as possible.

Local Authorities (Out-of-court Payments)

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy in respect of out-of-court payments made by local authorities with special reference to the payment by Northumberland county council to a former employee, on the ground of stress in the performance of his job; what assessment he has made of whether such payments are a proper use of public funds; and if he will freeze this payment until it has been examined by the district auditor. [27645]

Mr. Curry: Following an award of damages by the courts against Northumberland county council, and prior to an appeal, the county council reached an out-of-court settlement with a former employee which was met by its insurers. The district auditor has no locus as regards payments met by insurers.

Refuse Tip (Attlebridge)

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the leaking of toxic and infected material from the refuse tip at Attlebridge in Norfolk. [27411]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 2 May 1996]: Responsibility for ensuring that the site at Attlebridge in Norfolk does not harm human health nor cause pollution of the environment now rests with the Environment Agency. The site is subject to a recent planning application and in view of the appellate role of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, I cannot comment on the merits of the application.

Housing (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many households were on the Coventry city council housing waiting list for each year since 1990; and how many are currently on the waiting list. [27906]

Mr. Clappison: Local authorities in England report the numbers of households on their housing waiting list at 1 April each year in their annual housing investment programme—HIP—returns.

The data reported by Coventry city council for each year since 1990 are as follows:

	Number of households on the waiting list
April 1990	6,984
April 1991	6,851
April 1992	8,664
April 1993	8,917
April 1994	7,690
April 1995	6,857

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many new (a) social dwellings and (b) specialised social dwellings he estimates Coventry will need in (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [27908]

Mr. Clappison: The Department does not prepare local estimates of the need for new social housing or specialised social homes. It is for local authorities to assess local housing needs and to identify these in their housing strategies.

Employees' Rights

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provision is available to employees of his Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) child care allowances, (n) carer's leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [27576]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department has a range of policies designed to help staff combine their career and domestic responsibilities. Full details are included in the terms and conditions of staff and set out in the Department's "Staff Handbook" or other published guidance. In some cases eligibility is statutory or automatic and in others an element of local management discretion is involved. I will write further to the hon. Member with full details and enclose the relevant extracts from the Department's guidance.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provision is available to employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) child care allowances, (n) carers leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [27577]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department's three executive agencies, the Planning Inspectorate, the Building Research Establishment and the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre, all provide a range of policies designed to help staff combine their career and domestic responsibilities. In most cases the initiatives follow the terms and conditions adopted for my Department's employees as set out in the Department's "Staff Handbook" and other published guidance. However, there are variations to take account of local circumstances in the individual agencies. I will write further to the hon. Member with the full details of the eligibility criteria and these variations.

Advertisements (Special Control)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many orders for areas of special control of advertisements have been approved since 1966; [27833]

(2) how many proposed orders for areas of special control of advertisements have been rejected since 1996, and on what grounds; [27834]

(3) if he will list the (a) district, (b) borough and (c) national park authority areas where approved areas of special control of advertisements exist, and specify those which are (i) district, (ii) borough and (iii) park-wide in extent. [27835]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The information is not readily available in the form requested. I am writing to the hon. Member with such information as we have.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the area of land covered by approved orders for areas of special control of advertisements, given (a) in total and (b) by district. [27836]

Mr. Jones: It is estimated that approximately 50 per cent. of the land area of England and Wales is subject to area of special control of advertisements designation. The area by district is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Enviornment if he will list the proposals for new orders for areas of special control of advertisements that he is currently considering. [27837]

Mr. Jones: No new orders for areas of special control of advertisements are currently before my right hon. Friend. He is currently considering modifications to existing orders in South Shropshire district council, Enfield London borough council and Vale Royal borough council.

North Sea (Protection)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the Government's proposals on the implementation of the ministerial declaration of the fourth international conference on the protection of the North sea. [27838]

Mr. Clappison: The Government are preparing a comprehensive United Kingdom guidance note on the implementation of the fourth North sea conference declaration, as has been the practice after previous North sea conferences. It will be published shortly.

Rural Development Areas

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list rural development areas, indicating when their boundaries last changed. [28155]

Mr. Clappison: A map of the Rural Development Commission's priority rural development areas can be found in the commission's 1995 corporate plan, a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library. The current areas are as follows:

Cambridgeshire
Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly
Cumbria
Devon
Doncaster
Dorset
Durham
East Riding of Yorkshire and North Lincolnshire (ex Humberside)
East Sussex
Essex
Gloucestershire
Hereford and Worcester
Isle of Wight
Kent
Lancashire
Lincolnshire
Norfolk
North East Derbyshire
North Yorkshire
Northumberland
Nottinghamshire
North West Leicestershire and South Derbyshire
Redcar and Cleveland (ex Cleveland)
Rotherham
Shropshire
Somerset
Staffordshire
Suffolk
West Derbyshire
West Yorkshire
Wiltshire.

The commission carried out a comprehensive review of its rural development areas during 1992–93. The current boundaries became effective on 1 April 1994.

Cetaceans (Protection)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action the Government plan to take to protect cetaceans from pollution and other environmental damage; and if he will make a statement. [28126]

Mr. Clappison: The Government are committed to the protection of the marine environment, and play an active role in international fora aimed of conserving cetacean numbers.

Although direct evidence of adverse effects from chemical pollution and climate change is scarce, the UK is participating in discussions, initiated by the International Whaling Commission, to consider the effects of both of these processes.

The Government have also recently played a major role in developing protocols aimed at tackling persistent air borne and land sourced organic pollutants in collaboration with the UN Economic Commission for Europe and the UN environment programme.

Rural Development Commission

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the cost of the Rural Development Commission's business advisers in each year since it began. [28148]

Mr. Clappison: The Rural Development Commission regionalised its operations and set up dedicated teams of business advisers, working primarily within the commission's priority rural development areas, in 1990. Since 1995 business advisers have operated exclusively in these areas. The cost of business advisers prior to 1990 is contained within the general running costs of the commission and cannot be disaggregated. The commission's expenditure on business advisers in the years 1990–91 to 1995–96 are as follows:

1990–91	2.80
1992–93	2.13
1993–94	2.35
1994–95	1.82
1995–96	0.87

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current value of the Rural Development Commission's small firms loan fund. [28149]

Mr. Clappison: The net book value of the commission's loan fund, after allowing for provision of unrecoverable loans, is as follows:

	£ million
At 31 March 1994	15.261
At 31 March 1995	15.306
At 31 March 1996	14.814
Estimated 31 March 1997	14.104

Local Government Finance

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to make an announcement on challenge funding of local authority capital. [27975]

Sir Paul Beresford: An announcement will be made shortly.

Housing Associations

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many new rented homes housing associations will be able to start in 1996; and what were the figures for each of the past three years. [28071]

Mr. Clappison: Figures covering the last three years showing the number of project approvals made for new housing association rented accommodation in England areas follows:

Project approvals for rented housing: self contained and shared accommodation

	Housing Corporation HAG funded units	Local authority HAG funded units	Total HAG funded units
1993–94	43,857	19,226	63,083
1995–96	23,792	11,394	35,186

These figures cover new rented accommodation provided through a new build and the purchase and rehabilitation of existing properties. In addition, over this period, the Housing Corporation has also approved home ownership incentive schemes which release existing social rented homes for reletting.

The Housing Corporation's approved development programme for 1996–97, which excludes local authority HAG, provides for between 21,300 and 26,100 project approvals for new rented housing in England. In addition, the Housing Corporation estimates that there will be a further 18,500 to 21,700 ADP approvals in 1996–97 including home ownership incentive schemes. Additional lettings will result from local authority support for housing associations.

Marine Pollution

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps the Government have taken to date to implement the United Nations environment programme's programme of action on land-based sources of marine pollution; and what further action is planned. [28122]

Mr. Clappison: I refer the hon. Member to my written reply of 25 March 1996 to the hon. Member for Ceredigion and Pembroke, North (Mr. Dafis), Official Report, column 535.

Persistent Organic Pollutants

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the Government's policy in respect of a global ban on persistent organic pollutants. [28125]

Mr. Clappison: The United Kingdom has played a major role in developing a proposed protocol on persistent organic pollutants under the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe convention on long range transboundary air pollution. Furthermore, the Government support the United Nations environment programme initiative to build on this work to achieve a global, legally binding treaty and will play an active role.

The development of such protocols, involves the careful identification of potential persistent organic pollutants, their assessment and a consideration of the most appropriate action to take to control the identified risk. This will not always result in a total ban. In some cases, there may be an essential use of a substance which should be preserved, where safer and effective substitutes may not be available. Each substance identified as a persistent organic pollutant will have to be judged on its own merit.

Business Subsidies

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the grants and loans provided by his Department to businesses, together with the criteria they have to meet in order to obtain the subsidy. [28182]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department provides grants directly to businesses under the following schemes:

- Single regeneration budget challenge fund
- City challenge
- Regional enterprise grant
- Environmental technology innovation scheme (now closed to new applications)
- Small company environmental and energy management assistance scheme
- Grants under the Water Industry Act 1991 towards national security measures in the water industry
- Grants under the Industrial Development Act 1982 towards water and sewerage infrastructure in assisted areas
- Grants under the Water Industry Act 1991 towards rural water and sewerage projects.

The Department does not provide any loans directly to businesses.

There are no overarching criteria for the above grant schemes; the criteria for each scheme are dependent on it's individual aims and objectives. However, all recipients have to satisfy the Department that their application offers value for money and that there will be satisfactory controls over the funds received. Any business which would wish to apply for a grant or a loan under one of the above schemes can find out the specific criteria it would need to satisfy by contacting my Department.

The grants listed are paid directly by the Department of the Environment to businesses. In addition, the Department also funds other bodies, including local authorities and non-departmental public bodies, who will themselves support businesses through grants and loans.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the outcome of the meeting of the United Kingdom round table on sustainable development held on 25 April; and if he will make a statement. [28295]

Mr. Gummer: At its 25 April meeting, the round table approved a report on defining a sustainable transport sector, which will be published shortly. It also had a preliminary discussion with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport about the Green Paper "Transport—The Way Forward" published that day. The meeting agreed to begin work on four new projects:

intermodal transport, both passenger and freight;

land use planning controls over energy developments;

water resources; and housing and sustainability.

On 19 April, the round table published its first annual report. This describes all the work that is completed or under way.

Packaging

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how the European Community directive on packaging and packaging waste will be implemented; and if he will make a statement. [28443]

Mr. Gummer: As part of its commitment to achieve sustainable development, it is Government policy to encourage the recovery of value from waste wherever that is practicable. To this end it is desirable that more of the real environmental costs of waste production and disposal should be borne by the producers of that waste directly. This creates a stronger market incentive for companies both to reduce waste in the first place, and then to find cost effective ways of recycling or otherwise recovering unavoidable waste. The Government's objective should be to establish a policy framework within which the efficiency and innovativeness of the market can be harnessed to solve environmental problems. Producer responsibility does that; it makes the market work to the benefit of the environment.

Industries concerned with packaging—those who manufacture and use the packaging which ends up as waste, including retailers—have been particularly resourceful in their response to the challenge of producer responsibility. Eight million tonnes of packaging waste are produced each year, and in response to the Government's invitation the industry's producer responsibility group put forward its own proposals to recover and recycle 58 per cent. of United Kingdom's packaging waste by 2001. It proposed that this should be achieved through the creation of one or more industry financed and managed organisations which would invest in a variety of waste recovery projects. The prototype recovery organisation is now being established as VALPAK. However the industry made clear that these schemes would be established only if there were effective legislation to deter free riders. The Government accepted this industry view and invited comments on a range of possible legal obligations which could achieve a framework in which competing companies could operate and which would enable the Government to implement the EC directive on packaging and packaging waste.

In responding to the different options for a legal obligation, the great majority of business organisations indicated a strong belief that the primary objective of meeting the UK's recovery and recycling targets could be secured only if all the major players had an incentive to co-operate through a shared legal obligation. This would also create the most favourable conditions for formation of cross-sectoral collective industry schemes, which many businesses have indicated is their preferred approach to meeting these targets.

Further work took place to develop a form of shared approach which could both provide assurance to Government that the necessary targets would be met while also providing an acceptable basis for apportioning the obligation between the different stages of the packaging chain. Final agreement on such a basis and its supporting principles was achieved on 15 December 1995 at a meeting chaired by Sir Peter Parker and attended by 30 of the leading businesses involved.

This has not been the approach in some other EU member states. Some have proposed a packaging tax and others have legislated for a "take back" requirement upon shops and business premises to receive back from consumers all of the sales packaging around products sold. These approaches provide less flexibility for affected businesses and do little to create the new markets for recycled materials which is essential in the long term. Indeed some schemes in some other states have had a damaging impact on reprocessing and manufacturing activity in the UK and the rest of the Union and it was for that reason that industry pressed for a single market framework which we then successfully negotiated in the form of the directive.

By contrast with some of these other approaches, the UK Government place a high priority on implementing producer responsibility in a way which the UK industry itself feels can be operated effectively. This will help to minimise the burden upon individual companies, maximise their freedom to choose how to meet their targets, and thereby make our environmental objectives more readily attainable.

I am therefore announcing today that the Government have accepted the industry view that a shared legal obligation is the right way forward. I am now satisfied that this approach will enable us to meet the environmental standards which people increasingly expect industry to adopt, which our national commitment to sustainable development requires of us, and which would achieve the flexible targets which we successfully negotiated within the EU's packaging directive. In the near future I propose to publish draft regulations under the Environment Act 1995 that will give effect to 15 December agreement and to guide this process I recently asked Sir Peter Parker to chair an advisory committee comprising some of the senior business representatives most closely involved in developing producer responsibility for packaging. I am announcing separately the terms of reference, membership and initial tasks of the advisory committee and its future role in monitoring and reviewing the operation of the regulations.

In the light of the work already undertaken by the committee on implementation of the 15 December agreement, I propose to include in the draft regulations the following elements:

(i) A method of calculation of individual business or scheme obligations. Any business covered by the regulations will need to be able to work out what its recycling and recovery obligation would be, so as to decide whether to perform that on its own or join a collective scheme. The business would need to measure the tonnage of packaging which it manufactures or fills or sells or supplies. It would then apply the following percentages which, on current data and assumptions, are consistent with the 15 December agreement.

	Per cent.
Packaging raw material manufacture	6
Conversion	11
Packing and filling	36
Retailing/supplying	47

Importers would be treated on a comparable basis.

(ii) A phased approach to meeting the targets:

an initial requirement, from 1996, for businesses or collective schemes to provide data and information to the Environment Agency; a second stage requirement, from 1998, to provide evidence that recycling and recovery is being achieved, initially to 1998 targets and then the full directive targets in 2001.

(iii) A cut off by which businesses using less than 50 tonnes packaging a year would be exempt from the quantified legal obligation (it is estimated that 90 per cent. of businesses—which account for less than 10 per cent. of total packaging—would be below this threshold). Further consideration is being given to other means by which such businesses could help to contribute to higher levels of recycling and recovery.

This approach is intended to give businesses as much flexibility as possible, particularly in the early years, and create confidence that the targets will be achieved. In consulting on the regulations we will be seeking further business views on costs and practicality of the systems proposed so as to minimise compliance costs and limit the regulatory framework to the minimum.

The industry now needs to turn its attention to developing more detailed plans for the formation of industry-led collective exemption schemes, such as VALPAK. Such schemes will need to satisfy UK and EC competition criteria. Many, if not most, businesses will no doubt continue to feel that participation in such schemes provides the simplest and cheapest means of meeting their obligations.

The producer responsibility initiative marks important new ground in environmental policy-making and provides a remarkable example of effective Government-industry collaboration. A shared approach to our national war on waste will boost recycling across the country, foster many new ways of putting waste to work and maximise our recovery of scarce resources. A new market will be created, and the environment will be a chief beneficiary. I pay tribute to the many individuals and companies from all sectors of the packaging chain who by rising to this demanding challenge have played an important part in putting the nation on the path to sustainable development.

Housing

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much expenditure was incurred by (a) the Housing Corporation and (b) the local authority in relation to each of the proposals for a transfer of tenanted council housing in Torquay to another landlord since 1988; and what were the numbers and percentages of tenants voting (i) for and (ii) against each proposal. [11714]

Mr. Curry [pursuant to his reply, 29 January, Official Report columns 578–79]: The figure for the Housing Corporation's total grant spend on the Torbay Tenants' housing association should have been £1,869,306, less repayments of £49,074, giving a net figure of £1,820,232.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the total cost to public funds to date of the tenants' advice scheme set up under part IV of the Housing Act 1988 with particular reference to (a) setting up costs incurred by his Department and the Housing Corporation, (b) publicity and promotional expenditure, (c) annual revenue expenditure incurred by the Housing Corporation in each year since 1988, (d) grants to tenants organisations and others and (e) any other expenditure. [11715]

Mr. Curry [pursuant to his reply 29 January, Official Report column 579]: The figure for the Housing Corporation's total grant spend in support of tenants' choice cases should have been £4,203,574, less repayments of £76,381, given a net total of £4,127,193.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Employees' Rights

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what provision is available to employees of his Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) child care allowances, (n) carers' leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case; [27582]

(2) what provision is available to employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-timework, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) child care allowances, (n) carers' leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [27583]

Mr. Howard: These provisions are set out in the departmental staff handbook—a copy of which is in the Library—which details conditions of service for all Home Office employees, apart from those in the Prison Service. A staff handbook will be issued shortly for Prison Service employees. There is no written guidance on term-time or annual hours contracts, but these would be considered, subject to operational requirements, as the need arose.

Immigration Service

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was paid to consultants Touche Ross to evaluate the immigration services staff rotas; and if he will make a statement. [27924]

Mr. Kirkhope: Fees payable to private sector consultants by the public services are treated as commercial confidential and are not normally disclosed.

Prison Staff (Convictions)

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (i) prison governors and (ii) prison officers have convictions for (a) indecent assault, (b) other crimes against the person and (c) other offences; and if he will make a statement. [27448]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 April 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Roger Berry dated 7 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to your recent Question about prison governors and prison officers convicted of criminal offences.

Centrally held figures relate to the period since 1990. The figures set out in the table below relate to convictions over the period March 1990 to March 1996.

Staff currently serving	Indecent assault	Other crimes against the person	Other offences
Prison governors	1	0	1
Prison officers	0	14	108

The Prison Service takes the conviction of any of its staff for any criminal offence very seriously and can take action under its own code of conduct and discipline. Where a member of staff is found guilty of a serious offence, the normal outcome would be dismissal from the Service. Lesser offences may also, depending on the circumstances, result in dismissal or may result in other penalties such as written warnings, loss of promotion opportunities or pay.

In the cases listed, the 'other crimes against the person' are all cases of actual bodily harm. These offences largely relate to domestic disputes. 'Other offences' include first time drink/driving convictions, speeding, fishing without a licence, letting a dog worry sheep etc.

Departmental Posts (Losses)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many posts he estimates will be lost at the Home Office during the next three financial years; from which units they will come; and if he will make a statement. [27929]

Mr. Howard: Planned staff numbers in the Home Office and its agencies are set out in annex 4 of my Department's annual report CM 3208 published in March, a copy of which is in the Library.

Permanent staff numbers are projected to fall by 1,045 between 1995–96 and 1998–99, of which 705 are in the Prison Service.

Proxy Votes

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence he has assessed on the abuse of proxy votes; and if he will make a statement. [27862]

Mr. Sackville: There is no recent evidence to suggest that abuse of the proxy voting system is either systematic or widespread. Application forms relating to absent votes were amended in 1994; electors now have to indicate clearly whether they are applying to vote by post or by proxy, and all appointments of a proxy must be signed by the elector.

Doncaster Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the areas where Doncaster prison has performed to a higher standard than other private prisons since it opened. [27614]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 7 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the areas where Doncaster prison has performed to a higher standard in relation to the other contracted-out prisons.

There is no proposal to make a qualitative evaluation of Doncaster prison's performance against that of any of the other contractually-managed prisons. This is because the factors that influence performance, which include size, function and population mix, are such as to make direct comparison difficult.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the key performance indicators for the running of Doncaster prison; and if he will list the statistics in respect of which performance indicators have been met since the prison opened. [27617]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 7 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General, to reply to your recent Question about key performance indicators for the running of Doncaster prison.

Key performance indicators are specified in the contract, relating to the following areas of operation:

(1) Escapes from the prison. The contract requires that there should be no more than two by the end of the first year of operation, and no more than one in each subsequent year. There was one escape from Doncaster prison in the first year of operation, and there has been none since.

(2) Escapes from escort. The contract requires that there should be no more than eight escapes from escort in any of the first three years of the contract. There have been no escapes.

(3) Time out of cell. The requirement of a minimum 12 hours per day for prisoners on normal location has been met.

(4) Positive regimes. The contract requires the availability of at least 12 hours of regime activities, including education, for prisoners on normal location, and also the availability of at least 6 hours per week of education and training for adult prisoners, and 15 for young prisoners under 17. These targets have been achieved.

(5) Visits. The contract requirement is for the statutory minimum for visits as set out in Prison Rules. This requirement has been exceeded at Doncaster prison.

(6) Grievances. The contract requires that 90 per cent of grievances capable of resolution at prison level, be resolved within seven working days. The level achieved for the first contractual year was 95 per cent, and the level for the current contractual year is running at 100 per cent.

(7) Assaults. The contract required no more than 148 assaults on prisoners, and no more than 77 assaults on staff by the end of the first year of operation. For the second year, a level of 215 assaults has been set. The total number of assaults for the first contractual year was 221, and is projected to be 154 for the current year.

In addition to the contractual requirements, the performance of Doncaster prison is measured against the Service-wide key performance indicators. These figures are provided in the Prison Service Annual Reports.

Mr. Redmond; To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the security cameras currently operating at Doncaster prison are constantly monitored; how many officers are on duty per shift monitoring the security camera; how many security cameras are in operation at any one time; and for how long the videotape recordings made by the cameras are stored. [27618]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 7 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about whether the security cameras currently operating at Doncaster prison are constantly monitored; how many officers are on duty per shift monitoring the security cameras; how many security cameras are in operation at any one time; and for how long the videotape recordings made by the camera are stored.

The security cameras are constantly monitored and have videotape facilities. Doncaster prison holds high risk prisoners and I am sure that you will understand that to provide the remaining information which you have requested might prejudice security at the prison.

Prison Service Health Research

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the nature of all (a) medical and (b) health care research currently being undertaken within the Prison Service for each United Kingdom prison. [27616]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Brian Landers to Mr. Martin Redmond dated 7 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about (a) medical and (b) health care research currently being undertaken within the Prison Service for each United Kingdom prison.

The Directorate of Health Care for the Prison Service in England and Wales holds a central register of medical and health care research receiving central support and approved by the independent Prison Service Health Research Ethics Committee. The attached list sets out the centrally approved and supported projects recorded on the central database as currently in progress.

Information on local studies, approved by the governor of an establishment and a recognised Research Ethics Committee, is not notified to the Directorate of Health Care in all cases and could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

The situation in Scotland and Northern Ireland is a matter for the respective Departments.

Prison Service Health Research Ethics Committee approved Medical and Health Care Research Projects receiving central funding

Assessment of the needs and best management of severely behaviourially disturbed young offenders at Aylesbury young offenders institution;

Evaluation of a pilot scheme for the contracting-our of Genito-Urinary Medicine services to the NHS by Wormwood Scrubs, Brixton and Wandsworth prisons;

Evaluation of the drugs rehabilitation programmes implemented in 22 prisons under phase 1 of the Prison Service Strategy for Drugs;

Analysis of the doctor patient relationship in the prison setting. Four sample prisons are in the process of selection;

Assessment of throughcare arrangements and needs for prisoners with a history of mental illness discharged from prison direct to the community—Yorkshire prisons;

Evaluation of a project jointly funded by the Department of Health and the MACA for development of care plans prior to release of mentally disordered prisoners—Leicestershire prisons;

A study into the effect of the application of section 48 of the Mental Health Act 1983. This involves central records without the direct involvement of establishments.

Prisons (Drugs)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prisons in England and Wales that have been rendered free of illegal drugs following the implementation of Government policy; and if he will make a statement. [27620]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 7 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about prisons in England and Wales that have been rendered free of illegal drugs following the implementation of Government policy.

Mandatory drug testing has been implemented in all prisons, on schedule, by 31 March. The data it will yield will provide, over time, a good indicator of the level and patterns of drug misuse in prisons. But, because the random testing programme involves the testing of only 10 per cent. of a prison's population each month, even when all these tests prove negative it will not be safe to claim that a prison is free of drug misuse.

Prison Service Budget

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the chief inspector of prisons about the planned reductions in the prison service budget; and what action he has taken in response. [27858]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked for a reply to be given.

Letter from Brian Landers to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 7 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about representations from the Chief Inspector of Prisons about the planned reductions in the Prison Service budget; and what action has been taken in response.

There are regular contacts between the Chief Inspector, Home Office Ministers and the Prison Service on a wide range of issues, including cost reduction, which affect the Service as a whole and individual prison establishments. The Director General has told Sir David Ramsbotham that he has advised governors of the importance of maintaining the balance between essential security and control measures, constructive and effective regimes for prisoners and providing support for staff. The emphasis is on reducing costs and not reducing the amount of purposeful activity for prisoners; and resources should continue to be given to those programmes which help prisoners to address their offending behaviour.

Life Sentences

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time served by prisoners who have received mandatory life sentences before release on licence. [27717]

Miss Widdecombe: The available information is published in "Prison statistics, England and Wales",—table 8.5 of the 1994 edition, (Cm 3087). A copy of this publication is in the Library.

Office Space

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the square footage and cost of office space rented by his Department and its agencies and the number of his Department or agencies' buildings partly, or fully unoccupied together with the square footage of that unoccupied office space and its estimated rental value where available in each of the past five financial years. [27726]

Mr. Howard: The Home Office assumed accountability for all the offices in which it had occupations, including any vacant space therein from 1 April 1996. Prior to this date, the whole of the Government common user (office) estate—CUE—in which Government Departments were housed was owned by Property Holdings. The part of the question requesting figures for the last five financial years is, therefore, a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

As at 1 April 1996, the Home Office had no totally unoccupied office buildings, and only 10 with some vacant space. This vacant space amounted to 92,429 sq ft which comprised less than 1 per cent. of the total Home Office non-prison estate. The estimated annual rental cost of this vacant space is £205,000.

Special Constables

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money his Department spent on advertising campaigns to recruit special constables in each year from 1991–92 to 1995–96.[28204]

Mr. Howard: Expenditure by the Home Office on advertising to recruit special constables in each year from 1991–92 to 1995–96 was as follows:

Financial year	£000
1991–92	875
1992–93	1,060
1993–94	1,460
1994–95	2,800
1995–96	2,300

Prisoners (Education and Training)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours of education and training for prisoners have been budgeted for in the Prison Service in the current financial year. [27924]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mrs. Anne Campbell, dated 7 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of hours of education and training budgeted for in the current financial year.

Each prison governor has a single budget for the running of the establishment. The allocation of funds will be determined by local circumstances, reflected in the business plan agreed with the area manager. Governors have been asked to report their initial spending plans for 1996–97 to the Prison Service Financial Support Section, and a preliminary forecast of the anticipated expenditure on education and training should be available towards the end of May or in early June.

Governors purchase teacher contact hours from their education provider at an agreed price per teacher contact hour. Contract prices are unique to each establishment, and the price per contract hour depends on the number of teacher contact hours ordered. There are also discount arrangements in some circumstances. It is, therefore, not possible to forecast the number of teaching hours to be ordered from the preliminary forecast of expenditure.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were on remand at the latest available date categorised by their alleged offences. [28109]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Brian Landers to Mr. Ian Pearson, dated 7 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking how many prisoners were on remand at the latest available date, categorised by their alleged offences.

Provisional information on the number of remand prisoners held in Prison Service establishments on 31 March 1996, by offence, is given in the attached table.

Population of untried and convicted unsentenced prisoners in Prison Service establishments on 31 March 1996[1]; by offence

	Number
Violence against the person	2,105
Sexual offences	514
Burglary	2,118
Robbery	1,086
Theft and handling	1,636
Fraud and forgery	188
Drugs offences	1,109
Other offences	1,578
Offence not recorded	678
All offences	11,012

[1] Figures are provisional.

Grants and Loans

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the grants and loans provided by his Department to businesses, together with the criteria they have to meet in order to obtain the subsidy. [28190]

Mr. Howard: My Department does not make grants and loans to businesses in the private sector.

Asylum and Immigration Bill (Small Firms)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the extra work that will be imposed on small firms by measures in the Asylum and Immigration Bill. [28150]

Miss Widdecombe: We do not expect that our proposals on the prevention of illegal working will affect small businesses disproportionately. We intend to keep the burden on all employers to a minimum, and will have this in mind in the preparation of guidance. The responses to our consultation document and compliance cost assessment lead us to think that the compliance costs for small business will, in the main, be minimal.

Mentally Disordered Offenders

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish further details of his proposals for the sentencing and supervision of mentally disordered offenders as set out in chapter 8 of the White Paper, "Protecting the Public: the Government's Strategy on Crime in England and Wales." [28462]

Mr. Howard: I have today placed in the Library copies of a consultation document, "Mentally Disordered Offenders: Sentencing and Discharge Arrangements". The consultation period on the document lasts until 30 June 1996.

Terrorism (Video Cameras)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he received recommendations from the City of London police to site video cameras at Stranraer, Holyhead and Fishguard, as part of security operations to counter the Provisional IRA; and what plans he has to commission video cameras at these points. [27240]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 1 May 1996]: Advice on the introduction of closed circuit television cameras at ports across the country has been provided by the Association of Chief Police Officers, not the city of London police. Funding and guidance on the installation of CCTV has been provided by the ACPO advisory group since June 1994, and cameras were operational at Stranraer, Holyhead and Fishguard by March 1995.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 184, from whom the Licencing Authority received a manuscript of the transnational study before the meeting of the Committee on Safety of Medicines of 13 October 1995. [28436]

Mr. Malone: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 19 December 1995, columns 1149 and 1153.

Raffle Tickets

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of commercial companies that print and sell tickets and otherwise administer draws and raffles on behalf of registered charities. [27336]

Mr. Sproat: I have been asked to reply.

None.

Responsibility for charities and the voluntary sector was passed from my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for National Heritage on 1 May 1996.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Iran

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the response of the United Kingdom and the EU to the report of the UN rapporteur on religious intolerance, Mr. Abdel Fattah Amor, on the execution of Protestant leaders in Iran; what has been the outcome to this response; and if he will make a statement. [27856]

Mr. Hanley: We welcome Mr. Amor's report. Our views on the trial of those accused of killing the three Christian pastors in Iran were set out in my reply of 4 December 1995. In the light of Mr. Amor's report and the reports of the UN special rapporteur, Mr. Hussain, and the UN special representative, Mr. Copithorne, the European Union co-sponsored a resolution critical of Iran at the UN Commission on Human Rights. The resolution, adopted on 24 April 1996, expressed concern at Iran's failure to meet international standards on the administration of justice and the lack of adequate protection for Christian minorities. We will continue to maintain pressure on Iran to do more to protect the rights of religious minorities.

Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had, and with which bodies, on the Council of Europe Cuco report on the Turkish settlers living in occupied northern Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [27619]

Mr. David Davis: We have had no discussions on this report since exchanging views at the Council of Europe Ministers' Deputies meetings in December 1992 and March 1993.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had, and with whom, regarding the military airfield in Turkish-occupied Cyprus at Lefkoniko; and what use is made of this airfield. [27635]

Mr. Davis: None. Lefkoniko is not a military airfield. It is a small civil airport used for one month each year when the main airport in northern Cyprus is closed for repair and renovation, or when flights are diverted.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what replies he has received from the high commissioner in Cyprus on the establishment of an Islamic fundamentalist party in the Turkish Cypriot-occupied area of northern Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [27897]

Mr. Davis: In early December 1995, there were reports in the Turkish Cypriot press of plans to found an Islamic party. We have seen no evidence that such a party has been established.

Office Space

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the square footage and cost of office space rented by his Department and its agencies and the number of his Department or agencies' buildings partly, or fully occupied together with the square footage of that unoccupied office space and its estimated rental value where available in each of the past five financial years. [27728]

Mr. Hanley: The square footage and cost, including VAT, of rented space, by both wings of the FCO and its agencies in the United Kingdom over the last five financial year are as follows:

	Square footage	Cost £
1991–92	357774	9,759,695.90
1992–93	357774	9,759,695.90
1993–94	357774	10,137,292.12
1994–95	362924	9,729,174.43
1995–96	355327	9,161,664.81

The FCO also occupies Crown freehold properties. None of the leased buildings were partially or totally unoccupied during the period.

Russia

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he is making to the Russian Government about the use of the death penalty in that country. [28120]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We have made no representation to the Russian Government about the use of the death penalty. It is an issue we continue to monitor closely.

Kashmir

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had and with whom on elections in the Indian-occupied area of Kashmir, with particular reference to (a) the involvement of the military forces now stationed in this area and (b) the quality of the candidates; and if he will make a statement. [28024]

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary and I have had discussions with a wide range of people, including officials, Members of Parliament and others on the various aspects of the forthcoming parliamentary elections in Jammu and Kashmir. The need to develop a genuine political process remains an important part our long-standing policy on Kashmir. Elections can contribute to that process.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the British high commissioners for India and Pakistan regarding the proposed elections to take place in Indian-controlled Kashmir; and if he will make a statement. [27946]

Mr. Hanley: Our high commissioners in New Delhi and Islamabad report regularly on developments concerning Kashmir, including the forthcoming parliamentary election. I discussed Kashmir with them during my recent visits to India and Pakistan.

British Council

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's policy concerning the British Council; and if he will make a statement. [28073]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to my closing statement in the Adjournment debate on the British Council in 1 May, Official Report, columns 1097–1102.

Ambassadorial Posts (Women)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the number of women in ambassadorial posts in (a) 1986, (b) 1991 and (c) on the latest available figures. [27375]

Mr. Hanley: The number of women in ambassadorial posts is as follows:

(a) 1986: 1

(b) 1991: 2

(c) 1996: 8.

Senior Departmental Posts (Women)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the policies adopted by his Department in order to encourage more women into senior positions within his Department. [27376]

Mr. Hanley: We have an action programme in place to ensure equality of access to recruitment, training, career development and promotion for all women. Graduate recruitment into the fast stream is particularly targeted to help redress the under-representation of women at senior grade level, and 57 per cent. of the 1995 fast stream intake were women. We encourage the retention of women through a number of initiatives including flexible/part-time work, job sharing, career breaks of up to five years, subsidised nursery facilities and holiday play schemes for school children. The FCO has been a member of the national opportunity 2000 campaign since 1992.

Employees' Rights

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what provision is available to employees of his Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) child care allowances, (n) carers' leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [27578]

Mr. Hanley: Provisions of employees of the FCO and its executive agencies are as follows.

(a) Maternity leave and (b) Maternity pay

There are three elements:

Paid maternity leave (MATL)

Statutory maternity pay (SMP)

Unpaid maternity leave (MUPL)

Three months plus one week on full salary, in one continuous period to include the date of confinement, the criteria being that the officer:

is not employed on a casual, standby or short notice appointment, or on a fixed-term appointment of less than two years has been employed by the civil service for at least one year and is not on extended unpaid leave immediately before maternity leave would start intends to return to work after the confinement agrees in writing to repay payments for maternity leave if she does not return to work.

SMP

Paid for 18 weeks, although for those eligible for MATL 14 weeks of this would be offset by full pay, providing the officer is serving in the United Kingdom.

MUPL

An officer may take unpaid maternity leave subject to the total period of MATL, SMP and MUPL not exceeding 52 weeks. In addition employees can apply for further special unpaid leave up to a maximum of five years.

(c) Paternity leave

Two days to be taken at the time of confinement, or during the weeks immediately afterwards.

(d) Parental leave

Special leave with pay may be authorised to arrange an adoption and care for a newly adopted child.

(e) Flexible working hours

A flexible working hours—FWH—scheme is in operation, though not in overseas posts.

In the FCO heads of Department have discretion to operate the scheme in their Department or in sections of it. Any established or casual—minimum three months' contract—non-industrial member of staff can opt to join an operating FWH scheme.

In the Overseas Development Administration, a FWH scheme is available to all permanent UK staff.

(f) Part-time work and (g) Job sharing

Both are available to all staff serving in the UK and any requests are considered within the constraints of operational requirements.

(h) Leave to care for sick children

Up to one week's leave may be granted for the short-term care at home of sick children. For longer-term care staff can apply for up to 5 years' special unpaid leave.

(i) Home working

Home working is permitted; each application is considered individually, taking account of the reasons for the request, security implications and operational requirements.

(j) Term time contracts and (k) Annual hours contracts

No such contracts are in operation.

(l) Workplace nurseries

The FCO subsidises 10 places at a nursery run by the Westminster Children's Society for children from 6 months to 5 years. There is an on-site nursery at the FCO's Hanslope park site. The FCO and ODA use the Westminster holiday playscheme for children from five to 12 years. The ODA provides one of the sites for the holiday playscheme but does not offer nursery provision. The ODA's Scottish headquarters operates a playscheme for children aged five to 14 years.

(m) Child care allowances

In the FCO child care allowances are not paid to staff serving in the UK. For staff serving overseas there is an element in the cost of living and representational allowances to compensate for any increased childcare costs. The level of provision is calculated by an allowances inspector on the basis of local costs and the needs of the job.

In the ODA officers can claim reimbursement of additional child care expenses necessarily incurred as a result of their: attending a residential training courses; travelling for the office on a short-term visit; or attending a training course on a day on which they do not usually work.

(n) Carers' leave

Up to one week's leave may be granted for the serious illness of a relative or dependent, or for the short-term care at home of a close relative or dependent. For longer-term care staff can apply for up to five years' special unpaid leave.

(o) Career break schemes

Special unpaid leave for a maximum of five years in aggregate. Each application is considered on its merits.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what provision is available to employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) child care allowances, (n) carers' leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [27579]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to my previous answer.

Turkey (Human Rights)

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will outline the steps that he thinks the UN Commission on Human Rights should be taking to address the continuing instance of human rights violations in Turkey. [27694]

Mr. David Davis: The presidency statement at the UN Commission on Human Rights, to which we contributed, including a number of steps which we hope the Turkish Government will take to improve the human rights situation in Turkey. Agreement to fix a date for the visits by the special rapporteurs of the Commission on Human Rights is among these.

Yugoslavia (Diplomatic Relations)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's relations with the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the recent appointment of a British ambassador in Belgrade; and when he expects a Yugoslav ambassador to the UK to be in post. [27969]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The United Kingdom recognised the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia—FRY—on 9 April 1996. We have now appointed our chargé d'affaires in Belgrade as ambassador. We expect the FRY to appoint an ambassador to the UK shortly.

Grants and Loans

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the grants and loans provided by his Department to businesses, together with the criteria they have to meet in order to obtain the subsidy. [28188]

Mr. Hanley: We have provided no grants or loans to businesses.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Foulridge Wharf Bridge

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the canal bridge at Foulridge wharf as forming part of a heritage museum site. [27170]

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend has decided to accept the advice of English Heritage, her statutory advisers on listing matters, that this bridge is not of special architectural or historic interest and she will not therefore be adding it to the statutory list.

Lottery Funding (Southwark)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the projects within the London borough of Southwark that have received funding from each of the national lottery funds. [27426]

Greenwich Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much national lottery funding has been allocated to the Greenwich millennium exhibition project by each of the funds. [27428]

Mr. Sproat: The Millennium Commission has announced, in principle, a commitment of up to £200 million in lottery grant to the exhibition; the remaining capital and operating cost will be raised from other sources.

Office Space

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the space footage and cost of office space rented by her Department and its agencies and the number of her Department or agencies' buildings partly, or fully unoccupied together with the square footage of that unoccupied office space and its estimated rental value where available in each of the past five financial years. [27733]

Mr. Sproat: My Department and its agencies fully occupy 97,670 sq ft. of office square on which we will pay £520,857 in respect of service charges for the year 1996–97. The rents paid for Government offices are a commercial in confidence matter between the Government and their landlords

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence he has evaluated of (a) BSE being hereditary and (b) BSE infecting land; and if he will make a statement. [23562]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 3 April 1996]: MAFF has funded research into the possible heritability of BSE. Details of this study have been published as "A study of the inheritance of susceptibility to bovine spongiform encephalopathy" by Wijeratne W. V. S. and Curnow R. N., in The Veterinary Record in 1990, vol. 126, p5–8, and "The incidence of bovine spongiform encephalopathy in the progeny of affected sires and dams" by R. N. Curnow and C. M. Hau, in The Veterinary Record on 27 April 1996, p407–408. Investigation of any association between bulls used in artificial insemination and incidence of BSE in offspring has also been carried out. This work is an ongoing part of the epidemiological monitoring, and has not identified any evidence of heritability. It has been published in part in "Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy and Related Diseases—An Epidemiological Overview" by J. Wilesmith, in the New Zealand Veterinary Journal, 1994, vol. 42, p1–8. No heritable mutations that result in spontaneous or heritable BSE have been identified in bovines.

There is no evidence of any link between BSE transmission and possibly contaminated land. Were this to occur, it would be seen as horizontal transmission of the disease from cattle to cattle. This is not seen. Details of this work was published in The Veterinary Record on 1 April 1995, p312 Hoinville et al. A copy of the paper was also annexed to the May 1995 progress report to Parliament, which is in the Library of the House.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce the Narang test to identify cattle infected with BSE before they are destroyed. [25909]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 23 April 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Members for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) and for Pembroke (Mr. Ainger) on 26 April 1996, Official Report, column 325.

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many BSE-infected cow carcases have been dumped in the Attlebridge tip in Norfolk. [27410]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 2 May 1996]: Approximately 360 carcases of BSE suspect animals were disposed of at the Attlebridge tip between September 1988 and December 1990. No carcases have been disposed there since 1990. Only three BSE carcases have been disposed of by burial since the end of 1991; these were all on remote sites where the preferred option—incineration in specialist plant—was not practicable.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the cost of the slaughter of cattle of five years old and above in herds in Scotland which have had an incidence of BSE. [23364]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: I have been asked to reply. It is estimated that there are just over 149,000 animals aged five years or above in Scotland in herds which have an incidence of BSE. Slaughtering animals alone at a cost of about £50 per head would cost around £7.5 million. More substantial would be the economic costs to the meat and dairy industries and compensation to farmers for losses of stock and replacement.

EU Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the directives which have affected his Department in each of the past three years and (a) the United Kingdom legislation introduced as a result of the directive, (b) the United Kingdom legislation which goes beyond the minimum standards set out in the directive and (c) the clauses within each piece of United Kingdom legislation which amplify the minimum standards set out in the directive. [27081]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 29 April 1996]: The directives made in the years 1993 to 1995 and involving the Ministry's policy responsibilities are as follows:

95/2/EC, 95/4/EC, 95/5/EC, 95/6/EC, 95/8/EC, 95/9/EC, 95/10/EC, 95/11/EC, 95/29/EC, 95/31/EC, 95/33/EC, 95/35/EC, 95/36/EC, 95/37/EC, 95/38/EC, 95/39/EC, 95/40/EC, 95/41/EC, 95/42/EC, 95/44/EC, 95/45/EC, 95/52/EC, 95/53/EC, 95/61/EC, 95/65/EC, 95/66/EC, 95/68/EC, 95/69/EC, 95/70/EC, 95/71/EC, 95/212/EC, 95/498/EC.

The cost of providing the other information sought would be disproportionate.

Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations the Government have made to the intergovernmental conference about reforming the common agricultural policy and the common fisheries policy. [27499]

Mr. Baldry: The Government's approach to the 1996 intergovernmental conference was set out in the White Paper, "A Partnership of Nations". This explained that efforts to secure further reforms of the common agricultural policy would continue in parallel with the intergovernmental conference since such reforms do not require treaty change. The White Paper also made clear the Government's determination to achieve improvements in the operation of the common fisheries policy, including addressing the problem of quota hoppers. If necessary, proposals for amending the treaty to deal with this problem will be submitted to the conference in due course.

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total cost of work required to be done by slaughterhouses operating under temporary derogations from the Fresh Meat (Hygiene Inspection) Regulations 1992 to enable them to meet the standards designated by the regulations. [27857]

Mrs. Browning: This information is not available. The cost of bringing slaughterhouses up to the structural standards laid down in the Fresh Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) Regulations 1995, which replaced the 1992 regulations, is a matter for the individual plant operator. It will depend on the nature and extent of the structural work required at each premises and the way in which each operator whose premises is operating at present under a temporarily derogated licence decides to meet the required standards.

General information on the likely costs of meeting the standards laid down is however, contained in the compliance cost assessment on the Fresh Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) Regulations. This was placed in the Library of the House when these regulations were laid before the Parliament on 9 March 1995.

Grants and Loans

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the grants and loans provided by his Department to businesses, together with the criteria they have to meet in order to obtain the subsidy. [28184]

Mr. Boswell: There is a range of grant and loan schemes provided by the Ministry for businesses and individuals. These are summarised, with guidance to applicants, in the Department's publication, "At the Farmers' Service", a copy of which I will send to the hon. Member. This booklet sets out also the main common agricultural policy support schemes and their eligibility criteria.

Hares

Ms Walley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to (a) protect the brown hare and (b) ban hare coursing. [27503]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

The Joint Nature Conservation Committee, the Government's statutory scientific conservation advisors, commissioned a survey of brown hares between 1991 and 1993. The survey found that while there had been a decline in hare numbers since the 1960s it was not clear if numbers were continuing to decline. The survey concluded that hare coursing had affected only a small proportion of populations and did not pose a threat to national populations.

The biodiversity steering group, chaired by my Department, was set up to advise Government on costed targets for the UK's most threatened and declining species and habitats. The group published its findings on 13 December 1995. "Biodiversity: The UK Steering Group Report" includes a costed action plan for the brown hare. The plan proposes a number of actions to maintain and expand existing populations, with the aim of doubling spring numbers in Britain by 2010.

The Government will publish their response to the report shortly.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the upper earnings limit was last increased for claimants of invalid care allowance. [27384]

Means Testing

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of the cash value of all benefits paid out were means tested, in each of the last five years. [27443]

Mr. Burt: The information is set out in the table.

War Pensioners

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many war pensioners have had their allowance for lowered standard of occupation cancelled as a result of his recent changed of practice. [27543]

Mr. Heald: To date, a total of 1,285 awards have been withdrawn.

Child Support Agency

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the cost of setting up an EDS computer system for the Child Support Agency; and what have been its monthly running costs since April 1993. [27406]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is not available in the format requested. However, the contracts and agreements currently held with EDS for the Child Support Agency computer system are as follows:

	Start date	End date
CSA Operational Accounting System	7 March 1992	31 March 2002
CSA Maintenance Assessment	8 July 1992	31 March 2002
CSA Software Support Services	7 March 1992	31 March 2002
CSA Technical Services	1 May 1992	31 March 1997

The monthly running costs, and the value of individual contracts and agreements is commercial in confidence.

The total value of the above projects is estimated as £23 million.

On 1 June 1995, EDS was awarded a 10-year contract for the provision of Data Centre Services for the whole of the DSS—including CSA. This contract is volume/output based. The value depends on future levels of business.

Employees' Rights

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what provision is available to employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) child care allowances, (n) carers' leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case; [27601]

(2) what provision is available to employees of his Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) child care allowances, (n) carers' leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [27600]

Mr. Burt: A woman employed on a permanent appointment, or a fixed-term appointment of two years or more, with at least one year's paid service and who contracts to return to work after her childbirth is entitled to three months and one week paid maternity leave and a maximum of 52 weeks continuous paid and unpaid maternity leave. Fathers are allowed a minimum of two days paternity leave, except in the Contributions Agency, where a minimum of five days is allowed.

In all parts of the Department, staff may apply for career breaks to care for children under 16 or elderly relatives, for special leave to (among other things) care for sick children, to work part time, either on a term-time basis or any other pattern, to job share or to work from home. For all these provisions staff apply to their line managers who deal with applications sympathetically, having regards to the needs of the member of staff, the merits of each case and the needs of the business. In addition, flexible working hours are available to most staff in the Department. Business units are free to appoint staff on annual hours contracts or to work part time or to work from home if that meets their business needs.

Workplace nurseries are provided at various locations throughout the Department where an acceptable business case has been made, funds exist and the facilities provide value for money. Staff may claim family care expenses for any reasonable and unavoidable extra family care expenses where they are required to be away from home on official business outside their normal working hours.

Research Projects

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) internal and (b) external research projects funded or part-funded by his Department which assess the impact of claimants representation at (a) social security appeal tribunals and (b) medical appeal tribunals; and if he will make a statement. [27778]

Mr. Burt: We are not funding or part-funding any such research projects. Details of the research programme are published annually in the research yearbook a copy of which is in the Library.

Outreach Workers

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people working as dedicated customer service staff, on an outreach basis, under Benefits Agency officers in Wales have recently been, or are to be, redeployed; and if he will make a statement on the provision of information to potential beneficiaries under the disability living allowance scheme in rural areas. [27149]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of the Benefits Agency is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Dafydd Wigley, dated 1 May 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people working as dedicated customer service staff, on an outreach basis, under Benefit Agency (BA) officers in Wales have recently been, or are to be, redeployed; and if he will make a statement on the provision of information to potential beneficiaries under the Disability Living Allowance (DLA) Scheme in rural areas.

Customer service staff are located in all BA Districts in Wales, where outreach work forms an integral part of their duties. Staff are not dedicated solely to outreach work, however there are currently 317.47 fulltime equivalent posts employed in customer services in Wales. No decisions have been made as yet to the possible redeployment of any customer service staff.

There are seventy-five Benefits Agency outlets in Wales. Customers may obtain benefit advice, including advice on the DLA Scheme, by telephone, face-to-face interview or by post. Benefit information in the form of leaflets, is available in Post Offices and the option of a home visit by a Benefits Agency officer is available if required.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mental Illness

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will list (a) the number of claimants and (b) the expenditure on invalidity benefit and incapacity benefit resulting from mental illness for each year since 1990–91; [27973]

(2) if he will list (a) the number of claimants and (b) the expenditure on invalidity and incapacity benefit due to disability, excluding mental illness, for each year since 1990–91. [27966]

Mr. Burt: Information is not available in the format requested. Expenditure data for invalidity benefit and incapacity benefit cannot be broken down by medical condition. Some information on the numbers of claimants with mental disorders is available for invalidity benefit and is set out in the table. Comparable information for incapacity benefit is not yet available.

Claimants incapacitated on the last day of the statistical period in connection with a claim for invalidity benefit

2 April 1994	278,000	1,403,000

1. Figures are taken form a 1 per cent. sample of all invalidity benefit claims in Great Britain, rounded to the nearest thousand.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was (a) the number of claimants and (b) the expenditure on income support due to disability, excluding mental illness, for each year since 1990–91; [27965]

(2) if he will list (a) the number of claimants and (b) the expenditure on income support due to mental illness in each year since 1990–91. [27967]

Mr. Evans: The information to identify how many income support claimants suffer from a mental illness is not available.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to make changes to the Benefits Agency out-of-hours emergency payments service. [27831]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter form Peter Mathison to Mr. Chris Smith, dated 2 May 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what plans he has to make changes to the Benefits Agency (BA) out-of-hours emergency payments service.

As you will be aware I recently outlined the BA's plans for the future delivery of social security benefits based on the BA vision of "right money to the right person at the right time, every time".

It is against this background that the Agency decided to review the need for the out of hours service and the London Emergency Office which provides a service to customers at night and weekends. A decision on its viability is expected later this year.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Grants and Loans

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the grants and loans provided by his Department to businesses, together with the criteria that they have to meet to obtain the subsidy. [28192]

Mr. Burt: The Department of Social Security does not provide grants or loans to businesses.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

School Sport

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of secondary schools which play regularly organised (a) cricket, (b) football and (c) rugby football. [27267]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 26 April 1996]: This information is not collected centrally. The national curriculum requires that all pupils aged 11 to 16 should pursue games as part of their physical education. Precisely which games are taught is a matter for schools themselves to decide.

Evidence from the Office for Standards in Education inspections shows that the overwhelming majority of secondary schools offer traditional team games to their pupils, both within curriculum time and as extra-curricular activity.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what assessment she has made of the number of left-handed children of school age; [27864]

(2) if she will make it her policy to provide equal opportunity at schools for left-handed pupils; [27867]

(3) if she will conduct a study of the special educational needs of left-handed pupils. [27868]

Mrs. Gillan: Left-handedness is not recognised as a special educational need within the meaning of the Education Acts. Provisions relating to pupils with special educational needs apply equally to left-handed and right-handed pupils. The Department does not collect information on the number of left-handed pupils, and has no plans to conduct a study on the special educational needs of such pupils. If my hon. Friend wishes to write to me with details of any case causing him concern, I shall gladly look into it.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what plans she has to help teachers respond appropriately to the special requirements of left-handed pupils, with particular reference to assisting them in avoiding discomfort in writing; [27866]

(2) for what reasons dealing with left-handedness is not among the criteria she specifies for teacher training; [27869]

(3) what assessment she has made of the relative advantage of teaching strategies for coping with left-handedness in pupils during (a) initial training, (b) induction and (c) service. [27865]

Mr. Robin Squire: Teaching methods and arrangements for the induction and inservice training of teachers are not centrally prescribed. It is for schools and teachers to determine the most effective way to ensure they meet the needs of all their pupils, using the resources available to them. The Secretary of State specifies broad criteria for courses of initial teacher training, including the need for new teachers to be able to respond to relevant individual differences between pupils. Institutions accredited to provide such courses are responsible for meeting these criteria. All schools and courses of initial teacher training are subject to independent inspection followed by published reports.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to harmonise the rates and rules governing TEC-funded training programmes with Further Education Funding Council funding for colleges; when she expects the research funded by her Department from the Further Education Funding Council on the inequalities in the funding mechanism to be finalised and published; and if she will make a statement. [27776]

Mr. Paice: The Government are committed to raising participation and attainment by young people in education and training and promoting fair competition between providers. In support of this agenda, they are investigating whether there is a case for encouraging a more consistent approach to funding methodologies across school sixth forms, further education sector colleges and work-based training for young people, and to funding levels for similar qualifications in the different sectors.

We have already published for discussion an initial analysis of the comparative public funding cost per qualification achieved by 16 to 19-year-olds in each of the three sectors and placed a copy in the Library.

We are refining this initial analysis and considering the scope for convergence of funding methodologies across 16 to 19 provision in consultation with the Further Education Funding Council, the Training and Enterprise Council national council, local authority associations and others.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what sums have been provided in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97 to fund the range of advice and information centres and other schemes run directly or indirectly by Barnsley and Doncaster TEC; and what assessment she has made of the cost-effectiveness of transferring these funds in future years to careers services. [27634]

Mr. Paice: In 1995–96, training and enterprise councils had flexibility to use up to 2.7 per cent. of the training for work budget provided by the Department to fund local adult advice and guidance services. Barnsley and Doncaster TEC exercised this flexibility to devote £336,280 towards the funding of the advice and information centre—"Skillshops"—run directly by the TEC. The TEC also received £41,000 for an access to assessment project and £28,331 for a gateway to learning project.

In 1996–97, TECs have flexibility to use up to 1 per cent. of their training for work budget to fund local adult advice and guidance services. It will be for Barnsley and Doncaster TEC to decide whether to exercise this flexibility and, if so, how the services might be delivered.

In 1996–96, Barnsley and Doncaster TEC also received funding in respect of advice and information services for young people, comprising £377,044 for careers guidance delivered by careers services to pupils in years 9 and 10; and £14,748 to enhance careers libraries in schools and colleges. For 1996–97, all funding for careers advice and guidance for young people in Barnsley and Doncaster is being routed through Lifetime Careers (Barnsley, Doncaster and Rotherham) Ltd., the company which is contracted to provide careers services in Barnsley and Doncaster.

Access to Work Scheme

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements she intends to introduce to restore the eligibility of self-employed disabled people to apply for support under the access to work scheme. [27623]

Mr. Paice: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State said in her announcement on 26 March, Official Report, columns 489–91, we are considering this issue further.

Office for Standards in Education

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what mechanisms of accountability are available to measure performance and ensure value for money for Ofsted. [27632]

Mr. Robin Squire: These are matters for the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead, Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools, to write to the hon. Member.

Standard Spending Assessment Calculations

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment to what extent, and for what reasons, standard spending assessment calculations for local authority education budgets differentiate between spending per pupil in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools. [27630]

Mr. Robin Squire: The main determinant of the differential between the primary and secondary allowances per pupil in the education standard spending assessment calculations is the differential in the national pattern of local education authorities—LEA—reported spending between the sectors. The standard spending assessment allocations are not hypothecated: LEAs can and do deploy the resources available to them on a different basis.

Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is (a) the total number and (b) the number in each LEA of (i) head teachers, (ii) deputy head teachers and (iii) teachers who have taken early retirement on the ground of ill health in each year since 1991; and if she will make a statement. [27832]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 2 May 1996]: The table shows the retirements on ill health grounds for England and each local education authority—LEA—area, from the maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special education sector, including grant-maintained schools, for the financial years 1991–92 to 1994–95, the most recent year for which this information is available.

Separate figures are provided for head teachers, deputy head teachers and classroom teachers. The table is restricted to members of the teachers' superannuation scheme in full-time, part-time or occasional service at 31 March immediately before the financial year in which they retired.

Social Charter

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which paragraphs of article 7 of the European social charter the Government have (a) accepted and (b) rejected; and, in each case, for what reason. [28102]

Mr. Forth: The Government have accepted paragraphs 2, 3, 5, 6, 9 and 10 of article 7 as the UK legislation on the protection of children and young persons is in conformity with those provisions of the charter. They have not accepted paragraphs 1, 4, 7 and 8 because those provisions do not accord with UK legislation or practice and would reduce employment opportunities for young persons and increase business costs.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what financial assistance the Government have given to each of the authorities that have introduced nursery voucher schemes; and if she will make a statement. [28025]

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on Monday 29 April 1996, Official Report, column 348.

Higher Education

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the current level of Government funding for higher education; and what was the figure in 1979 and 1989 in constant prices. [28091]

Mr. Forth: The current level of Government funding for higher education institutions in England is around £4,600 million. In 1989–90, at constant prices, it was just under £4,000 million. Comparable figures for 1979–80 are not readily available.

Training (London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) men and (b) women, aged from 16 to 21 years, were involved in a Government-sponsored training scheme in the Greater London area as of 31 March. [27954]

Mr. Paice: This information is not available in the form requested. However, the total number of individuals involved in youth training programmes in London as at 31 March 1996 was 18,424. This includes youth training, youth credits and modern apprenticeships.

Data for adults in training are not collected by age or gender.

Special Needs

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the effects of the Children Act 1994 Special Educational Needs Regulation 4 (14) (Special Needs) on the ability to statement the special educational needs of Ben Simpson in the Meriden constituency. [28069]

Mrs. Gillan: The Education Act 1993 and the Education (Special Educational Needs) Regulations 1994 make provision for local education authorities in appropriate cases to assess a child's special educational needs. Regulation 14(4) relieves LEAs of the duty to comply with the statutory time limit for making a statement in certain circumstances, including the child's absence from the LEA's area. If parents are dissatisfied with an LEA's decision in respect of statutory assessment they may appeal to the independent special educational needs tribunal. If parents believe an LEA is failing to comply with a statutory duty, they may complain to the Secretary of State. The Department has received no correspondence about Ben Simpson.

Disabled People (Greater London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the number of registered disabled people living in the Greater London area as of 30 March. [27955]

Mr. Paice: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Horne to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 7 May 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your question about registered disabled people living in the Greater London area.

I regret that it is not possible to supply the information in the form requested. However, as at 15 April 1996, the latest figures available show that there were 48,685 people registered as disabled in the Greater London area. Of this total 34,229 are male and 14,556 female.

I hope that this information is helpful.

Employees' Rights

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what provision is available to employees of her Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) child care allowances, (n) carers' leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [27590]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following arrangements apply within the Department:

(A) MATERNITY LEAVE

To qualify for departmental unpaid maternity leave an employee must:

Be employed on a permanent basis, as a part-year appointee, or as a recurring temporary appointee.

Produce a maternity statement from a registered medical practitioner or certified midwife, giving the expected week of confinement.

State that they intend to return to work after the baby is born.

Maternity leave—paid and/or unpaid—is allowed for an overall period of 52 weeks from the start of the maternity absence.

Casual employees have a statutory right to take a period of 14 weeks' unpaid maternity leave.

(B) MATERNITY PAY

In addition, meeting the qualifying criteria for unpaid maternity leave, to qualify for paid maternity leave an employee must also:

Be in paid service at the time their maternity leave begins and have at least one year's reckonable service.

Agree to repay any salary received, less any entitlement to statutory maternity pay for the period of maternity leave, if they fail to return to work and complete the equivalent of one month's reckonable service.

Employees will not qualify for paid maternity leave if, immediately before beginning their maternity leave, they are on special unpaid leave, unauthorised absence, or sick leave at no pay or pension rate.

Maternity pay is allowed for a continuous period of three calender months and one week.

Different provisions exist for employees on recurring temporary appointments and for part-year appointees.

Casual employees are not eligible for paid maternity leave under the civil service scheme. If the appointment is subsequently made permanent, casual service will count towards the qualifying period for paid maternity leave.

(C) PATERNITY LEAVE

Two day's paid paternity leave may be taken at the time of the birth, or during the weeks following the birth when mother and baby leave hospital.

(D) PARENTAL LEAVE

Adoption Leave

Special leave may be granted to the adoptive parent(s):

up to 20 days' paid leave may be taken either before or after the child comes into full-time care up to 52 weeks' unpaid leave, less any paid leave taken as above the leave can be taken by either parent, or shared between them

Birth of a second or subsequent child

Special paid leave, up to a maximum of five days may be given:

at the birth of a baby, when alternative arrangements cannot be made to look after other small children

Care for children

Special paid leave up to a maximum of five days may be given when normal child minding arrangements break down unexpectedly.

Up to three weeks' special unpaid leave may be allowed, on line manager's recommendation, to care for school-age children during school holidays, providing the leave is taken in addition to at least two weeks annual leave charted in one or more of the school holiday periods.

(E) FLEXIBLE WORKING HOURS (FWH)

The Department operates a FWH system to provide a more flexible system of attendance for all staff.

All staff may work FWH at line management's discretion.

(F) PART-TIME WORK

The Department operates an equal opportunities policy whereby all posts are considered to be available on a part-time basis.

Staff can apply to change from full-time to part-time employment to suit changing circumstances for a short period or an indefinite period.

Entitlement to annual leave, special leave etc. is on a pro rata basis to the hours worked. Part-time staff are regarded as non-mobile.

(G) JOB SHARING

All posts are considered to be available on a job-sharing basis. This is a voluntary arrangement whereby a full-time post is divided into two part-time jobs. The two job holders work together and share the overall duties and responsibilities of the original full-time post.

(H) LEAVE TO CARE FOR SICK CHILDREN

Special leave with pay may be allowed to a member of staff to care for sick children. Medical evidence is requested to support the application if the absence is over five days.

Line managers consider the circumstances, the operational need and discuss alternatives ie. part-time hours, working from home.

Where longer-term nursing is required, special leave with pay may be allowed to enable staff to make suitable arrangements. Sympathetic consideration is given to requests for special leave without pay if more time is needed to make such arrangements.

(I) HOMEWORKING

There are three main categories of homeworking:

1. Working part-time at home, based in an office with agreed amounts of time homeworking.

2. Home as a base.

3. Working at home on a permanent basis.

Consideration is given to costs, security, communications, management of staff, health and safety, environment and facilities when a manager decides when to transfer work from a normal office environment to a home-based office.

Staff can not be moved into a post without their agreement.

(J) TERM-TIME WORKING

There is provision for term-time working, providing the non-working period is not less than two weeks or more than three months.

Dates of attendance must be agreed in writing in advance.

Pay can be averaged out over the year or be received at the end of each month for periods actually worked. Tem-time appointments are non-mobile. Non-working periods do not count for sick absence pay, qualifying service for higher annual leave, qualifying service for maternity leave, or reckonable service for pension purposes.

(K) ANNUAL HOURS CONTRACTS

There is no standard arrangement for annual hours contracts although consideration would be given to all requests for alternative working patterns.

(L) WORKPLACE NURSERIES

The Department provides a nursery at its head quarters in Runcorn and Sheffield. Both nurseries offer 50 places and the cost to parents ranges from £5.50 per half day to £57.50 for a week. Opening hours are 8 am to 6 pm.

There are also school holiday playschemes, which operate in Darlington, London, Runcorn and Sheffield.

(M) CHILD CARE ALLOWANCES

Staff who have young children can apply for additional child care costs when attending a residential training course or being required to work outside their normal pattern of hours.

(N) CARERS' LEAVE

Special leave with pay can be allowed to help staff cope with serious illness of a partner, close relative or dependant, in order to deal with the initial emergency or care on discharge from hospital, where there is no one else available to provide the care required.

In exceptional circumstances, special leave can be allowed to look after close relatives with minor illnesses.

Special leave without pay can be allowed up to a maximum of six months to care for an aged/infirm relative. Periods in excess of six months may qualify for a career break.

(O) CAREER BREAKS

Career breaks may last for a minimum of six months to a maximum of five years. The period of unpaid leave may be extended for a further 52 weeks if a woman has a second child during the career break.

Staff should have a good attendance record and have achieved a satisfactory performance.

Adult Training Schemes

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what was (a) the number of people and (b) the expenditure on adult training schemes as a result of unemployment caused by mental illness in each year since 1990–91; [27963]

(2) what was (a) the number of people and (b) the expenditure on adult training schemes as a result of disability, excluding mental illness, in each year since 1990–91. [27964]

Mr. Paice: This information is not available.

Thamesmead Job Club

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what consultations her Department held, and with whom, before the decision to close the Thamesmead job club. [28333]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Horne to Mr. John Austin-Walker, dated 7 May 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question, in the absence of the Chief Executive, about what consultations took place, and with whom, prior to the decision to close the Thamesmead Job Club.

Unemployment levels in the District have fallen and there has, as a result, been a corresponding reduction in resources available for Job Clubs.

The District Manager did not take the decision to close Thamesmead Job Club lightly. The decision was made on the basis of a review of all Job provision across South East London, taking into account.

(a) the numbers of eligible unemployed people from local Jobcentres;

(b) cost of Job Club provision;

(c) the performance of local Job Club in helping people find jobs;

(d) geographical location of Job Club and travel patterns.

The District Manager, his Business Managers and the Programme Providers across the District, taking full account of the demand for Job Club, took the decision to close Thamesmead to ensure an even distribution of available provision.

All eligible clients in the District will continue to have access to a Job Club, and fares will be reimbursed.

I hope this is helpful

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will visit Thamesmead to discuss the proposed closure of the Thamesmead job club with unemployed people in the Thamesmead area. [28330]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. John Austin-Walker, dated 7 May 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the closure of Thamesmead Jobclub as the issues raised fall within the operational responsibilities delegated to the Employment Service as an Executive Agency.

The decision to close Thamesmead Jobclub was not taken lightly and was arrived at after a review of all the Jobclub provision within the District.

In reaching the decision to close the Thamesmead Jobclub, we took into account the total number of unemployed people within the Thamesmead catchment area, the cost of the Jobclub provision, it's current performance and referral rates and the overall geographical location of the Jobclub in relation to travel to work patterns.

My District Manager considers that there will be sufficient places available in the existing Jobclubs to meet the local need. Indeed, those attending the Thamesmead Jobclub have been offered alternative placements for which the Employment Service will reimburse their fares in full.

In respect of your request that the Secretary of State visits the clients involved, perhaps the most appropriate course of action would be for the District Manager, Ray Nash, to meet with you and the existing Jobclub members to explain the position. Should you wish to contact him, his telephone number is 0181 308 1618.

I hope this is helpful.

Job Clubs

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of job clubs; [28331]

(2) how many job clubs are currently in existence; and how many she proposes to (a) close and (b) open in the next 12 months. [28332]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Horne at Mr. John Austin-Walker, dated 7 May 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your questions about Jobclubs.

The performance of Jobclubs is assessed on a regular basis to provide information which will improve the effectiveness of the Employment Service in helping unemployed people back into work.

Management information is collected monthly and is used to monitor the operation of the programme. The latest management information shows that in 1995/96 just over 95,500 people were placed into jobs following participation in a Jobclub and a further 24,300 took up other opportunities such as training places or starting their own business.

Periodic evaluations of the programme are also carried out. These examine, in more detail, various aspects of the operation and impact of the programme. Details of these studies copies can be obtained through the House of Commons library.

The Employment Service currently maintains a network of 1,338 Jobclubs throughout the country. This will provide places for around 204,000 unemployed people during 1996/97. This includes a number of specialist Jobclubs for people facing particular difficulties returning to the labour market.

With reductions in unemployment the number of Jobclub places will reduce. Decisions about where Jobclubs are located are made by the 154 District Managers who are responsible for the delivery of the full range of Employment Service programmes within their Districts. Wherever possible they will seek to maintain a network of Jobclubs which will be accessible to the vast majority of people of our clients. In some locations particularly in rural areas it may be difficult to operate a full time Jobclub. In these cases we are able to provide jobseekers with a Distance Learning Pack which contains advice and information to help with job search techniques.

Given changes in local labour market conditions it is difficult to be precise about how many Jobclubs will close and how many will be open during the next 12 months. However, I anticipate that the network will reduce by no more than 10 per cent during the year.

I hope this is helpful.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Joint Intelligence Committee

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress has been made in reviewing and releasing the records of the Joint Intelligence Committee under the initiative announced on 25 June 1992; what are the locations within the Public Record Office of records which have been released; which years are covered by records which have been released; what records are now planned to be reviewed for release; and if he will make a statement. [28038]

Mr. Freeman: Good progress has been made with reviewing and releasing the records of the Joint Intelligence Committee—JIC—since my right hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, West (Mr. Waldegrave), then the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster announced on 25 June 1992 that JIC papers would in future not be covered by a blanket ban on release, but treated like all other Government records and released after 30 years unless the contents remained sensitive.

JIC minutes and memorandums for the years 1936 to 1950 have been reviewed. Those found to be no longer sensitive have been released in the Public Record Office—PRO—, Kew with the following class references—CAB 56/1–7, CAB 81/87–138, CAB 159/1–8, CAB 158/1–11.

Post-1950 records are currently under review. Releasable records for the years 1951 to 1953 will be transferred to the PRO in early 1997. It is expected that the JIC records will continue to be released in three-year tranches every year until the review has been completed.

Grants and Loans

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the grants and loans provided by his Department to businesses, together with the criteria they have to meet in order to obtain the subsidy. [28186]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The third competitive White Paper will be published in the summer.

Cabinet Office Report

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list by name, department and organisation the outward and inward secondments, non-executive appointments and attachments referred to in table 40 of the Cabinet Office report 1996, Cm 3220. [27379]

Mr. Freeman: The Office of Public Service does not collect centrally comprehensive information on inward and outward secondments and attachments. The full detailed information requested in addition to the aggregate data already published can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, when information was last collected centrally, in 1995, we received details of 57 civil servants who, at that time, held, or were due to take up, non-executive appointments within private sector companies either for developmental reasons or on an ex officio basis. Although some details may have changed, the names of the Departments, civil servants and organisation involved are as listed.

Letter from N. E. Borrett to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 3 May 1996:

The answer to each section in respect of PACE is as follows:

(a) Maximum of 52 weeks paid and unpaid.

The above are automatic for permanent Civil Servants with one year's service.

(f) Staff of any grade or sex may apply to be considered for part-time working.

I trust that the above gives all the information.

Letter from Mike Devereau to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 1 May 1996:

The Deputy Prime Minster has asked me to reply, in respect of the Central Office of Information, to your question about the provision of facilities for employees.

COI operates the following schemes for all of its permanent staff:

Maternity Leave

Maternity Pay

Paternity Leave

Flexible Working Hours

Part-time Work

Job Sharing

and through its special paid, or unpaid, leave arrangements:

Parental Leave

Leave to care for sick children

Carer's Leave

Career Breaks

Details of all these schemes and, where appropriate, the criteria used to judge eligibility are set out in the Staff Handbook, a copy of which is held by each staff member.

There is considerable flexibility for staff employed on a part-time basis to agree contracts which suit their personal circumstances. For example COI currently employs people whose contracts allow them to: work from home, work three weeks in four, return to their homes in other countries for regular periods.

COI does not provide in house child care or nursery facilities. However staff in London can use the Westminster holiday playscheme and free information and advice on childcare facilities is available to all staff from the private sector and the COI Welfare Officer.

There is no provision for childcare allowances although COI offers a subsidy of 50% of the cost of the holiday playscheme.

Letter from R. N. Edwards to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 1 May 1996:

The Deputy Prime Minister has asked me to reply to your Question about employee conditions and workplace facilities.

(m) not available;

(n) allowed as at d. above;

(o) a Keep in Touch (KIT) operates, which allows for a period of up to 5 years special unpaid leave for staff who have to give up work because of unavoidable commitments.

The criteria for eligibility where appropriate are as follows:

a., b, and c. Automatic.

d., h., i., n. and o. Subject to approval by line management and personnel.

e. All staff, except computer shift workers and support staff, can work flexible hours.

f. and g. We accommodate part-time working in most parts of Chessington and try to suit the needs of staff subject to business needs. With regard to job sharing this is agreed where there are 2 members of staff who can provide continuous cover between them;

l. To date all requests for places have been met, but should demand exceed the number of places available, then priority is given to parents to whom a high level of training has already been given; or parents from grades where Chessington is experiencing a shortage of staff; or where particular skills are required.

I trust the above gives all the information required. If not please do not hesitate to get in touch.

Letter from Robin Guenier to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 1 May 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency (CCTA), I am responding to your recent question raised about certain aspects of working conditions for employees of departments under the control of the Deputy Prime Minister.

In general CCTA's policies do not differ from those of the Cabinet Office.

Maternity leave and maternity pay, paternity leave and parental leave are granted by CCTA in accordance with the Civil Service Management Code.

We offer all staff the opportunity to participate in flexible working hours and part time working. We also have people on career breaks.

We have had staff job sharing and have staff involved in home-working schemes.

We do not have a workplace nursery but do offer an assisted holiday playscheme facility.

While we have never been asked for term time contracts, annual hours contracts or carers leave we would consider any application sympathetically, within the guidelines of the Management code.

Childcare allowance is not offered as a matter of course although we pay the additional cost of childcare if a member of staff is away on business or attending a residential training course.

Letter from Dr. S. H. Hickey to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 3 May 1996:

The Deputy Prime Minister has asked me to reply to your Question about various provisions available to employees of the Civil Service College.

Where there is no immediate viable alternative, e.g. assistance from relatives, Urgent Domestic Leave of up to one week with pay may be taken. In exceptional circumstances this may be extended as unpaid leave. Adoptive leave, involving longer periods, is also available.

(e) Flexible Working Hours

Flexible working hours are arranged between managers and staff within each area. The determining factor is the need to staff the office for the duration of the working day, ensuring adequate cover at peak times.

(f) Part Time Working

HMSO encourages part time working and currently has 103 staff working part time between 15 and 35 hours per week.

(g) Job Sharing

Currently 8 jobs are shared, involving 16 members of staff.

(h) Leave to Care for Sick Children

Up to 1 week's paid leave, followed by agreed extended unpaid leave.

(i) Home Working

There are currently 5 people formally regarded as home working. In addition, many of our sales staff are based at home, with most of their work on the road.

(j) Term Time Contracts

There are currently no contracts of this nature.

(k) Annual Hours Contracts

HMSO has two units in London that work annual hours contracts, presently covering 116 staff. A further 75 will join the scheme later this year.

(l) Workplace Nurseries and Childcare Facilities

HMSO provides 20 places at a nursery at Norwich, in partnership with a local college, and 50 places per day at play schemes for the 6 school holiday periods.

(m) Childcare Allowances

The nursery and play schemes are subsidised by HMSO.

(n) Carers Leave (Sick Nursing)

Up to 1 week paid leave, followed by agreed extended unpaid leave, alternatively temporary adjustments to working hours may be granted.

(o) Career Break Scheme

Staff who have completed 2 years permanent service may be granted a Career Break for a maximum of 5 years. There are a total of 7 staff currently taking career breaks, and 3 have successfully returned.

Letter from J. L. Gordon to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 1 May 1996:

The Deputy Prime Minister has asked me to reply to your questions. The information relating to the Occupational Health & Safety Agency is as follows:-

(a)	Maternity Leave	Provision in accordance with Civil Service arrangements generally.
(b)	Maternity Pay
(c)	Paternity Leave	OHSA allows 2 days special leave with pay.
(d)	Parental Leave	Special leave with pay depending on particular circumstances, amount of annual leave etc. Each case decided on merit.
(e)	Flexible Working Hours	Certain more junior grades at HQ participate in a scheme. Not appropriate in some areas because of the need to respond to customer requirements.
(f)	Part-Time Work	OHSA has number of staff on part-time work/job share. Approval to some extent governed by needs of customers and whether it is possible to arrange hours around requirements.
(g)	Job Share
(h)	Leave to Care for Sick Children	No circumstances have arisen, other than odd days when special leave with pay has been given. Any case would be dealt with on its merits.
(i)	Home Working	No formal arrangements exist but where appropriate line manages have authority to authorise on a case by case basis.
(j)	Term-Time Contracts	None currently in place but possible within constraints of customer requirements.
(k)	Annual Hours Contracts	None in place.
(l)	Workplace Nurseries	The Agency is small and staff too widely scattered to make this a viable proposition.
(m)	Childcare Allowances	No provision.
(n)	Carers Leave	No requests have been received to date but would most possibly be dealt with as special leave and each case dealt with on its merits.
(o)	Career Break Schemes	Because of the size of the Agency it is difficult to operate a full career break scheme. There has been one case in recent years where a break of 2 years was approved.

I trust this information is sufficient for your needs.

Letter from Craig Muir to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 3 May 1996:

The Deputy Prime Minister has asked me to reply to your parliamentary question. Recruitment and Assessment Services are happy to provide the enclosed information.

Recruitment and Assessment Services (RAS) follows the guidelines of the Civil Service Management Code in all issues.

1 Maternity leave/pay—Departments and Agencies must provide 3 months and 1 week's paid maternity leave (if paid monthly) and 14 weeks paid maternity leave (if paid weekly) to a woman civil servant for a period of continuous absence during confinement providing that she:

A. state that she intends to return to work in the Civil Service after her confinement, and that she agrees to repay any payment made during that period if she fails to return (such payment will exclude any Statutory Maternity Pay to which there is entitlement);

B. is in paid service with her department/agency at the time her maternity leave begins and has rendered at least one year's such service;

C. is not employed on a casual, standby or short notice appointment; and

D. is not employed on a Fixed Term Appointment of less than two years.

2 Paternity leave—male civil servants whose appointment is permanent or for two or more years are entitled to 2 days' paid paternity leave. Departments and agencies may allow paternity leave to any other appointment, at their discretion. Paternity leave cannot be paid during periods of unpaid absence.

3 Parental leave—RAS has not had any staff that have applied for parental leave, however each case would be assessed at the time of application.

4 RAS operates a system of flexible working hours for all permanent, fixed term and staff on loan. It is the responsibility of the line managers to ensure the system is not abused. RAS does not have anyone who is on a annual hours contract.

5 RAS has part time/and job sharing posts within its organisation, and is very mindful of staff needs.

6 Leave to care for sick children/term time contracts/carers' leave/career break—Departments/agencies have discretion to grant special leave with or without pay where they consider this to be necessary or justified. In determining whether special leave should be granted, departments and agencies should mainly have regard to the effect of such leave on the discharge of public business. In determining whether special leave with pay should be granted, departments and agencies will in addition need to be satisfied that the circumstances of the particular case justify such a concession. An example of special leave with pay would be for a bereavement of a close family member, 5 days with pay would be granted.

7 RAS does not provide workplace nurseries, or childcare allowances.

8 Home working—RAS allows staff to work from home providing they do not work in a supervisory role. They must be contactable by telephone and respond to queries within 1 hour.

Letter from John Smith to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 3 May 1996:

The Deputy Prime Minister has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question:

The answer to each section in respect of SAFE is as follows:

(f) Staff of any grade or sex may apply to be considered for part-time working.

(g) Job sharing is available.

(k) Not available.

(l) None.

(m) Not available.

(n) As at (d) above.

(o) A career break of up to five years (unpaid) may be granted for child rearing/elder care. To qualify, staff must be permanent employees who have satisfactorily completed an initial probation period. In addition, they must have a satisfactory record of attendance and conduct, and performance that fully meets the requirement of the grade.

I trust that the above gives all the information required.

Letter from S. P. Sage to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 2 May 1996:

The Deputy Prime Minister has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question.

The provisions made available to employees within The Buying Agency in relation to questions A–O of your fax dated 29 April 1996 are largely determined by the policies currently laid down in the Staff Hand Book, as follows:

(a) Maternity Leave

A woman will be allowed paid maternity leave for a period of continuous absence before and after confinement of 3 months and 1 week or 14 weeks (whichever is the greater) provided that she satisfies the necessary criteria. "Confinement" is the date of birth of a child, whether living or not, after 24 weeks of pregnancy.

(b) Maternity Pay

This is covered by the Statutory Regulations within the EP(C)A 1973 and subsequent amendments TURER 1993. Statutory Maternity Pay is a statutory requirement which applies to the Civil Service as an employer in the same way as any other employer.

(c) Paternity Leave

Male staff are entitled to 2 days paid paternity leave.

(d) Parental Leave

No such category as yet for TBA.

(e) Flexible Working Hours

All staff are permitted to participate in a flexible working hours system unless there is a particular reason for them not being included.

Flexible Working Hours are: (7.24 standard day)

Core Times

7.30–10.00 am

12.00–14.00 pm

16.00–18.00 pm (15.30 pm on Fridays)

Allowance to carry over from one period to the next

Credit: 22.12 hours

Debit: 11.06 hours

(f) Part-time Work

The Agency considers all requests. There are currently 8 members of TBA staff engaged on a part-time basis.

(g) Job Sharing

Job share has been arranged on 5 or 6 occasions in the past but there are no job share arrangements at present. As with (f) requests are considered and approval will be given to the mutual satisfaction of all parties.

(h) Leave to Care for Sick Children

Unpaid leave is granted for a limited period until more permanent arrangements can be made.

(i) Home Working

15 TBA staff currently work from home.

(j) Term-time Contracts

Not applicable at present.

(k) Annual Hours Contracts

Not applicable at present.

(l) Work Place Nurseries

This has previously been investigated, however no scheme is presently in place. There is as yet no demand from staff.

(m) Childcare Allowances

Not applicable at present.

(o) Career Break Schemes and What Criteria Are Used to Judge Eligibility

Several TBA staff have availed themselves of the Career Break Scheme in the past.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what powers of treaty articles, regulations or directives of the European Community relating to VAT limit the discretion of national Governments or parliaments to determine the degree of retrospective application of judgments made in accordance with (a) treaty articles, (b) regulations, (c) national primary or secondary legislation, pursuant to directives and (d) the case of Primback v. Customs and Excise. [27572]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 1 May 1996]: There are no treaty articles, regulations or directives of the European Community relating to VAT which specifically limit the discretion of national Governments or parliaments to determine the degree of retrospective application of judgments of the sort instanced above. Member states are entitled to operate national procedures limiting the number of years' overpaid tax which will be refunded, provided such rules do not discriminate between actions based on EC law and those based only on national law, or make it impossible in practice to exercise EC rights.

Business Subsidies

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the grants and loans provided by his Department to businesses, and the criteria they have to meet in order to obtain the subsidy. [28193]

HEALTH

GP Lists

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provisions in the patients charter offer (a) security, (b) reassurance, (c) appeal and (d) redress to elderly patients in respect of the possibility of being removed from their original general practitioner's list; and what representations he has received to amend (i) the charter and (ii) the law in these respects. [27246]

Mr. Malone: All patients, regardless of age, have a patients charter right to be registered with a general practitioner. Health authorities have a legislative responsibility to ensure that this happens. There are no provisions in the patients charter to prevent general practitioners from removing patients from their lists.

Guidance issued by the General Medical Council in May 1992 makes it clear to general practitioners that it is unacceptable to discriminate against patients on grounds of their age, sex, sexual orientation, race, colour, religious belief, perceived economic worth or the amount of work that they are likely to generate by virtue of their clinical condition. This guidance is intended to be read in conjunction with the booklet, "Duties of a Doctor". The GMC is the professional body for doctors and has a range of measures that it can take against a doctor who acts in a manner that it considers to be unacceptable.

We have received a number of representations regarding the law in this respect.

Silicone Implants

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies he has commissioned in the last five years, on the evaluation of symptomatic illness of British women who have silicone implants. [27774]

Mr. Horam: None.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what number of patients receive silicone implants annually in the United Kingdom; [27773]

(2) how many British women have received silicone implants in the United Kingdom since 1970. [27775]

Mr. Horam: The information is not available centrally.

Community Care

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to investigate the operation and resourcing of community care. [28160]

Mr. Bowis: We monitor the operation of community care on an on-going basis. This includes work by the social service inspectorate, the regular collection and publication of statistics and longer-term research to evaluate progress.

Resources for community care are considered fully each year as part of the public expenditure process.

Burnley Health Care NHS Trust

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what (a) basis and (b) calculation Burnley Health Care NHS trust was allocated 4.7 per cent. of the north western general purposes fund; and what sum this percentage represents. [28098]

Mr. Horam: Burnley Health Care national health service trust received £31,257 as its share of the regional general purpose trust fund held by the former western regional health authority. The sum is calculated, pro rata, on the trust's 1994–95 revenue figure.

Residential Care

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has evaluated on the number of pensioners who have sold property to pay for residential care, broken down by health authority area. [28094]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Dudley Group of Hospitals NHS Trust

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the management consultants used to prepare the Dudley Group of Hospitals NHS trust's capital investment strategy; and what is the value of contracts awarded; [28158]

(2) what plans the Dudley Group of Hospital NHS trust has to employ consultants to assist it further with its capital investment strategy; and what budget has been allocated for consultancy work during the 1996–97 financial year. [28159]

Mr. Horam: The employment of consultants by national health service trusts is a matter for them and no information is available centrally on such contracts.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the employment consequences of the implementation of Dudley Group of Hospitals NHS trust's proposed capital investment strategy option 3. [28092]

Mr. Horam: None. The employment consequences of a national health service trust's capital investment proposals are a matter for the trust's management.

NHS Estates

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the key tasks and targets for 1996–97 for the NHS Estates agency. [28940]

Mr. Horam: I have today placed in the Library a copy of the key tasks and targets for 1996–97 for the NHS Estates agency.

NHS Pensions Agency

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the key tasks and targets for 1996–97 for the NHS Pensions Agency. [28941]

Mr. Horam: I have today placed in the Library a copy of the key tasks and targets for 1996–97 for the NHS Pensions Agency.

Deaf-blind People

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaf-blind people were resident in the area of each local authority in England and Wales at the latest date for which figures are available; how many local authorities do not currently offer basic rehabilitation and social work support services for deaf-blind people; what action he is taking to improve local provision for them: and if he will make a statement. [27144]

Mr. Bowis: Centrally available information about people registered with local authorities as being blind who are also deaf is published in "Registered Blind and Partially Sighted People at 31 March 1994, England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Information about the number of local authorities that do not currently offer basic rehabilitation and social work support services for deaf-blind people is not available centrally. Under the community care arrangements, local authorities carry out individual assessments of need for people who may need community care services, including those with dual sensory loss. Authorities will need to consider the needs of this client group when drawing up their community care plans.

The Department of Health works closely with the Association of Directors of Social Services to promote awareness of the needs of deaf-blind people. Draft good practice guidelines for older people with dual sensory loss were published in November 1995 and are currently being piloted in selected local authorities. Support is provided under the section 64 general scheme of grants for Sense—the National Deaf-Blind and Rubella Association—and the National Deaf-Blind League, and project grants for Sense, the UK coalition on deaf-blindness, the NDBL and the Council for the Advancement of Communication with Deaf People.

Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the present funding of the Liverpool school of tropical medicine. [28086]

Mr. Horam: The Liverpool school of tropical medicine is a registered charity which is part of the University of Liverpool. The hon. Member may wish to contact its director, Professor David Molyneux, for this information.

Long-term Care

Mr French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his consultative document on provision for long-term care is ready for publication; and if he will make a statement. [28285]

Mr. Bowis: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced publication of the consultation paper in his oral statement yesterday, Official Report, columns 29-40.

Depressive Illnesses

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the cross-departmental studies which have been undertaken into the economic cost of depressive illnesses; what plans he has to commission further studies; and if he will make a statement. [28351]

Mr. Bowis: The Department's policy research programme is currently commissioning research through its mental health research initiative. This includes evaluation of the economic costs of mental disorder, including depressive illness.

Human Embryos

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many human embryos have been made available for artistic research in the last 30 years; what legal authority is required; if the embryos used in the project "Unnatural Selection" at the Barbican centre were obtained under a licence from the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority; and if he will make a statement. [28456]

Mr. Horam: The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1980 exists to regulate the creation and use of embryos for treatment and research purposes. Its licensing function came into operation on 1 August 1991.

The Barbican exhibition is the only event of its kind of which the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority is aware.

I understand that the embryos in question were, prior to the photographs being taken, donated by couples after their treatment cycles. I also understand that the couples involved had given their consent to photographs being taken and for the use of the photographs in the exhibition.

Drug Guidelines

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines of best practice in local drugs health education programmes are being prepared; and when they will be (a) completed and (b) issued. [27424]

Mr. Robin Squire: I have been asked to reply.

In respect of those innovative drugs education projects supported by the Department for Education and Employment under GEST—grant for education support and training, 16 projects were funded in 1995–96. These are currently being evaluated and the findings will be circulated widely and made available to schools in the summer.

ENVIRONMENT

Homeless Households

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the current number of homeless households in England and Wales which (a) have been accepted by local authorities, (b) are applying to be accepted by local authorities and (c) are outside the priority groups and have not applied to a local authority. [27497]

Mr. Clappison: In the quarter ending December 1995, local authorities in England accepted responsibility to secure accommodation for 27,490 households under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1985. At the end of this period there were around 9,000 households in temporary accommodation awaiting the outcome of inquiries into their application for housing under the homelessness legislation.

Households that are outside the priority groups and have not applied to local authorities under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1985 are by definition not generally known to local authorities, nor do we have research information that provides estimates of their numbers.

For information on Wales, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Castle Cement

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will hold a public inquiry into the matters raised by Castle Cement in its appeal against the Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution directions concerning the plant at Clitheroe. [27340]

Mr. Clappison: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has informed Castle Cement and the Environment Agency that he intends the appeal case to proceed by means of a public hearing. Details of the hearing will in due course be advertised locally, and interested parties will be able to submit evidence to the Secretary of State's inspector.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in what locations and in what quantities (a) the Atomic Energy Authority and (b) British Nuclear Fuels plc have been discharging radioactive waste into seas and estuaries through outfalls. [27344]

Mr. Clappison: Both the UKAEA and BNFL publish annual discharge reports, which include the location and quantities of discharged radioactive waste into seas and estuaries through outfalls. The most recent of these are (a) "Radioactive waste discharges from UKAEA establishments during 1994 and associated monitoring results" and, (b) "BNFL annual report on radioactive discharges and monitoring of the environment 1994: Vol 1: report on discharges and environmental monitoring; Vol 2: certificates of authorisation and environmental monitoring programmes". Both reports are available in the House of Commons Library.

Basking Sharks

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his progress towards securing endangered species status for basking sharks. [27558]

Mr. Clappison: The basking shark is currently classified as "insufficiently known" in the International Union for the Conservation of Nature red data list.

The Joint Nature Conservation Committee, the Government's statutory conservation adviser, is currently considering which species should be protected under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 as part of the third quinquennial review. The commmittee's final recommendations to the Secretary of State are due to be submitted in October 1996; it is too early to say whether the basking shark will be listed.

Housing (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the financial allocation from his Department to housing associations in Coventry for 1996–97; and what is the estimated figure for 1997–98. [27910]

Mr. Clappison: In 1996–97 the Housing Corporation is allocating £3.6 million housing association grant to housing associations for new social housing schemes in Coventry. In addition, these schemes will make use of other public subsidy valued at £490,000, through discounted land sales by the local authority. Revenue grant of £51,248 is also being allocated for special needs schemes.

Allocation details will be published shortly in the Housing Corporation's regional allocations statements. No firm estimates are available for 1997–98 allocations.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many social dwellings in Coventry are in need of repairs (a) in real terms and (b) as a percentage of the total social housing stock in Coventry; and if he will estimate the cost of such repairs; [27911]

(2) how many households were moved out of social housing in Coventry in 1995 as a result of the state of repair of their homes. [27913]

Mr. Clappison: Local authorities in England are asked to provide estimates of the numbers of their own dwellings and dwellings owned by housing associations in their area in need of renovation on 1 April in their annual housing investment programme HIP1 returns. The estimates given in Coventry's 1995 return were as follows:

	Unfit dwellings	Dwellings not unfit but in need of renovation
Local authority
Number	646	20,393
Proportion of stock	3.1 per cent.	96.9 per cent.
Housing associations
Number	10	126
Proportion of stock	0.2 per cent.	2.5 per cent.

The figures reported by authorities on the HIP1 return are their own estimates and are not necessarily complied on a consistent basis.

Information is not held centrally on the costs of renovating these dwellings nor on the numbers of households moved out of social housing because of the state of repair of the dwelling.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many social dwellings in Coventry will be demolished in 1996–97. [27912]

Mr. Clappison: There is a phased programme of demolitions on the Willenhall estate involving 136 local authority owned properties which will commence in 1996–97. These dwellings will be replaced with a mixture of dwellings which will be available for sale, shared ownership and rent. There is no known programme for the demolition of housing association dwellings.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average cost of building a new (a) social dwelling and (b) specialised social dwelling in Coventry. [27909]

Mr. Clappison: In Coventry the average cost in 1995–96 of a new general needs housing association home, with funding from the Housing Corporation, was £52,800. The average cost of a new special needs housing association home in 1995–96 was £53,700.

Housing Associations

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was his Department's financial allocation to housing associations in each year since 1990 (a) in real terms and (b) as a percentage change on the previous year. [27907]

Mr. Clappison: The public resources provided to housing associations through the Housing Corporation's approved development programme and through revenue grants and subsidies since 1990–91 are shown in my Department's annual report for 1996. A copy is in the Library of the House.

In addition, local authorities have provided funding to housing associations for the provision of new social housing.

Projected Housing Requirements

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the projected requirements for new house starts over the next (a) 10, (b) 15 and (c) 20 years; and what methodology is used to determine housing needs by (a) county and (b) region. [28287]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department of the Environment's household projections provide estimates of the future number of households by region, county and metropolitan and London boroughs. These are the starting point for developing housing needs requirement figures in regional planning guidance.

Regional conferences of planning authorities consider the revised projections and advise the Secretary of State of the number and distribution. This process has started in a number of regions and will lead to proposals for changing the housing figures in regional planning guidance. Once agreed, the new figures will be tested in alterations to structure plans and unitary development plans and, in turn, in alterations to local plans. Regional planning guidance usually looks ahead 15 years, structure plans 10 to 15 years and unitary development plans and local plans 10 years.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the discussion paper being prepared by his Department on the impact of population trends on housing construction requirements over the next 15 years. [28286]

Sir Paul Beresford: We hope to publish a discussion paper on the latest household projections before the summer recess.

Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre

Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to hand over the operation of the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre to the private sector. [28284]

Sir Paul Beresford: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the chief executive of the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre, Mr. M. C. Buck. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. C. Buck to Mr. Den Dover, dated 8 May 1996:

I would refer to your Parliamentary Question, "To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, if he has plans to hand over the operation of the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre to the private sector."

The Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre has been market tested during the last twelve months and the in-house team bid was successful in winning this test.

Environment Secretary John Gummer announced on 13 February 1996 that he had accepted the in-house team bid in a market test of the management of the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre.

In a Parliamentary Written Answer to Nigel Evans MP (Ribble Valley) on the result of the market test, Mr. Gummer said:

"I have now decided to award a five-year service level agreement to the in-house team, based on the existing Executive Agency for the Conference Centre. It will take effect from 1 April 1996. Having considered the advice of the steering group and of consultants, KPMG, I am satisfied that the bid submitted by this team offers better value for money than those received from elsewhere. It also satisfied the quality and the security requirements set for the test".

Village Shops

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to consult on the details of the proposed rate relief scheme for village shops; and if he will make a statement. [28842]

Mr. Gummer: I have today published a consultation paper setting out proposals for a new rate relief scheme for village shops. As foreshadowed in the White Paper, "Rural England: A Nation Committed to a Living Countryside", the proposals will help certain small general stores and post offices in rural villages. They mean that such businesses will see a reduction of at least 50 per cent. in their rates bills. Local authorities will be able to top this up to 100 per cent. and, in addition, will be able to grant relief to other rural shops and businesses which are of benefit to the community.

These proposals will provide significant help to small general stores and post offices, which are a feature of village life and which provide an invaluable service to local people who do not have cars or ready access to public transport. They will also give local authorities wide discretion to reduce the rates bills of other rural businesses, thereby helping to safeguard rural communities and preserve the fabric of village life.

Advisory Committee on Packaging

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the role and purpose of the advisory committee on packaging. [28882]

Mr. Gummer: In the answer that I gave to my hon. Friend the hon. Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Waterson) on 7 May, Official Report, column 73 I set out some of the background to the Government's decision to follow a shared approach as the basis for regulations which would give effect to the producer responsibility initiative and to the EC directive on packaging and packaging waste. Continuing partnership with industry is critical to success in this area and, following the agreement reached on 15 December, I have asked Sir Peter Parker to chair an advisory committee on packaging comprising some of the senior business representatives most closely involved in this initiative.

The external members of the committee are:

Sir Peter Parker KBE LVO: Chairman

Dr. Bill Cook: British Gas

Mr. Brian Curtis: CarnaudMetal Box—Foodcan UK

Mr. Peter Lipscomb: Guinness plc

Mr. John Longworth: Tesco plc

Mr. John Turner: Coca-Cola Schweppes Beverages

Mr. Keith Stenning: British Polythene Industries plc

Mr. Peter Williams: David S. Smith (Holdings) plc

Mr. Martin van Zwanenberg: Marks & Spencer plc

For its initial work the committee is supported by a technical working group of experts with particular experience of packaging and related issues.

In addition to the work it has already undertaken, the committee will continue to provide guidance on the introduction and implementation of regulations, based on the 15 December agreement, and will advise me, the President of the Board of Trade, the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales, the chairman of the Environment Agency and the chairman of the Scottish Environment Protection Agency.

The committee will advise on the effectiveness of regulations in delivering the EC directive targets and will help to monitor their operation. In particular, it will advise on arrangements for carrying out a review of the legal obligation, in the light of data submitted after the regulations have come into force, including consideration of the actual burden on individual companies.

In carrying out its work, the committee will keep in mind the Government's tests for the approach to legislation as set out in the Official Report on 2 February 1995, columns 762–64, the requirements placed on the Secretary of State by the enabling powers in the Environment Act 1995 and Ministers' emphasis on the desirability of maintaining a consensual approach for the development of an effective business-led initiative for the recovery and recycling of packaging waste in the UK.

I am grateful for the work already carried out by Sir Peter Parker and members of the advisory committee and the supporting technical group. I intend to publish the committee's preliminary advice to accompany the issue of draft regulations for consultation and at appropriate stages in the future.

Commission on Sustainable Development

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Commission on Sustainable Development meeting in New York between 18 April and 3 May, with particular reference to ocean pollution; [28124]

(2) who represented the United Kingdom Government at the Commission on Sustainable Development meeting in New York between 18 April and 3 May. [28123]

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 7 May 1996]: I led the United Kingdom's delegation to the fourth session of the Commission on Sustainable Development. As well as my Department, the delegation included officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Overseas Development Administration and the Department of Trade and Industry, and representatives from the non-governmental sector and local government. The commission agreed recommendations on a range of topics including oceans, atmosphere, finance, consumption and production, trade and environment and education.

In particular, we were successful in reaching agreement on the need for changes in the international machinery for taking decisions at the global level on the world's oceans so that environmental concerns are fully taken into account, and to promote the sustainable use of marine resources. The international workshop on the oceans which the UK and Brazil governments co-hosted in London last November played a major role in paving the way for the agreement. We also set in hand preparations for the 1997 special session of the General Assembly, which reviews progress since the Rio earth summit. I emphasised that it was essential that the special session should decide on the key issues which CSD should address in its future work.

I am placing in the Library copies of the chairman's summary of the meeting and of my speech to the session.

TRANSPORT

Vehicle Weight Limits

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to extend the 44-tonnes lorry limit to piggyback wagons; and if he will make a statement; [28553]

(2) what plans he has to extend the 44-tonnes lorry limit to interchange with ports; and if he will make a statement. [28558]

Mr. Norris: We shall consider over the next few months whether to propose any wider use of six-axled lorries with a maximum permitted gross weight of 44 tonnes.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve enforcement of the 44-tonnes lorry limit; and if he will make a statement. [28560]

Mr. Norris: I am not aware of any problems of enforcement in connection with the present restricted use of the 44-tonnes lorry weight limit, and therefore have no plans to change present arrangements.

Railway Penalty Payments

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how much Railtrack has received in penalties from (a) South West Trains and (b) all other train operating companies in the period 1 February to 31 March; [28551]

(2) how much Railtrack has paid in penalties to (a) South West Trains and (b) all other train operating companies in the period 1 February to 31 March. [28550]

Mr. Watts: These are commercial matters between Railtrack and the companies concerned.

British Rail Symbol

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the future use of British Rail's double arrow symbol. [28686]

Mr. Watts: On 7 May British Rail transferred the ownership of the double arrow symbol, and all common law trade marks and rights, to the ownership of the Secretary of State, who will in future license it for use in connection with the Great Britain rail network. Licences will be granted to British Rail, so that the symbol can continue to be used as its corporate logo.

The symbol will also be licensed to Railtrack and to other railway operators where it is to be used to indicate access to the national railway network—for example at stations and on most tickets and on the national railway timetable. The symbol will continue to be used as a traffic sign. Royalties will not be charged.

Minicabs (London)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what new measures the Government propose to regulate minicabs within Greater London. [28337]

Mr. Norris: In our response to the Transport Select Committee, Cm 2715, the Government agreed in principle with the Committee's recommendation that all private hire vehicles—minicabs—in London should be regulated.

It remains the Government's policy to introduce legislation to this effect when parliamentary time permits.

Business Subsidies

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the grants and loans provided by his Department to businesses, together with the criteria they have to meet in order to obtain the subsidy. [28194]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 7 May 1996]: The following grants were paid to businesses other than public sector bodies in 1995–96. The main conditions relating to the issue of these grants are contained in the relevant statute.

Grant name	Statutory authority
Freight Facilities grant	Railways Act 1993
Industrial Development Act grant	Industrial Development Act 1982

The Department does not provide loans to such businesses.

Civil Engineering Contracts

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations he has had with the director of the Highways Agency concerning the scrapping of the contractor self-certification system for quality assurance on (a) bridge steelwork and (b) other critical areas on civil engineering contracts. [28398]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 7 May 1996]: The agency does not recognise self-certification quality assurance, except where there is a requirement-provision in a European standard for self-certification, and requires that an element of second party quality control is implemented on contracts. The agency reserves the right to instigate second-third party quality control procedures on its contracts. There has been no discussion of action to scrap contractor self-certification quality assurance, but where a third party quality assurance scheme is introduced this will effectively supersede any self-certification that may exist in the area.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Office Space

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the square footage and cost of office space rented by his Department and its agencies and the number of his Department or agencies' buildings partly or fully unoccupied together with the square footage of that unoccupied office space and its estimated rental value where available in each of the past five financial years. [27725]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information shows the area and rental cost of the LCD estate for the period requested. The figures available are shown in square metres rather than square feet and represent the agents lettable area of the building rather than the whole building.

	Square metres	£
1991–92	616,790	64,314,423
1992–93	632,181	69,451,866
1993–94	663,871	77,575,962
1994–95	668,295	79,268,717
1995–96	629,087	69,324,056
1996–97	45,948	9,184,904

The LCD Estate includes the Public Trust Office and the Court Service estate, with the exception of the figures for 1996–97 which exclude accommodation covered by the Court Service following agency status. The chief executive of the Court Service will respond separately in respect of that period. The chief executives of Her Majesty's Land Registry and the Public Record Office will also reply separately.

The estate occupied by the Lord Chancellor's Department and its agencies has many types of building: offices, courts, residential properties, storage facilities and offices converted into courtrooms. The majority of the buildings have a combination of uses and our records, prior to the current year, do not distinguish between the different types. For the current year, the LCD HQ estate has a total of 1,783 sq m of vacant office space, which is encompassed in an overall review of office space currently being undertaken. The vacant space has an approximate rental value of £286,275.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mrs. Bridget Prentice, dated 8 May 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about rented office space on the Court Service estate. As you know, the Court Service was established as an Executive Agency of the Lord Chancellor's Department in April 1995 and it is, therefore, only possible to supply figures from that date.

The approximate area of the Court Service estate is 6,771,430 square feet. This figure represents the entire agency estate and includes courtrooms, office accommodation, judges' lodgings, storage space etc. It would only be possible to obtain the percentage of office space in this figure at disproportionate cost. The rental value of the estate for the financial year 1995/96 was approximately £69,342,056. This figure includes actual rent paid on leasehold properties and nominal rent paid on freehold properties held on the Common User Estate. As both types of rent were paid to the Department of the Environment it is not possible to identify what amount relates solely to leasehold properties.

The Court Service does not keep comprehensive financial records for empty office space on the estate and the information required could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Letter from John Manthorpe to Mrs. Bridget Prentice, dated 8 May 1996:

I have been asked by the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, to reply to your recent question on rented office space.

The square footage of office space rented by H M Land Registry at 31 March 1996 was 770,649 sq. ft at a cost of £4,646,813. The details of square footage and cost of unoccupied leasehold office space over the past five financial years is as follows:

Year	Space—sq. ft	Rent £	Number of buildings
1991–92	—	—	—
1992–93	11,480	127,634	Part only of one building
1993–94	19,002	204,587	Parts only of two buildings
1994–95	19,002	221,729	Parts only of two buildings
1995–96	32,657	305,559	One entire building and parts only of two buildings

Surplus accommodation has arisen in the Land Registry following reductions in its staff of some 3,400 from the 1989–90 peak. Disposals of 297,105 square feet of rented accommodation have taken place since 1989 and further major disposals are being negotiated.

Letter from Duncan Simpson to Mrs. Bridget Prentice, dated 8 May 1996:

In the absence of the Chief Executive, who is away from the Office on official business, I have been asked by the Lord Chancellor's Parliamentary Secretary to reply for the Public Record Office to your question about rented and unoccupied office space.

The Public Record Office rented no office space in the commercial property market in the past five financial years.

The Public Record Office's buildings form part of the Common User Estate and are primarily devoted to storing the public records. Office space within them over the past five financial years was about 177,540 square feet. The rental for office space, paid through the Property Repayment Service System, was:

1993–94: £1,403,981

1995–96: £1,274,621.

None of the Office's buildings has been partly or fully unoccupied over the past five financial years.

Doncaster Crown Court

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how long on average elapses between the date of a person being charged with an offence and the date of (a) arraignment and (b) conclusion of case at Doncaster Crown court for each of the main categories of serious crime. [27633]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked him to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 8 May 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your question about the average duration of criminal proceedings at Doncaster Crown Court. In preparing my reply, I have liaised with colleagues the Lord Chancellor's Department who are responsible for proceedings in the magistrates courts.

The average period between the date on which an offence takes place and the case being committed to Doncaster Crown Court by the magistrates court from 1994 to the present is 26.1 weeks. The figure is based on a survey done in three sample weeks each year and the number of cases on which the average is based is 39.

The average period from committal to arraignment or start of trial at Doncaster Crown Court in 1995 was 17.9 weeks. You asked for figures relating to the most serious cases. Doncaster does not however deal with the most serious offences, such as murder, which are instead committed to Leeds Crown Court. Figures for individual offences are not available in any event and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Doncaster Magistrates Court

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the chief inspector of magistrates court services last conducted an inspection into the efficiency of the Doncaster court; when the court will be next inspected; what assessment she made of the efficiency of the Doncaster court; and if he will send the hon. Member a copy of the report on the latest and all subsequent inspections. [27636]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: HM magistrates courts service inspectorate was established in January 1993 to inspect and report to the Lord Chancellor on the administration and organisation of all the magistrates courts committees in England and Wales, and is currently undertaking its first cycle of inspections. Doncaster MCC will be inspected, on dates yet to be arranged, between April 1997 and December 1998, with a post-inspection review to follow no later than 18 months from the end of the inspection. The hon. Member will receive a copy of the inspection report, once published.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Attorney-General what plans he has to reduce the budget of the Crown Prosecution Service; and if he will make a statement. [28233]

The Attorney-General: The budget for the Crown Prosecution Service agreed in the 1995 public expenditure survey is, in cash terms, in 1996–97 and in the following two years, £288 million, £286 million and £286 million respectively. Future spending plans will be the subject of discussion in this year's survey.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Lebanon

18. Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the prospects for peace in the Lebanon. [27210]

21. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy on the present attacks in Lebanon by Israel. [27214]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Members to the oral answer given in the House earlier today by my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary.

China

19. Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Britain's relations with China. [27211]

Mr. Rifkind: Our relationship with China is of great importance, particularly because of our shared interest in the successful transfer of sovereignty over Hong Kong next year.

27. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Chinese authorities about strengthening trade relations after the transfer of Hong Kong. [27220]

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary had wide-ranging discussions with Chinese leaders during his visit to China in January, and with the Chinese Foreign Minister in The Hague on 20 April.

EU Institutions

20. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has to increase the involvement of national parliaments in decision-making in EC institutions. [27212]

Mr. David Davis: We are looking at a number of proposals to increase the involvement of national parliaments in the European Union, such as a minimum period for documents and in particular draft legislation to be available for parliamentary scrutiny before these are discussed in the Council, and written Council reports to national parliaments on justice and home affairs and common foreign and security policy.

29. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his proposals for reforming the institutions of the European Union. [27222]

Mr. Davis: We have set out our approach to the IGC on many occasions, and notably in the White Paper, "A Partnership of Nations", which was debated on 21 March.

Intergovernmental Conference

30. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which EU member states attending the intergovernmental conference are supporting the United Kingdom Government's opposition to a further extension of qualified majority voting. [27224]

Mr. David Davis: Most other member states support some extension of qualified majority voting. However, they do not all agree where specifically it should apply. Some link extension to other issues, such as EC payment for policies which may be foisted upon them in consequence—for example, in the environmental area—and reweighting of votes. The position is therefore complex and will no doubt develop as the negotiations continue.

25. Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will meet the new Italian Prime Minister to discuss the Italian presidency of the intergovernmental conference. [27218]

Mr. Davis: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary expects to meet the new Italian Prime Minister soon after he has been sworn in.

28. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will report on the progress of the intergovernmental conference. [27221]

Mr. Davis: The second ministerial session of the IGC took place on 22 April. There have been six working group sessions to date. The next ministerial session is on 13 May.

Western Sahara

22. Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy on the future of Western Sahara. [27215]

Mr. Hanley: We continue to believe it essential that Morocco and Polisario co-operate fully with the UN operation in the Western Sahara. We await the Secretary-General's full report on 15 May.

Land Mines

23. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent undertakings he has given about United Kingdom policy on land mines; and if he will make a statement. [27216]

36. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to achieve an international ban on the sale and production of land mines. [27230]

Mr. David Davis: I set out recent changes to UK policy in my written answer to the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley) on 23 April, Official Report, column 84.

Commercial Sections

24. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role of commercial sections in assisting British manufacturing industry in north American markets. [27217]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Commercial staff at posts throughout north America provide a large range of services to support British manufacturing and other industries.

Iraq (UN Sanctions)

26. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on UN sanctions on Iraq. [27219]

Mr. Hanley: The purpose of sanctions is to ensure that Iraq complies with its obligations under relevant UN Security Council resolutions. Iraq remains a long way from compliance. UN Security Council resolution 986 is intended to alleviate the suffering of the Iraq people. We hope that the current discussions will succeed and that Iraq will implement the resolution.

Brazil

31. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Brazil. [27225]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Relations remain excellent, particularly on the economic front, and continue to improve. My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary had a most successful visit to Brazil in April.

EU Enlargement

32. Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the prospects for enlargement of the European Union. [27226]

Mr. David Davis: Britain wants enlargement to take place as soon as the candidates are ready to join. We are working hard to create the conditions in which enlargement can take place successfully.

Middle East Peace Process

33. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received concerning the middle east peace process. [27227]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the oral answer given in the House earlier today by my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary.

Gibraltar

34. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of the State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans next to visit Madrid to discuss the cross-border enforcement of European rules and regulations. [27228]

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary hopes to meet his new Spanish opposite number at the earliest opportunity to discuss a wide range of issues.

UN Commission on Human Rights

35. Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what were the conclusions of the 52nd session of the UN Commission on Human Rights in Geneva; and if he will make a statement on the policy of Her Majesty's Government on each of the conclusions. [27229]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The UN Commission on Human Rights adopted more than 100 resolutions and decisions on human rights thematic subjects and individual country situations. Voting details of the United Kingdom and other Commission members are contained in UN reports, copies of which will be deposited in the Libraries of both Houses.

Diplomatic Missions

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many additional diplomatic missions have been established in the region of the former Soviet Union and former Yugoslavia; at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [27412]

Mr. Hanley: Between 1991 and 1995, 13 additional diplomatic missions were opened in the former Soviet Union, including one trade office, and four in the former Yugoslavia. The latest detailed cost figures available are for 1994–95. The cost of nine of the 13 missions in the FSU in that year was £5,646,352. The remaining four were opened since 1994–95. The costs of the missions in former Yugoslavia in 1994–95 were £2,245,698. All of this expenditure was covered by redeployment of existing resources.

United Nations (Budget Deficit)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with officials of the United Nations and the United States about the UN budget deficit. [28242]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We are in close and regular contact with both partners in the UN and with UN officials. A package of measures, including UK proposals for reform of the UN's scales of assessment, has been adopted by the EU and put forward in UN discussions.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the UN budget deficit. [28243]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: In a recent update of his forecast of the UN financial situation for the rest of the year, Under Secretary-General Joseph Connor predicted an overall positive cash balance of $388 million for the end of 1996. In the meantime, pending receipts of arrears promised for the autumn, it will, however, be necessary for the UN to cross-borrow again from its peacekeeping accounts to finance regular budget activities.

European Parliament

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place at the intergovernmental conference on the powers of the European Parliament. [27203]

Mr. David Davis: The IGC working group discussed the powers of the European Parliament on 22–23 April.

Saudi Arabia

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on United Kingdom relations with Saudi Arabia. [27213]

Mr. Hanley: Saudi Arabia is a country of great importance to the stability of the middle east and to the economic prosperity of the UK and the industrialised world. I believe that our relations are excellent.

Kashmir

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of India over the International Committee of the Red Cross being required to withdraw from Indian-occupied Kashmir. [28441]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 7 May 1996]: We understand that the ICRE is now operating, at its own suggestion, a reduced programme in Kashmir for the duration of the election period.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of India calling for an investigation into the killing of the chairman of the Kashmir Commission of Justice. [28449]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 7 May 1996]: Our high commission in New Delhi has raised our concern at Mr. Andrabi's death with the Indian authorities on a number of occasions and has pressed for an inquiry. We understand that the Jammu and Kashmir high court has ordered a police investigation into the circumstances surrounding Mr. Andrabi's death. The Indian National Human Rights Commission has also announced an investigation.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to allow nursery vouchers to be redeemed in respect of provision during school holidays. [28084]

Mr. Robin Squire: The voucher will cover a minimum of 36 weeks spread over three terms. In maintained schools it will cover the full school term. Where providers in the private and voluntary sectors do not operate termly, it is intended that from September 1996 the voucher should cover broadly equivalent termly periods. Beyond the minimum of 36 weeks, providers can offer additional service, but parents will be expected to meet the cost.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many applications for nursery vouchers she has received from providers on behalf of parents of four-year-olds in the pilot authorities, who had not applied for a voucher before term began. [28085]

Mr. Squire: Seven such applications have been received.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 22 April, Official Report, column 48, how many places are available for voucher-bearing four-year-olds in (a) the private and voluntary sector providers and (b) the maintained sector providers that have been initially validated. [28087]

Mr. Squire: All maintained schools in the phase one local education authorities have been initially validated. The estimated number of places available for four-year-olds in the maintained sector as at January 1995 is given in the following table. The number of places in the private and voluntary sectors taken up by voucher-bearing four-year-olds will be available once the voucher returns have been analysed.

LEA	Estimated number of four-year-olds in maintained provision at January 1995
Kensington and Chelsea	800
Wandsworth	2,600
Westminster	1,100
Norfolk	6,300

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 22 April, Official Report column 48, how many of the 40 providers that have been initially validated, but did not have any four-year-olds on the roll at the time of registration are in (i) the maintained sector, (ii) the voluntary sector and (iii) the private sector; and how many places for voucher-bearing four-year-olds are being offered by each category. [28133]

Mr. Squire: The 40 providers referred to in the earlier answer are all from the private and voluntary sectors. It is not possible to differentiate between private and voluntary sector providers. Information on the number of places provided will be available once vouchers returned from providers have been analysed.

Access to Work

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Eduction and Employment if she will make a statement on the help to be made available from the access to work programme to disabled people who are self-employed. [28881]

Mr. Paice: In her statement on 26 March, Official Report, column 489, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced an increase in the budget and operational arrangements for the access to work programme in 1996–97. She also said that particular factors applied in the case of the self-employed, and that the help to be provided to them would be considered further.

From 1 June, access to work will meet up to 90 per cent. of approved costs over a threshold of £100 per year for all new applications. This means that a greater proportion of costs will be met than for employees generally. The programme will also provide 100 per cent. of all approved costs in excess of £10,000 over three years. In addition to this, existing commitments for the self-employed will continue to be met for a transitional period of three years.

All other arrangements will be in line with the announcement made on 26 March.

Business Subsidies

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the grants and loans provided by her Department to businesses, together with the criteria they have to meet in order to obtain the subsidy. [28187]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 7 May 1996]: The Department has a number of initiatives aimed directly at employers of all sizes. These provide financial assistance, some of which is matched by employers' own contributions, to achieve a variety of business objectives. The initiatives, together with the source of the published criteria are listed as follows:

Initiative	Eligible firms	Published criteria
Employer investment in people programme	all firms	TEC operating agreement (copy in Library)
Skills for small businesses	under 50 employees	TEC operating agreement
Small firms training loans	up to 50 employees	Small firms training loans booklet
Skills challenge	under 200 employees	Skills challenge prospectus

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Office Space

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the square footage and cost of office space rented by his Department and its agencies and the number of his Department or agencies' buildings partly or fully unoccupied together with the square footage of that unoccupied office space and its estimated rental value where available in each of the past five financial years. [27720]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Prior to 1 April 1996, Property Holdings—part of the Department of the Environment—was responsible for the vast majority of office space, including any vacant space, rented as part of the Government's civil estate. Retrospective information on the past five years is therefore not readily available and could not be obtained except at disproportionate cost.

Within my Department, management of property is now delegated to a series of property centres to maximise synergy with business operations. Rent, rates and service charges for office accommodation rented by DTI headquarters' property centres are forecast to cost £36 million in 1996–97 in respect of 1,257,000 sq. ft. Of this area, 24,000 sq. ft. or 2 per cent., in two partly occupied buildings, is empty and available for sub-letting, with an associated pro rata rent of £0.26 million. Identical information for agencies is not yet readily available except at disproportionate cost.

Taiwanese Companies

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list each Taiwanese company that has invested in the United Kingdom over the last 10 years, indicating the date and location of investment; and if he will make a statement. [27902]

Mr. Oppenehiem: The information is as follows:

Name	Date	Location
Lite-On	1991	Ashington, Northumberland
Synpac Pharmaceuticals Ltd.	1991	Bedlington, Northumberland
Europa Magnetics Corporation	1993	Cramlington, Northumberland
Ringtel Electronics (UK) Ltd.	1995	Cwmbran, Wales
Mitac Europe Ltd.	1988	Telford, Shropshire
Enta Technologies	1990	Telford, Shropshire
Teco Electric Europe	1993	Trafford Park, Manchester
Wan Hai Steamship Co.	1990	Chorley, Lancashire
William and Jones	1995	South Liverpool
Chunghwa Picture Tubes Co. Ltd.	1995	Lanarkshire, Scotland
Chicony	1995	Greenock, Scotland
Hon Hai Precision Co. Ltd.	1995	Erskine, Scotland

To our knowledge, 12 of the 15 Taiwanese companies manufacturing in Europe are in the UK. Many of these companies have expanded their operations since their first investment, demonstrating the excellence of the UK as a base for overseas investment.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many people are employed by companies from Taiwan in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland, (d) Northern Ireland and (e) the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [27944]

Mr. Oppenheim: The numbers of people employed by Taiwanese manufacturing companies in the UK are as follows:

England:	2,010
Wales:	100
Scotland:	60
Northern Ireland:	0

The figure for Scotland is likely to increase by 3,300 jobs within the next three years due to the recent Chunghwa Picture Tubes investment.

Her Majesty's Government welcome inward investment from Taiwan. We firmly believe that the UK remains the ideal base for Taiwanese and other overseas investors to tackle the wider European market. Our outstanding record of attracting inward investment from all over the world bears this out.

Computers

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the outcome of his Department's survey of the effect of the turn of the century on the computers of United Kingdom organisations; what is his assessment of the availability of skills required to respond to the problem and the cost concerned; and what action is being taken to alert and help businesses of all sizes. [27921]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The survey revealed a high level of awareness amongst IT directors of organisations. The technical skills required are not demanding, but the scale of an organisation's problem can be reliably assessed only if an audit is carried out. The cost of fixing the problem depends on the size and age of an organisation's software portfolio. My Department will provide information on our world wide web site, and through the business links, and will be persuading senior management to take the problem seriously. There is time to deal with it if tackled now. The longer it is left, the higher the likely cost of remedial work. I am urging all chief executives to discover now for themselves the extent of the problem in their companies.

Personal Injury Insurance Compensation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures he proposes to reduce the time personal injury insurance compensation takes to be processed. [27905]

Mr. Nelson: This is a matter primarily for the insurance industry. The Association of British Insurers, the industry's principal trade association, has a code of practice which requires member insurers to settle valid claims without delay.

Not only is it in policyholders' interests for claims to be dealt with swiftly, it is also in the interest of insurers. By settling claims quickly they reduce their administrative costs. Failure to do so will encourage customers to turn to insurers offering a better service.

Some claim disputes cannot be resolved other than by a legal action. Lord Woolf has already published an interim report addressing cost, delay and complexity associated with the civil justice system. He is due to publish a final report in July this year.

Business Links

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each business link (a) its location and (b) the number of staff employed. [28533]

Mr. Page: I am placing a list of business link addresses in the Library of the House.

Business links are partnerships involving all the main business support organisations. As such, their services are provided by staff who are employed by those organisations but co-located in or seconded to the business links, as well as by staff who are directly employed by the business link itself. There is no central record of the numbers of staff employed in each business link and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many DTI civil servants are currently employed in the business links. [28537]

Mr. Page: A total of 107 DTI staff are currently co-located in business links.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many civil servants from his Department have been seconded to business links; and where each of them is currently situated. [28154]

Mr. Page [holding answer 7 May 1996]: A total of 107 DTI staff were co-located in business links on 1 May 1996. They are located as follows:

Yugoslavia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what contacts his Department has had with Belgrade with a view to promoting British trading interests since the official recognition of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. [27968]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 7 May 1996]: The Federal Republic of Yugoslavia was recognised officially on 9 April, but my Department began promoting actively British interest in the market on 22 November, when UN trade sanctions were suspended. Officials had discussions on promoting UK-Federal Republic of Yugoslavia trade with senior ministers in Belgrade in December. My Department has prepared information on the market which it sends out to interested companies; it also worked closely with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in arranging the mission of senior business executives which my hon. Friend the Minister of State at the Foreign Office led to Belgrade in February. A trade mission from Montenegro will be visiting the UK in July and there are plans for a major event in London to promote trade with the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. In taking such measures, and others, to promote British interests my Department has been working closely with the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia embassy in London and the British embassy in Belgrade.

Research Establishments

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what conclusions he has reached on the first tranche of public sector research establishments being considered under the prior options review. [28259]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 7 May 1996]: The Government are currently considering the outcome of these reviews and conclusions will be announced as soon as possible.

Defence Exports (China)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what (a) strategic and (b) regulatory considerations are taken into account in deciding whether to grant a licence for the export of airborne early warning sensors and scanners to China. [27371]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 30 April 1996]: Export licences are considered on a case-by-case basis in the light of our national and international commitments.

Since 7 June 1989, the UK has enforced an EU embargo on the sale to China of "weapons and equipment which could be used for internal repression". The current embargo guidelines were announced by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, on 4 April 1995, Official Report, column 979.

Those defence and defence-related goods requiring an export licence are listed in the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, as amended.

PRIME MINISTER

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Prime Minister what evidence he has evaluated proving a link between BSE and (a) Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease and (b) other human diseases. [28542]

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health made a statement on 20 March, Official Report, columns 375–76, relating to the expert scientific advice received from the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee about the previously unrecognised form of CJD. SEAC's advice is that, although there is no direct evidence of a link, on current data and in the absence of any credible alternative, the most likely explanation at present is that these cases are linked to exposure to BSE before the introduction of the specified bovine offals ban in 1989. The findings of the national CJD surveillance unit, on which that advice was based, have since been published in The Lancet of 6 April 1996.

We have not yet received any advice to suggest that BSE might be linked to other human diseases.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Hong Kong (Overseas Public Servants) Act

Mr. Coe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements have been made in respect of new expenditure under the Hong Kong (Overseas Public Servants) Act 1996. [28911]

Mr. Hanley: The Hong Kong (Overseas Public Servants) Act 1996, which received Royal Assent in February, provides for a compensation and pension package involving compensation and resettlement payments to Hong Kong overseas civil service officers.

Parliamentary approval of this new expenditure is being sought in the 1996–97 main estimate for ODA's overseas superannuation vote, class II, vote 6. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £3 million is being met by a repayable advance from the contingency fund.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Metropolitan police officers were (a) prosecuted and (b) disciplined in each of the last five years arising from cases where awards of damages or out-of-court settlements had been made; and in cases where officers were disciplined what form the discipline took. [27154]

Mr. Maclean: The figures given are for cases where disciplinary action was taken and where the civil action or settlement was over £10.000. The figures for 1991 and 1992 do not include cases where informal disciplinary action only was taken.

Year	Cases		Action	Penalty
1992	Case 1	1 officer	Substantiated by Police Complaint Authority Tribunal	Reprimanded
	Case 2	7 officers	Formal discipline	Dismissed
	Case 3	1 officer	Formal discipline following a criminal conviction	Dismissed
		1 officer	Informal discipline	Words of advice following an acquittal
		1 officer	Informal discipline	Word of advice
1993	Case 1	1 officer	Formal discipline	Fined
		1 officer	Formal discipline	Cautioned
1994	Case 1	1 officer	Informal discipline	Admonished/ words of advice
	Case 2	1 officer	Informal discipline	Admonished/ words of advice
1995	Case 1	3 officers	Informal discipline	Strictly admonished
		1 officer	No action as he had already left the service
	Case 2	2 officers	Acquitted of criminal charges	Not yet settled

In addition there were two further cases which, although it cannot be confirmed from the available information, appear to relate to civil actions involving payments of over £10,000. Each case involved an officer who was subject to informal discipline and given words of advice or admonished.

Legal Actions

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the cost to his Department of each legal case against the Department since 23 May 1993 where the case has (a) been judged against his Department and (b) settled before court judgment; and if he will make a statement. [27559]

Mr. Howard: It is estimated that since 23 May 1993 there have been over 4,000 legal cases against the Home Office, including applications for judicial review and claims for personal injuries. No central record is kept of the outcome of these cases and it is not therefore possible to provide the information in the form requested.

Metropolitan Police (Racial Discrimination)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many instances of racial discrimination in employment in the Metropolitan police service were dealt with under their disciplinary procedures in (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1995–96 and with what outcomes, broken down by ethnic origin of alleged victim and perpetrator; [27871]

(2) what was the total number of complaints of racial discrimination in (a) employment made by police officers against the Metropolitan police service in 1994–95 and 1995–96; (b) and how many were dealt with and disposed of at (i) the informal stage, (ii) following a formal complaint under the internal grievance procedure and (iii) following an application to an industrial tribunal indicating for (i) to (iii) (1) the types of complaint, (2) their outcomes including the terms of any settlements and disciplinary action taken and (3) the time taken to deal with them from receipt to disposal, broken down by (A) gender and (B) ethnic origin of complainant. [27870]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the commissioner that there are no instances of racial discrimination in employment in the Metropolitan police recorded by the complaints investigation bureau or personnel management branch between 1994 and the present. The commissioner informs me that there were 17 allegations of race discrimination dealt with under the Metropolitan police internal grievance procedure in 1994, one in 1995 and none so far in 1996. The informal stage of this procedure was not introduced until 1 April 1996. All these allegations were made by male officers. The results of such cases were not recorded centrally until 1995. The one case for that year was resolved, but, in accordance with the grievance procedure, results are confidential. The ethnic origin of the complainant, the types of complaint made and the time taken to deal with these complaints are not recorded centrally, although the Metropolitan police sets a standard for dealing with all grievance procedure within seven weeks.

As regards cases taken to industrial tribunal, there are no figures available for 1994. Since 1995, there have been 15 cases which involved an allegation of racial discrimination within the Metropolitan police. Of these, two were withdrawn and two have been settled, the details of which are confidential. The remaining 11 are still to be resolved. Six of the complainants were female and nine male. The ethnic origin of the complainant, the time taken to deal with the cases and the types of allegations are not recorded centrally.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made to date by the Metropolitan police service in implementing the equal opportunities strategy developed in 1994. [27872]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that results so far include the creation of a positive action team within the Metropolitan police's personnel department, which concentrates on boosting recruitment from ethnic minorities; more recruitment advertising in minority press; regular meetings between police and representatives of minority groups; the inclusion of equal opportunities issues in all management development training courses; and the introduction of a new grievance procedure. A steering committee chaired by the Metropolitan police's director of personnel oversees these initiatives, and a revised equal opportunities statement will be published shortly by the Commissioner.

Electro-shock Equipment

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many licences have been issued by his Department for the handling, storage, distribution or manufacture of electro-shock devices to (a) companies or (b) individuals; and if he will list the companies involved. [27718]

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) on 28 March at column 678.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of prisoners held on remand have received custodial sentences in each of the last five years. [28110]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Ian Pearson, dated 8 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the proportion of prisoners held on remand who have received custodial sentences in each of the last five years.

The available information on the proportion of remand prisoners in England and Wales subsequently receiving a custodial sentence is given in successive volumes of 'Prison statistics England and Wales' (Table 2.6 of the 1994 edition, Cm 3087), copies of which are in the Library. Information for 1995 is not yet available.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the cost of remand prisoners to the Prison Service in each of the last five years. [28112]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Ian Pearson, dated 8 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the cost of remand prisoners to the Prison Service in each of the last five years.

Information is not available in the form requested as it is not possible to distinguish the cost of keeping different types of offender in custody when held within the same establishment.

The average number of untried, unconvicted and unsentenced prisoners held in custody over the last five years is:

1992–93: 9,862

1993–94: 11,235

1995–96: 11,200

The net operating cost per prisoner per year over the same period is:

1991–92: £23,047

1992–93: £25,759

1993–94: £21,587

1995–96: Not yet available

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of prisoners held on remand, by region, in each of the last five years. [28107]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current rate of suicides among (a) remand prisoners and (b) the rest of the prison population. [28111]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Ian Pearson, dated 8 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the current rate of suicides among remand prisoners and the rest of the prison population.

The number of self-inflicted deaths to date in 1996 is 25. Twelve of these were deaths of sentenced prisoners and thirteen were prisoners on remand. The inquests have not yet taken place into any of these deaths and I am therefore unable to confirm any verdicts.

Life Prisoners (Personal Possessions)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the personal possessions that a prison inmate, serving a life sentence in a prison in England or Wales, is allowed to have in the cell; and if he will make a statement. [27957]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 8 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the personal possessions that life sentence prisoners are allowed to have in their cells.

The personal possessions that prisoners, including those serving life sentences, are allowed to have in their cells varies between establishments and are listed in each prison's published statement of facilities. Prison Standing Orders specify a number of personal items which prisoners may have in their possessions, which can be added to at the governor's discretion. The type of items permitted are determined by considerations such as security; health and safety; and by how appropriate they are to the custodial sentence the prisoner is serving.

The overall amount of property prisoners are allowed in their cells is subject to volumetric controls, currently being introduced in all prisons in England and Wales.

Prisoners (Education and Training)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours of education and training were available to prisoners at Highpoint gaol in the last full year for which figures are available. [27941]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mrs. Anne Campbell, dated 8 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the hours of education and training available to prisoners at Highpoint prison.

The number of hours available to prisoners for education and training at Highpoint prison, from 1 March 1995 to 29 February, 1996, was 16,061 hours for education and 8,096 hours for training.

Mr. Norman Manning

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current position with regard to (a) the Prison Service investigation and (b) the investigation of the chief officer of the West Mercia constabulary into the death of Mr. Norman Manning in Long Lartin prison on 29 September 1994; when he expects these investigations to be concluded; if the reports will be made public; and if he will make a statement. [28142]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 8 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the investigations by the Prison Service and the West Mercia Constabulary into the death of Mr. Norman Manning in Long Lartin prison on 29 September 1994.

The Prison Service investigation has been concluded and no evidence was found to indicate that procedures had failed to meet the need to care for Mr. Manning. After enquiries by the West Mercia Constabulary, two prisoners have been charged with the murder of Mr. Manning. Until the court case is resolved the reports will not be made public.

Reconviction Rates

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of offenders are (a) convicted of further offences during the two-year period following the completion of the custodial section of prison sentences and (b) convicted of further offences which were committed during the two-year period following the completion of the custodial section of prison sentences. [27611]

Miss Widdecombe: The most recent available information relates to a sample of sentenced prisoners discharged from prison in 1992. The percentage who were convicted of a further offence during the two-year period following release was 51 per cent. There is no information centrally available on how many of those offences were committed during this period.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what have been the reconviction rates for (a) two years and (b) five years after release for (i) adults, (ii) 14 to 16-year-olds, (iii) 15 to 17-year-olds, (iv) 16 to 18-year-olds and (v) 18 to 21-year-olds in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [28236]

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is available only for all the age bands requested for those released between 1987 and 1992. Reconviction rates within five years of release from prison are currently available only for those released during 1987.

The available information is as follows:

Information is not available for some of the age groups requested and the figure for 14 to 16-year-olds relates to male prisoners only.

[3] Figures are supplied for those aged 18 to 20 in addition to those aged 18 to 21 as prisoners aged 21 at sentence are included among adults.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the probation service's record against its key performance indicators. [28227]

Mr. Sackville: The latest available information is contained in annexe I to the three-year plan for the probation service, published by the Home Office on 30 January, a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money has been allocated to the probation service in each of the last six years; and if he will make a statement. [28231]

Mr. Sackville: This information is given in the Home Office annual report for 1996[1], page 65, table 8.i, a copy of which was placed in the Library.

Prisons (Drugs)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures and actions are taken against prisoners found positive through mandatory drug testing for, or found in possession of, each type of mainstream illegal drug; and if he will make a statement. [28240]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 8 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the procedures and actions taken against prisoners found positive through mandatory drug testing or found in possession of drugs.

Offences relating to drugs within prison are pursued either through internal disciplinary and administrative procedures or by referral to the police for consideration for prosecution. It is for the prison governor to decide, in the light of the seriousness of an alleged offence of possession or supply, whether it should be referred to the police or dealt with through internal disciplinary procedures.

The full range of disciplinary sanctions is available to governors in dealing with drug offences. The most common disciplinary response when a prisoner is found guilty at adjudication of drug misuse, possession or supply is the addition of up to 42 days to the sentence. Cautions and suspended punishments are also available where there are mitigating circumstances.

When found guilty of drug misuse, the prisoner may also be required to undergo a repeat test or a programme of frequent tests. Other responses to drug offences may include their consideration as a factor when re-categorisation is considered; in the restriction of release on temporary licence and other privileges; and the imposition of closed visits.

Prison Population

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the numbers for the (a) male, (b) female and (c) total prison population in England and Wales for the last day in each of the past 24 months; and if he will make a statement. [28241]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

John Blair

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when John Blair, detained in Her Majesty's prison Wakefield, applied to be repatriated to the Republic of Ireland; [28447]

(2) on what date John Blair, detained in Her Majesty's prison Wakefield, applied to be transferred to another prison; and when a decision is to be taken on his application. [28448]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 7 May 1996]: Mr. Blair, who is at present serving a prison sentence in Wakefield prison, registered an interest in repatriation to the Republic of Ireland in November of last year, when detained at Whitemoor prison. His case is at present under consideration.

Mr. Blair has not applied formally to transfer to another prison in England or Wales, so this information cannot be provided. Mr. Blair requested a transfer verbally and his request will be considered as soon as a vacancy arises.

Gang Violence

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what role has been played to date by MI6 in respect of gang violence; [28461]

(2) if he will commission an inquiry into the desirability of establishing a special national unit to tackle violent crime with particular reference to gang activity; [28463]

(3) what steps are being taken to investigate whether there is a link between organised crime, protection rackets and companies which supply bouncers and doormen to nightclubs and public houses; [28455]

(4) what steps are being taken to address the incidence of violence linked with gang activity; [28460]

(5) what percentage of violent crime can be attributed to organised gangs. [28466]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 7 May 1996]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Patrick Kelly

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when Patrick Kelly applied to be repatriated to prison in the Irish Republic; in which prison he was detained when his application for repatriation was accepted; and if he will make a statement; [28439]

(2) if he will list the names of those individuals and organisations who have submitted representations urging him to authorise the transfer to the Irish Republic of Patrick Kelly. [28440]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 7 May 1996]: Mr. Kelly first requested to be repatriated to the Republic of Ireland on 27 January 1994 at Parkhurst prison. Consideration could not be given to this request until the Republic of Ireland ratified the Council of Europe convention on the transfer of sentenced persons. The convention came into force for the Republic of Ireland on 1 November 1995.

Thirty-one representations have been received from members of the clergy, Members of Parliament, Members of the Irish Parliament, prisoner support groups and members of the public.

Scotland v. England Football Match

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to ensure the safety of Scottish supporters at the Scotland v. England match at Wembley on 15 June, with particular reference to the segregation of rival supporters; and if he will make a statement. [28263]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 7 May 1996]: The overall policing strategy for Euro 96 is aimed at ensuring the safety and well being of all genuine and law-abiding football supporters who will be coming to England to enjoy Euro 96. The hon. Member can be assured that adequate security arrangements will be in place for the England v. Scotland match on 15 June both inside and outside Wembley stadium.

The football authorities have taken account of the importance of segregating rival fans in their plans for allocating seats.

Anyone intending to disrupt Euro 96 matches, and so spoil the enjoyment of others, can expect to be swiftly dealt with by the police, prosecuting authorities and the courts.

Boot Camps

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what means he will evaluate the effectiveness of the boot camp experiment; and if he will make a statement. [27923]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 7 May 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 8 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the means used to evaluate the effectiveness of the boot camp experiment.

We will assess changes in the attitudes and behaviour of the young offenders sent to Colchester young offender institution and the high intensity training centre at Thorn Cross young offender institution. We will also monitor re-convictions after release. The results will be compared with those from a control group of similar young offenders who will experience conventional young offender institution regimes.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research is available within the Prison Service on the probable reconviction rates from the high impact or boot camp regimes; and if he will make a statement. [27926]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 7 May 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 8 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about research available within the Prison Service on the probable reconviction rates from the high impact or boot camp regimes.

The two initiatives which we have announced, namely High Intensity Training and Colchester young offender institution, are both pilots. They themselves will be providing evidence of the effectiveness of the new approaches adopted, and there are no directly parallel initiatives to provide evidence at present on likely reconviction rates.

There is limited relevance in research on other schemes. Copies of readily available published research into American boot camps were placed in the Library of the House last year.

I must stress however that our two regimes are not copies of American boot camps.

Forensic Science Service

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many laboratories will close and how many jobs will be lost as a result of the merger of the Forensic Science Service with the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory and if he will make a statement. [27925]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 7 May 1996]: Restructuring proposals within the Forensic Science Service will result in the closure of one laboratory at Aldermaston, at the end of 1996. Possible closure of a further two laboratories is subject to further consultation. The merger with the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory has allowed the restructuring to be planned on a national basis throughout England and Wales, but the need for major restructuring to streamline the service had been identified prior to the decision for the two organisations to be merged. All present scientific caseworking staff will be offered jobs in the FSS, but there will be some reduction in support staff.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when plans to merge the Forensic Science Service with the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory will become operable; what safeguards will be put in place to ensure the impartiality of the new service; and if he will make a statement. [27927]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 7 May 1996]: The Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory merged with the Forensic Science Service on 1 April 1996 to make the new FSS a national service throughout England and Wales. It remains a Home Office executive agency and the chief executive continues to have delegated authority for its operation under the terms of its framework agreement and within the policies determined by the Secretary of State. These include maintenance of the required impartiality and quality of its work, including its science. The FSS leads the way for forensic science organisations in external accreditation of its procedures to NAMAS M10 and ISO 9000 standards.

Police Information Technology Organisation

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the police information technology organisation will become operable; what plans he has to contract it out; and if he will make a statement. [27928]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 7 May 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Sutton and Cheam (Lady Olga Maitland) on 1 April at column 60. There are no plans to contract out the police information technology organisation, although many of the information technology services it provides will continue to be delivered under contract by private sector suppliers.

Recidivision

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what percentage of offenders are (a) convicted of further offences during the two-year period following the completion of a probation order and (b) convicted of further offences which were committed during the two-year period following the completion of a probation order; [27573]

(2) what percentage of offenders are (a) convicted of further offences during the two-year period following the completion of a community service order and (b) convicted of further offences which were committed during the two-year period following the completion of a community service order. [27608]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 7 May 1996]: The most recent available information relates to samples of offenders who commenced orders in 1987. The percentage of offenders who were convicted of a further offence during the two-year period following the completion of a probation order was 44 per cent. and the corresponding percentage for community service was 47 per cent. These figures were first published in table 4.3 of the Home Office publication "Probation Statistics, England and Wales, 1994".

Completion of an order does not necessarily imply completion without reoffending and a proportion of those completing orders will be reconvicted on the date of termination. If the termination date is included in the two-year follow-up period, the reconviction rates for probation and community service are then 49 and 52 per cent. respectively.

Reconviction rates that are usually quoted relate to reconviction during the two-year period following commencement of orders. The most recent information relates to samples of offenders commencing orders in 1992. The percentage of offenders reconvicted within two years of commencement of a probation order was 58 per cent. and the corresponding percentage for community service was 55 per cent.

There is no information available centrally on the percentages convicted of further offences which were committed during the two-year period following the completion of orders.

Ministry of Defence Police Officers

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the Home Office constabularies in England and Wales whose control rooms can broadcast to and receive calls from the personal radios of Ministry of Defence police officers. [27807]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 7 May 1996]: Where necessary, local arrangements exist to enable Ministry of Defence police officers to be in two-way radio contact with Home Office constabularies. I am aware that the following forces in England and Wales have entered into such local arrangements:

Avon and Somerset
Cheshire
Devon and Cornwall
Dorset
Essex
Gloucestershire
Gwent
Hampshire
Kent
Lancashire
Merseyside
Metropolitan North Wales
North Yorkshire
South Wales
Staffordshire
Suffolk
Surrey
Sussex
Thames Valley
Wiltshire

Kashmir

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans Her Majesty's Government have to encourage the Government of India to enter into negotiations under the auspices of the United Nations, to secure a settlement of the Kashmir dispute based on self-determination for the people of Kashmir. [28450]

Mr. Hanley: I have been asked to reply.

We continue to believe that the best way forward on Kashmir should involve simultaneous progress on dialogue between India and Pakistan, as provided for under the 1972 Simla agreement; improvement in human rights in Kashmir and a genuine political process there; and a clear cessation of external support for violence in Kashmir.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Historic Buildings (Disrepair)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to her answer of 29 April, Official Report, column 371, if she will list (a) the 31 historic buildings known to be in disrepair and at risk and (b) the 17 for which Departments have disposal proposals, indicating for each the Department involved. [27874]

Mr. Sproat: Details of the historic buildings on the Government estate which are known to be in disrepair and at risk are given in annexe 3 to the conservation unit's annual conservation report on the Government's historic estate 1994–95, published in March; copies are available in the Library. Some entries on this list cover more than one building.

Most of these buildings at risk are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence, who has informed my Department's conservation unit of disposal plans for at least 17 of them. Information about these and other historic buildings on the defence estate proposed for disposal are contained in the Defence Estate Organisation's annual report for 1994–95, "Defending our Heritage", copies of which are available in the Library.

National Lottery Funding

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much national lottery funding has been allocated to the South Bank Centre and its environs by each of the funds. [27427]

Mr. Sproat: There have been three awards, to date, allocated to the South Bank and its environs. The information is as follows:

Body	Announced	Recipient	Amount £
Arts	30 March 1995	South Bank Centre	980,000
Arts	21 September 1995	British Film Institute	250,000
Arts	16 April 1996	Royal National Theatre	31,590,000
Total			32,820,000

Broadcasting Complaints Commission

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to amend the Broadcasting Act 1990 to set a time limit within which the Broadcasting Complaints Commission is required to answer complaints; and if she will make a statement. [27937]

Mr. Sproat: The Government have no plans to amend the Broadcasting Act in this way. Although the commission strives to process complaints speedily, some cases, whether they concern allegations of unfairness or infringement of privacy or both, may deal with particularly complex issues and involve delays beyond the commission's control, and it is right that the commission should consider carefully all elements of such cases before making its adjudication.

Museums and Galleries (Attendances)

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will publish the attendance figures for the financial year ended 31 March reported by the national museums and galleries for which she is responsible, broken down into the individual institutions, but including their outstations, with figures in each case of the percentage increase or decrease on the attendance figures for the preceding year. [25517]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The British Museum, national gallery, national portrait gallery, Wallace collection, Tate gallery, though it charges for admission to St. Ives, national museums, and Galleries on Merseyside, though it charges for admission to two of its seven sites, and Victoria and Albert Museum do not charge for admissions, and therefore the number of visits is only an estimate, or counted by other means.

	Number of visits in 1994–95 (million)	Forecast number of visits in 1995–96 (million)	Provisional percentage increase/decrease over the previous year
British Museum	6.24	6.14	–1.6
Imperial War Museum	1.27	1.31	+3.1
National Gallery	4.36	4.46	+2.3
National Maritime Museum	0.62	0.58	–6.5
National Museums and Galleries on Merseyside	1.34	1.23	–8.2
National Portrait Gallery	0.93	0.82	–11.8
Natural History Museum	1.64	1.46	–11.0
National Museum of Science and Industry	2.51	2.70	+7.6
Tate Gallery	2.75	2.86	+4.0
Victoria and Albert Museum	1.57	1.49	–5.1
Wallace Collection	0.15	0.16	+6.7
Total	23.38	23.21	–0.73

It is not possible to identify separately the number of visits to the royal armouries in the Tower of London. However, a new royal armouries artillery museum opened in 1995—from April to October only—at Fort Nelson near Portsmouth, to which there were an estimated 23,000 visits. Additionally, a new royal armouries museum was opened in Leeds on 30 March 1996 and data on the number of visits to this site will be available next year.

Business Subsidies

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the grants and loans provided by her Department to businesses, together with the criteria they have to meet in order to obtain the subsidy. [28191]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 7 May 1996]: My Department has not provided any businesses with grants or loans.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what provision there is to prevent absentee fathers from changing their circumstances in order to inhibit the ability of the CSA to claim maintenance payments from them. [27642]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Maintenance assessments are intended to reflect the ability of parents to contribute to their children's support. Assessments may be revised following a change in the circumstances of either parent and will be effective only from the date the change was reported. The Child Support Agency will take action to collect any outstanding arrears as well as current maintenance. This may include the imposition of deduction from earnings orders and applications for liability orders.

Provisions already exist that enable a child support officer to include notional income as part of a parent's resources where he is satisfied that a parent has intentionally deprived himself or failed to secure income or capital with the intention of avoiding or reducing his child support liability.

In addition, the new departure system that is currently being piloted with a view to its introduction later this year will include further measures to prevent absent parents from manipulating the system to reduce their maintenance liability. Parents will be able to apply for a departure from the standard formula assessment where it is unrealistically low because an absent parent is diverting income to another person or for another purpose; has assets which are not producing or sufficient income; or otherwise has a life style which is inconsistent with the level of income on which the maintenance assessment is based.

Finally, there are sanctions in the benefit system against people who give up work voluntarily.

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what advance warning was given to former claimants of reduced earnings allowance no longer entitled to benefit before the changes to the reduced earnings allowance which came into force from 24 March. [27977]

Mr. Roger Evans: In his statement of 29 November 1995, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security announced his intention to introduce measures to correct anomalies in reduced earnings allowance being paid past pensionable age to individuals who did not continue in regular employment. The individuals affected have been identified by the Benefits Agency and are being advised of the effect of the 1996 amendment regulations, following review of their awards of reduced earnings allowance and retirement allowance.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated number of people over pension age who will cease to receive reduced earnings allowance following the new rules for reduced earnings allowance which came into force on 24 March; and what is the average amount that was paid weekly to the disentitled claimants of the reduced earnings allowance. [27976]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available in the format requested.

However, on 2 April 1994 19,250 recipients of reduced earnings allowance were over pensionable age and not being paid at a protected rate following the introduction of retirement allowance in 1989. Their average weekly rate was £36.05. The estimated effect of the 1996 amendment regulations is to transfer the vast majority of pension age reduced earnings allowance recipients who are not in regular employment to retirement allowance.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the payment of the retirement allowance at 25 per cent. of the reduced earnings allowance rate with particular reference to the reduced pension entitlement caused by lower earnings during the claimant's working life. [28132]

Mr. Evans: None. The introduction of retirement allowance was enacted by Parliament in the Social Security Act 1988.

Adjudication and Child Support Regulations

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place in the Library a copy of the response made on 11 December 1995 by the president of the Independent Tribunal Service to the proposed Social Security (Adjudication) and Child Support Amendment Regulations 1996. [28689]

Mr. Roger Evans: A copy has been placed in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Office Space

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and food if he will list the square footage and cost of office space rented by his Department and its agencies and the number of his Department or agencies' buildings partly or fully unoccupied together with the space footage of that unoccupied office space and its estimated rental value where available in each of the past five financial years. [27732]

Mr. Boswell: The Ministry occupies both freehold and leasehold—rented—accommodation. On 1 April 1996, the Ministry rented some 580,000 sq ft. of office accommodation for its own use at a rental cost of approximately £8 million per annum.

Of this area, some 33,700 sq ft. of accommodation with a rental cost of £334,000 was vacant pending disposal.

Owing to changes in responsibility for management of the Crown estate which came into effect on 1 April 1996 and changes in the way that Departments have been charged for leasehold accommodation, comparable details for previous years could be made available only at disproportionate cost.

Beef Exports

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a breakdown of British beef exports by (a) weight, (b) value and (c) destination for the year ended 31 December 1995. [28077]

Mr. Boswell: Exports of beef from the UK for 1995 as recorded in the overseas trade statistics are as follows:

	000's tonnes	£ million
France	106.2	239.4
Italy	30.7	93.3

All figures are provisional.

Commercial Whaling

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is Her Majesty's Government policy on the resumption of commercial whaling. [28843]

Mr. Baldry: The United Kingdom has strongly supported the International Whaling Commission's moratorium on commercial whaling since it came into force in 1986. Commercial whaling meets no pressing nutritional, economic or social needs and, as the growing global demand to watch whales in the wild demonstrates, it is possible for local communities to derive substantial benefits from whales without the need to kill them. Commercial whaling is opposed by the vast majority of our citizens and by Parliament, as well as by many of the countries concerned with the conservation and management of whales through the International Whaling Commission. Accordingly, the UK will oppose any move to end the current moratorium on commercial whaling.

Cattle Slaughter

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many days per week he estimates will be devoted by each slaughterhouse to the slaughter of cattle over the age of 30 months. [28324]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 May 1996]: This will vary from slaughterhouse to slaughterhouse. Some will devote their full capacity to the slaughter of these cattle while others will slaughter them on different numbers of full days each week.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many slaughterhouses he estimates will be involved in the slaughter of cattle over the age of 30 months. [28322]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 May 1996]: We expect 40 to 50 slaughterhouses to be involved initially. If necessary, this number will be increased in the light of experience.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which officials will be responsible for supervising the slaughter of cattle over the age of 30 months. [28323]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 May 1996]: Officials of the Meat Hygiene Service will supervise the slaughter of these animals.

SCOTLAND

Enterprise Companies

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has completed his review of the performance of Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise; and if he will make a statement. [28168]

Mr. Kynoch: No. My right hon. Friend announced the review on 7 February. Comments were invited by 31 March, but a number of organisations asked for and were given an extension of the deadline to end April. The responses are being analysed and the first stage of the review, which is proceeding to schedule, should be completed this summer.

Deaf-blind People

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many deaf-blind people were resident in the area of each local authority at the latest date for which figures are available; how many local authorities do not currently offer basic rehabilitation and social work support services for deaf-blind people; what action he is taking to improve local provision for them; and if he will make a statement. [27142]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The table shows the number of blind and partially sighted people with deafness as an additional disability, resident in each local authority region as at 31 March 1995.

Persons registered blind who are also deaf: 31 March 1995

Region	Registered blind with deafness as an additional disability	Registered partially sighted with deafness as an additional disability

Strathclyde	720	204

Scotland	1,460	578

Information about the number of local authorities that do not currently offer basic rehabilitation and social work support services for deaf-blind people is not held centrally.

Under our community care arrangements, local authorities are required to tailor services to individual needs through comprehensive multi-disciplinary assessments, including the appointment of a care manager. This results in significant scope for local authorities to provide rehabilitation and social work support services themselves or, where this is not possible, to purchase these from the independent sector, particularly voluntary organisations.

The Government have identified people with sensory impairments as a priority for grant funding. Grants have been awarded to voluntary organisations including Sense and the National Deaf-Blind and Rubella Association and the National Deaf-Blind League to provide assistance with awareness training for staff working with deaf-blind adults and children and to improve the provision of rehabilitation, information, support and communication systems.

Local authorities are required to develop joint plans for the provision of services to disabled people, including those with a sensory impairment, and in doing so to consult them, their carers and those voluntary agencies which represent their interests. We are closely monitoring these plans to ensure that adequate progress is being made in developing services for deaf-blind people.

Forest Enterprise Agency

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the mechanisms for accountability and responsibility of the chief executive of the Forest Enterprise Agency in relation to (a) Forestry Commission and (b) Ministers. [28409]

Mr. Kynoch: These are set out in the agency's framework document, copies of which are in the Library.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee he plans to hold up to April 1997; and how many times (a) the Prime Minister and (b) other Cabinet Ministers will attend. [25491]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Last Session, there were four meetings of the Grand Committee in Scotland. So far this Session there have been eight meetings of the Grand Committee in Scotland and I hope that there will be a further four or five before the summer recess. As for next Session, I hope that up to eight meetings will take place in Scotland before April 1997. I acknowledge that the hon. Lady and her party have an excellent record of attendance at meetings of the Grand Committee and I would be happy to discuss with her any suggestions she has for venues and subjects to debate.

Following the Chancellor of the Exchequer's successful visit to Aberdeen in February, I expect that other members of the Government will participate as appropriate.

Marine Laboratory, Aberdeen

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what issues of public policy are the responsibility of the Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department marine laboratory in Aberdeen. [25769]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 24 April 1996]: The marine laboratory in Aberdeen is part of the Scottish Office, and contributes to the advice to Ministers on a range of issues affecting fisheries and the marine environment.

Crofting

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he is taking to support crofters (a) in respect of (i) arterial drainage and (ii) hill drainage projects, (b) to provide stock grids, (c) in respect of the planting of shelter belts, (d) to provide or improve their mains electricity, gas connection and electrical equipment and (e) in respect of projects to improve roads, bridges, culverts or boat slips. [28199]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 7 May 1996]: The crofting counties agricultural grants scheme currently provides grants to crofters towards the costs of all these measures. The agricultural business improvement scheme currently offers grants in respect of the planting of shelter belts; provision, replacement or improvement of electricity supplies; and the provision of stock grids on croft roads. The farm woodland premium scheme and the Forestry Commission's woodland grant scheme currently provide support in respect of the planting of shelter belts.

WALES

Consultants

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many consultants there were in (a) urology, (b) ear, nose and throat, (c) paediatrics, (d) ophthalmology and (e) anaesthetics for the years (i) 1990, (ii) 1992 and (iii) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [27891]

Mr. Richards: The information is given in the table:

Salaries

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the (a) lowest and (b) highest full-time salary paid to an employee in his (i) Department, (ii) agencies and (iii) non-departmental public bodies in (1) 1994–95 and (2) 1995–96; and if he will make a statement. [27892]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 1 November 1995 at column 301.

School Transport

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the latest estimate of the costs of school transport in each of the former counties of Wales. [28068]

Mr. Richards: The costs of the home-to-school transport, net of parental contributions, in each of the former counties in Wales for 1994–95 is given in the table.

	000's
Clwyd	5,182

Gwynedd	3,283

Uniform Business Rates

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the figures arising from research undertaken by his Department indicating the proportion of turnover represented by uniform business rates, analysed by size of enterprise. [27950]

Mr. Hague: The figures were published in 1995 in the Department of the Environment document, "The Impact of Rates on Businesses", covering both England and Wales. A copy is in the Library of the House.

Small Businesses

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he proposes to increase the competitiveness of small businesses in Wales. [28072]

Mr. Richards: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 2 May 1996 at column 624. The Government will outline their latest policies for the support of small firms in this year's White Paper on competitiveness, to be published this summer.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff are currently employed at the Welsh Office; and what the level is expected to be by April 1997. [27901]

Mr. Hague: The number of full-time equivalent staff employed in my Department at 1 April 1996 was 2,295. Staff levels are expected to fall to some 2,100 in the year beginning April 1997.

Play Schemes

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the factors which led him to conclude that Play Wales would be a more effective organisation when funded by local authorities as proposed in his consultation paper, "The Welsh Office and Local Government—Redefining the Relationship". [27393]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend and I have yet to reach any conclusions about future funding arrangements for Play Wales. Devolving responsibilities for funding Play Wales to local government is one of the options we will be considering.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for how long, on what basis and for what purpose the Welsh Office provided funding for Play Wales; and what plans he has to ensure that local authorities will maintain this provision. [27394]

Mr. Jones: Direct government financial support for Play Wales has been provided by the Welsh Office since 1988. The grant, which is provided under the appropriation legislation, supports the development of children's play by funding the staffing and administration of Play Wales. If it is decided that this funding should be devolved to local government it will be for councils to decide on levels of provision in the light of their priorities.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to introduce legislation to remove the registration and inspection requirements for the provision of supervised activities used by children under the age of eight years and to relax the registration requirements for holiday play schemes in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [28235]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Health gave to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 18 March 1996 at column 82.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the reviews carried out in respect of Play Wales in 1993 and 1995; and which conclusions from these reviews led to his present proposal to carry out a further review of Play Wales. [27396]

Mr. Jones: Following the reviews carried out in 1993 and 1995, the then Secretaries of State and I concluded that the best way forward would be the continuation of the existing funding arrangements for Play Wales. In doing so, however, we made clear our intention to look again, after local government reorganisation, at whether the Welsh Office should continue to be responsible for direct funding of Play Wales.

Public Funding

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the voluntary organisations and non-departmental public bodies that have received funding from the Welsh Office in the last five years, indicating how often each has been subject to specific reviews by the Welsh Office, including those for which reviews are currently being proposed. [27395]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: All executive public bodies that have received Welsh Office funding in the last five years are listed in "Public Bodies 1995", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

The Welsh Office carries out a financial management and policy review of each executive public body at least every five years.

Reviews are currently proposed of the Welsh Development Agency, the Development Board for Rural Wales and the Land Authority for Wales.

I have arranged for lists of the voluntary organisations that have directly received funding from the Welsh Office for each of the years 1990–91 to 1994–95 to be placed in the Library of the House. An exercise to collate a comprehensive list of all voluntary organisations that have received funding in 1995–96 is currently being undertaken.

The Welsh Office has carried out reviews of the following grant schemes under which voluntary organisations have received funding during the last five years:

Scheme	Year
Care and Repair grants	1993–94
Child and Family Service	1995–96
Environment Wales	1995–96
Section 73 Homelessness grants	1990–91
Special Grants Environmental Programme	1990–91
Support for Voluntary Intermediary Services	1995–96
Groundwork Trusts	1995–96
UK2000	1990–91
Voluntary Youth Services, Village Halls and Community Centres Programme	1994–95
Welsh Archaeological Trusts	1995–96

In addition, the following individual organisations have been reviewed by the Welsh Office:

Organisation	Year
Standing Council of Voluntary Organisations	1991–92
South Wales Association for the Prevention of Addiction	1991–92
Swansea Drugs Project	1990–91
Youthlink	1993–94

School Admissions

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answers of 16 April, Official Report, column 426, and 24 April, Official Report, column 179, in respect of which schools he has received information on variations between their approved admissions number and their proposed admissions for September 1996. [27740]

Mr. Richards: Grant-maintained schools must set as their planned admissions limit a number no smaller than the current approved admission number. They are not, however, required to inform the Welsh Office when the proposed admissions in any school year exceeds the approved admission number. I am, however, aware that Stanwell school in Penarth has set an admissions figure for September 1996 of 264, which exceeds its AAN of 182. This was not made clear in my reply of 16 April.

Cadw

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what targets he has set for Cadw: Welsh Historic Monuments Agency. [28685]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Cadw has been set the following key targets for 1996–97:

1. To complete 90 per cent. of the approved conservation maintenance programme.
2. To complete 60 resurvey lists.
3. To resolve 75 per cent. of ad hoc listing cases within 17 weeks.
4. To complete 100 scheduling actions, of which at least 70 per cent. involve additional protection.
5. To resolve 75 per cent. of listed building consent cases within 4 weeks and 90 per cent. of cases in 6 weeks.
6. To resolve 75 per cent. of scheduled monument consent cases within 13 weeks and 90 per cent. of cases within 17 weeks.

7. To resolve 80 per cent. of Historic Buildings grant applications in 18 weeks.

8. To resolve 80 per cent. of Ancient Monument grant applications within 6 weeks.

9. To pay 90 per cent. of properly presented claims for Historic Buildings and Ancient Monuments grants within 5 weeks of receipt.

10. To achieve a market share of 63 per cent. of the number of visitors to the top twenty heritage sites in Wales.

11. To reduce direct net cost per visitor at Cadw's sites to an average of 40p.

12. To operate within allocated programme and running cost budgets.

13. To achieve efficiency gains of at least 3 per cent.

Full details of Cadw's performance against its targets for 1996–97 will be published in the agency's annual report.

NORTHERN IRELAND

YG-I Tool Company

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the impact on job prospects in the engineers' cutting tool sector of the establishment of a new facility in Belfast by YG-I Tool Company of Korea. [27097]

Mr. Ancram: The establishment of this facility is unlikely to impact on job prospects in the engineer's cutting tool sector. In all cases where Government assistance is given to inward investors, an assessment is made of the risk of job displacement. This was done in the case of the European Tool company, the Northern Ireland subsidiary of YG-I Tool Company of Korea.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultation he had with the Federation of British Engineers' Tool Manufacturers prior to approving a grant to the Korean company YG-I Tool Co. of Korea to set up a manufacturing base in Belfast.

Mr. Ancram: No direct consultation was sought with the Federation of British Engineers' Tool Manufacturers, though information published by the federation was used during the course of the appraisal.

Multiple Births

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets and (e) sextuplets were born in Northern Ireland in each year from 1990 to 1995; and if he will make a statement. [27436]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is set out in the table:

Sets of	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994	[1]1995
Twins	267	315	258	280	289	327
Triplets	5	6	8	9	6	7
Quadruplets	—	—	—	—	—	2
Quintuplets	—	1	—	—	—	—
Sextuplets	—	—	—	—	—	—

Office Space

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the square footage and cost of office space rented by his Department and its agencies and the number of his Department or agencies' buildings partly or fully unoccupied together with the square footage of that unoccupied office space and its estimated rental value where available in each of the past five financial years. [27724]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is not readily available in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Irish Republic (Constitution)

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will next meet the Foreign Secretary of Eire to discuss constitutional matters in Eire; and if he will make a statement. [27223]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have no specific plans to meet the Irish Foreign Minister to discuss constitutional matters in the Republic of Ireland. Constitutional matters relating to Northern Ireland may be part of the negotiations starting on 10 June.

School Transport

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of the children of the United Kingdom go to school in Northern Ireland; what percentage of the expenditure on school transport in the United Kingdom is spent in Northern Ireland; and what factors underlie the level of expenditure. [27741]

Mr. Ancram: In 1993–94, the last year for which comparative figures are available, 4 per cent. of school children in the United Kingdom attended school in Northern Ireland. School transport expenditure in Northern Ireland was 7.9 per cent. of the school transport bill for the United Kingdom. In Northern Ireland school transport is currently provided where a pupil gains admission to a school outside statutory walking distance from home—defined as two miles for pupils under 11 and three miles for other pupils—and provided that a public or board transport service to or in the vicinity of the school is already available. Transport arrangements in other areas of the United Kingdom are the responsibility of the relevant Secretaries of State.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current expenditure on school transport in Northern Ireland; and what is the projected expenditure over the next five years. [27742]

Mr. Ancram: Recurrent expenditure on home-to-school transport in Northern Ireland in 1994–95, the latest year for which actual expenditure is available, was £34.7 million. If present transport arrangements were to continue, it is estimated that annual expenditure would rise to more than £41 million by 1998–99. Projections of expenditure beyond 1998–99 are not yet available.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on his proposals for school transport and the administrative and legislative mechanisms that will be used to implement them. [27743]

Mr. Ancram: A consultation paper outlining a number of options for reducing the escalating costs of transport was issued in December 1995. As a result of the views expressed, I have asked education and library boards to take forward further detailed consideration of the options, including consultation with schools and other interests. That process is still on-going and in the interim the existing arrangements remain unchanged.

Class Sizes

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many classes for the first three years of primary school in Northern Ireland have more than 30 children; how many children are involved; and what would be the cost in teachers' salaries to ensure that the maximum class size for the first three years of school is 30. [27745]

Mr. Ancram: Information is not available in the form requested.

Schools and Colleges (Expenditure)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 12 March, Official Report, column 543–44, if he will list the applications that he received for capital projects in the last financial year and the priority ratings he assigned to them. [27746]

Mr. Ancram: The planning of major building schemes for schools and colleges in Northern Ireland is an on-going process. The selection of schemes for inclusion in the Department's capital building programme takes account of the priority rating of individual schemes, their state of planning readiness and the availability of resources in any year.

At present there are 121 major schemes in the top three priority categories in the schools planning list. These are at various stages of planning. Twelve high priority building schemes for further education colleges are also in planning.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he collates relating to the percentage of budget increase passed on to schools in each of the education and library board areas; and if he will make a statement. [27750]

Mr. Ancram: My Department collates a range of financial information from boards on school funding and keeps a check on percentage increases in aggregated schools budgets each year.

Teachers

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many retirements there have been by teachers on the grounds of ill health in Northern Ireland in each of the past 10 years. [27747]

Mr. Ancram: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 28 March, Official Report, column 741.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many redundancies of teachers are projected to occur in the current financial year in each of the five education and library boards in Northern Ireland. [27749]

Mr. Ancram: The information sought is not available. Under local management of schools, the number of teachers to be employed is a matter for school boards of governors.

Cross-community Contact Scheme

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 29 March, Official Report, column 755, if he will make a statement on the reasons for a decrease in the number of secondary schools participating in the cross-community contact scheme. [27748]

Mr. Ancram: Participation in the cross-community contact scheme is entirely voluntary. It is therefore inappropriate to ask individual schools about their reasons for non-participation.

Health and Social Services Estates Agency

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Northern Ireland Health and Social Services Estates Agency. [28687]

Mr. Moss: The following targets have been set for the Northern Ireland Health and Social Services Estates Agency for 1996–97. The targets are in line with the Government's policy of seeking to improve the service provided to clients in terms of both quality and value for money. I am satisfied that the targets present a demanding challenge for the agency.

Delivery of services

To ensure the specification as to quality and quantity of services defined in the Service Level Agreement with the Health and Social Services—Executive is fully met.

To set in place service-level agreements with the remainder of the client bodies for the provision of services.

To develop a customer charter in line with the ethos of the Northern Ireland citizens charter.

Efficiency of services

To carry out appropriate in-year efficiency reviews including the continuous market testing of design and consultancy functions to ensure that the most efficient and effective use is made of the agency's resources.

To carry out a review of the agency's senior management structure by 31 March 1997.

To ensure the achievement of an in-house 3 per cent. efficiency saving.

To develop a programme for the measurement and management of productive to non-productive staff time.

Financial management

To manage the agency's resources so as to deliver the business plan within a total budget of £4,004 million.

To implement the requirements of the health estates resources accounting systems by 31 March 1997.

A copy of the targets is being placed in the Library of the House.

Military Complaints Assessor

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends to lay before Parliament Mr. David Hewitt's third annual report as independent assessor of military complaints procedure in Northern Ireland. [28688]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Yesterday, I arranged for the third annual report of the independent assessor of military complaints procedures in Northern Ireland to be laid before each House of Parliament. I am grateful to the assessor for his report for 1995, a year in which the Army's role of providing support to the Royal Ulster Constabulary had been greatly reduced following the announcement by the paramilitary organisations of the cessations of military operations and which saw only 19 formal non-criminal complaints made against members of the armed forces.

The assessor notes that there is now a general acceptance that the Army's processing of complaints has been done reasonably well in difficult situations. I fully concur with this and I am pleased that the general officer commanding has been able to accept both of the assessor's recommendations.

The post of independent assessor remains important and will continue for as long as there is a need for the Army to patrol in support of the RUC in Northern Ireland.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he was consulted in his capacity as a member of the Licensing Authority prior to the issuing of a letter dated 18 October 1995 relating to oral contraceptives containing desogestrel and gestodene. [26576]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 25 April 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Health on 25 April, Official Report, column 281.

DEFENCE

Meterological Office

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key performance targets have been set for the Meteorological Office for the financial year 1996–97. [28585]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Meteorological Office has been set a range of quality, financial and efficiency targets to ensure that it delivers progressive improvements in the provision of weather-related services in 1996–97.

The key quality target set for the Meteorological Office during financial year 1996–97 is to achieve 80 per cent. of the designated business plan external targets for customer satisfaction, forecast accuracy and timeliness. Additionally, the agency is to devise a value for money index to measure the quality of its services. The accuracy of the agency's numerical weather prediction model is to be improved by at least 2 per cent. in 1996–97, as measured by an index of internationally exchanged model performance data.

The Meteorological Office was established as a trading fund on 1 April 1996 with a financial target to achieve an overall return on capital employed of at least 7 per cent. A target of £3.3 million has been set for the net contribution to the agency's core costs and central overheads from the provision of commercial services to the public, industry and commerce, excluding the Civil Aviation Authority and the Department of the Environment.

The 1996–97 efficiency target is to meet the key quality target within gross expenditure, before interest charges, of £140.3 million. For future efficiency targets the agency is to develop an auditable efficiency index.

Operation Purple Star

Mr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution Britain has made to Operation Purple Star; what is the purpose of the exercise; and if he will make a statement. [28277]

Mr. Soames: Exercise Purple Star is the culmination of a four-year cycle of purple exercises. The UK is contributing some 12,000 forces to what is the largest combined UK-US deployment since the Gulf crisis in 1991.

The UK commitment includes a maritime task force of some 30 ships, led by HMS Illustrious and including an escort force of six destroyers-frigates and two nuclear-powered attack submarines. Sixty RAF aircraft are to take part, including a force of 20 Harrier and Tornado fast jets in the offensive air role and 18 troop-carrying helicopters. In addition, 3 Commando Brigade and 5 Airborne Brigade, key elements of the joint rapid deployment force, will also participate.

The purpose of the exercise is to give UK and US forces practice in operating together in a force of this size. The UK is also using the exercise to provide useful operational experience to the newly formed permanent joint headquarters, and to examine the strategic deployment, command, control and maintenance of JRDF elements.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long it took HMS Fearless to travel from Britain to Operation Purple Star. [28279]

Mr. Soames: The journey took 10 days—from 16 to 26 April—as planned.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what problems were experienced in the sea journey of HMS Fearless to Operation Purple Star; and what assessment he has made of her performance. [28278]

Mr. Soames: No problems were experienced in the sea journey of HMS Fearless to Operation Purple Star. This mission was assessed as satisfactorily completed.

Porton Down Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 8 February, Official Report, columns 354–55, for what reason the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment introduced formal written protocols in 1990; and in what form protocols for trials and studies were kept before that time. [28134]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 8 May 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question about written protocols for the service volunteer programme at the former Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment since this falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency which includes CBD within one of its divisions.

Procedures for standardised, formal written protocols were implemented in 1991 during the establishment of the Independent Ethics Committee. This followed from the recommendations of the Royal College of Physicians' Guidelines for Ethics Committees (updated in 1990) and was introduced as part of Porton Down's continuing commitment to follow best practice for carrying out their work. For many years prior to the introduction of these new arrangements scientific staff produced written protocols of the studies they proposed conducting but these were not constructed to a standard pattern.

I hope this information is helpful.

Sarin

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies have been carried out by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment to evaluate the long-term health effects of short-term exposure to the nerve agent Sarin; when these studies were carried out; and what were the conclusions of these studies. [28135]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 8 May 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question about studies on health effects after exposure to Sarin carried out by the former Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment since this falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency which incudes CBD Sector in one of its divisions.

No studies have been carried out by the Porton Down specifically to evaluate the long-term health effects on humans of short-term exposure to the nerve agent Sarin.

As part of the research programme to develop improved methods for providing protection and therapy against the effects of chemical warfare agents a study has been conducted using the technique of single fibre electromyography (SFEMG). This study involved taking SFEMG measurements at intervals up to 30 months after the exposure of volunteers to a low level of the nerve agent Sarin.

Small changes in SFEMG were seen at 3 hours and 3 days after exposure to a level of Sarin which caused a reduction in the volunteers' red cell acetyl cholinesterase activity to 60% of normal levels. The SFEMG changes were not accompanied by any clinical neuromuscular symptoms or signs and had returned to normal two years after exposure.

This work, which began in 1983, involved eight volunteers. The results of the study have been submitted for publication in the open literature.

I hope this information is helpful.

Devonport Dockyard

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he plans to finalise the contract for the building and construction work at Devonport dockyard to accommodate the refitting of Trident submarines; when he expects this work to commence; and what is the estimated cost; [28052]

(2) when he plans to finalise the contract for the refitting of Trident submarines at Devonport dockyard. [28053]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We plan to finalise the contract for construction of the future nuclear refitting facilities at Devonport by the end of the summer; construction is scheduled to start in early 1998. Certain contractual details, including price, remain subject to negotiation and are commercially confidential. Contracts for individual refits of Vanguard class submarine will be negotiated with the dockyard operator in advance of the commencement of each refit. The Vanguard class refitting programme is planned to commence around the turn of the century.

Rosyth Dockyard

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost to public funds of providing facilities at Rosyth dockyard for the refitting of aircraft carriers. [28054]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The existing facilities at Rosyth are suitable for refitting aircraft carriers without significant additional expenditure; further discussions about precise requirements will take place with the dockyard operator well in advance of the first refit.

HMS Fearless and HMS Intrepid

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects HMS Fearless and HMS Intrepid to be permanently taken out of service. [28283]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The timing of the decommissioning of HMS Fearless and Intrepid has yet to be finalised. A decision will not be made until the conclusion of the current negotiations with VSEL for the design and build of up to two new amphibious ships.

Landing Platform Docks

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the reasons for the time taken to order two landing platform docks; and if he will make a statement. [28281]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The "no acceptable price no contract" negotiations for an order for up to two LPD(R) are continuing with VSEL. The size and timing of any order is dependent upon a satisfactory outcome to these negotiations.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment he has made of Britain's amphibious capability; [28280]

(2) what assessment he has made of his Department's provision of an amphibious capability until the landing platform docks come into operational service. [28282]

Mr. Soames: The Royal Navy retains a substantial capability to conduct amphibious operations in support of our defence policy objectives. Our amphibious forces are supported by specialist ships which are regularly maintained to sustain their operational capability. Both HMS Fearless and Intrepid have recently completed maintenance periods. Our amphibious capability will be significantly enhanced by the new helicopter carrier, HMS Ocean, which is currently fitting out, and by the refit of the landing ship logistic Sir Bedivere.

Louise Jensen

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received, and from whom, in relation to the death in Cyprus of Louise Jensen. [28412]

Mr. Soames: My Department has received a number of representations from hon. Members and others relating to this terrible incident.

Ministry of Defence Police (Radios)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the control rooms in each police constabulary which Ministry of Defence police may (a) broadcast to and (b) receive calls from, via their personal radios. [27808]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 7 May 1996]: I have between asked to reply.

Where necessary, local arrangements exist to enable Ministry of Defence police officers to be in two-way radio contact with Home Office constabularies. I am aware that the following forces in England and Wales have entered into such local arrangements:

Avon and Somerset
Cheshire
Devon and Cornwall
Dorset
Essex
Gloucestershire
Gwent
Hampshire
Kent
Lancashire
Merseyside

CORRIGENDUM

This question and answer should have appeared in the Official Report for Friday 26 April.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Elections

Mr. Coe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking for the holding of elections in Northern Ireland for the purpose of providing delegates to the proposed forum for the discussion of issues relevant to promoting dialogue and understanding in Northern Ireland. [27148]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Now that the Northern Ireland (Entry to Negotiations, etc.) Bill has received its Second Reading in the House of Commons, on 18 April, thereby indicating parliamentary support for the Bill, I have informed the chief electoral officer for Northern Ireland and my officials that they may commence preparations for the proposed elections on 30 May.

This will involve urgent expenditure to meet the cost of conducting the elections, including the recruitment of staff, staff training and equipment as well as costs associated with advertising and publicity for the elections. It will also cover the initial costs of setting up and servicing the forum and negotiations as well as expenditure on allowances for delegates. Its urgency arises from the need to commence, at the earliest opportunity, preparations for the successful conduct of these elections.

Parliamentary approval for this new service will be sought in a summer supplementary estimate for the Northern Ireland Office's administration, law, order, protective and miscellaneous services vote, class XV, vote 1. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £1,790,000 will be met be repayable advances from the contingencies fund.

TRANSPORT

Office Space

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the square footage and cost of office space rented by his Department and its agencies and the number of his Department or agencies' buildings partly, or fully unoccupied together with the square footage of that unoccupied office space and its estimated rental value where available in each of the past five financial years. [27719]

Mr. Norris: My Department occupies 3,893,000sq ft of office space with an annual rental cost of £22,117,000.

This includes 109,000sq ft of fully or partly unoccupied office space in eight buildings with an annual rental cost of £420,000.

My Department does not hold reliable information for past years.

Railway Bridges

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of Railtrack's structures are subject to overstress above levels acceptable by his Department. [28268]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack has weight capacity obligations under the Transport Act 1968 in respect of bridges carrying highways over the railway. Railtrack has estimated that around 10 per cent. of such bridges owned by it do not meet the weight capacity obligations and estimates the total cost of strengthening these bridges to meet it to be £200 million, of which £150 million is likely to be spent during the period ending 31 March 2004. Railtrack will review this estimate in the light of an assessment of highway overbridges that it is presently carrying out on behalf of local authorities, in consequence of an EU directive which requires the United Kingdom to admit 40 tonne vehicles from 1 January 1999.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of Railtrack's bridges have a structural assessment indicating a life of (a) up to one year, (b) one to three years, (c) three to five years and (d) over five years. [28270]

Mr. Watts: Structural assessment is the process by which the safe load of a structure is established and does not itself indicate residual life. Railtrack's rigorous inspection process is designed to discover incipient defects in structures before their integrity is threatened so that preventive action can be taken in good time.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many bridges are owned by Railtrack; and how many of these have a valid up to date structural assessment; [28224]

(2) what estimate has been made of how long it would take to obtain up to date structural assessments for all of Railtrack's bridges, and of the cost involved. [28226]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack owns around 40,000 bridges, viaducts and tunnels. These structures currently have assessments in compliance with long-standing policies. Railtrack has published more stringent standards covering bridge assessments and is assessing bridges to calculate their strength on a priority basis over an 18-year cycle.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bridge reconstructions Railtrack plans to carry out over the next 10 years. [28222]

Mr. Watts: In the period to 2004 Railtrack plans to renew 913 bridge spans, excluding those that are part of stations and depots.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if Railtrack has up to date scour assessments for each of its bridges and other structures which could be affected by flooding. [28554]

Mr. Watts: I understand that Railtrack does have such assessments.

British Rail Property Sales

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the total proceeds from British Rail property sales in each of the last five years. [28552]

Mr. Watts: The total proceeds from property sales after deduction of sale expenses are as follows:

1991–92	43.7
1992–93	33.8
1993–94	107.7
1994–95	39.9
1995–96	[1]42.5
Total	267.6

Port of Tyne Authority

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many written representations have been received by him in respect of the Port of Tyne Authority scheme 1996; and of these how many expressed (a) opposition to and (b) support for the proposed privatisation of the port of Tyne; and if he will place copies of the representations in the Library. [28310]

Mr. Norris: A total of 134 written representations have been received in respect of the proposed privatisation of the Port of Tyne Authority. Three were in favour, one was purely technical and did not express a view, and 130 were opposed.

The Port of Tyne Authority's notice concerning representations did not suggest that they would be made available other than to the Secretary of State, the authority, and its parliamentary agents, and they are therefore not being otherwise released.

Traffic Director for London

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has decided on the appointment of the Traffic Director for London; and if he will make a statement. [29182]

Mr. Norris: I am pleased to confirm that Derek Turner has been reappointed as Traffic Director for London from 9 May 1996 at a salary of £75,000. His primary objective remains to have the red route network substantially operational by 2000.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on official hospitality by his Department and all associated agencies in the financial year 1995–96. [28564]

Mr. Norris: The table represents the expenditure on official hospitality by the Department, central transport group, and its associated agencies in the financial year 1995–96. The figure for the central transport group may include some non-entertainment costs which cannot readily be disaggregated.

Central Transport Group	170,704
Driving Standards Agency	3,009
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency	10,546
Marine Safety Agency	17,740
The Coastguard Agency	7,906
Vehicle Certification Agency	1,280
Vehicle Inspectorate	46,000
The Highways Agency	4,097

The total amount spent by the Department and its agencies for the financial year 1995–96 was £261,282.64.

Sea Empress

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the countries who volunteered equipment, personnel and supplies and other aid for Milford Haven during the Sea Empress disaster; and if he will make a statement. [27554]

Mr. Norris: A number of specific offers of assistance were received by the marine pollution control unit from a number of companies and organisations, some of them foreign based. In addition the MPCU received direct offers of assistance from the Governments of the Netherlands, France and Germany.

Highway Bridges

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much money has been committed by his Department for the carrying out of assessments required to plan for the strengthening of bridges required under European Union regulations (a) for each local authority in England and (b) for England indicating the sum committed for 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97 and showing the totals as a percentage of overall local authority budgets; and if he will make a statement. [28157]

Mr. Norris: Local authorities receive a single allocation for both the assessment and the strengthening of their highway bridges. In 1996–97, for the first time, an element within this allocation was separately identified for assessment, but it remains open to local authorities to determine their own priorities within the total allocation. The first three columns of the following table show total bridge allocations for 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97 respectively. The final column shows the indicative assessment allocations made in 1996–97. The information required to express these as a percentage of overall local authority budgets is not readily available.

[1] Assessment and strengthening.

[2] Assessment only.

Public Transport Fares (London)

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what percentage of (a) London underground fares and (b) London bus fares will be capped as a result of his consultation on transport in London; [28417]

(2) what estimate he has made of the loss of revenue to London Transport resulting from the proposed capping of fares in transport in London; [28416]

(3) what are the implications of his consultation on transport in London for the price of London Transport travelcards; [28415]

(4) what additional funding he plans to provide for London Transport following his decision to cap transport fares in London. [28418]

Mr. Norris: The London travelcard, excluding one-day tickets, is included in the range of fares subject to the franchising director's policy on passenger rail fares. There is no capping regime for other London Transport fares. However, as its document "A Transport Strategy for London" indicates, the Government believe that in future LT fares are likely to rise more in line with inflation than with earnings, implying average fares increases lower than in recent years. LT's revenue forecasts will continue to be taken into account in considering LT's funding requirements.

Vessels

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he proposes to issue his Department's consultation document on sub-standard and uninsured vessels; and if he will make a statement. [28472]

Mr. Norris: In the near future.

Salvage Tugs

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans his Department has to enter into contracts for salvage tugs to be stationed at Stornoway and Dover during the winter months of 1996–97. [28474]

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Stoke on Trent, North (Ms Walley) on 18 March, Official Report, column 40.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what evaluation he has made of the stationing of salvage tugs at Stornoway and Dover during the winter months of 1995–96; and if he will make a statement. [28473]

Mr. Norris: The two tugs completed their 1995–96 trial on 30 April. The results are currently being analysed.

ENVIRONMENT

Office Space

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the square footage and cost of office space rented by his Department and its agencies and the number of his Department or agencies' buildings partly, or fully unoccupied together with the square footage of that unoccupied office space and its estimated rental value where available in each of the past five financial years. [27729]

Sir Paul Beresford: Prior to 1 April 1996, office accommodation on the civil estate was managed centrally by Property Holdings not by individual Departments. The information for the years requested is therefore not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

On 1 April my Department inherited from Property Holdings responsibility for the management of 1.4 million sq. ft. of rented office space in 100 buildings at a total cost of some £25 million in rents and rates of 1995–96 levels. Vacant office space totalled some 150,000 sq ft in 10 buildings at an estimated cost of £2.2 million for 1996–97, if none is occupied.

My Department also sponsors two crown bodies—the Buildings Research Establishment and the Health and Safety Executive—whose properties were not managed by Property Holdings. The information requested in respect of these bodies is as follows:

BRE
Square footage	19,786	19,786	19,786	19,786	19,786
Cost (£000s)	74	80	80	94	94
HSE
Square footage	1,042,487	1,042,487	1,098,223	1,098,223	1,033,455
Cost (£000s)	6,603	7,729	8,155	9,173	8,836

The buildings used by these bodies have been fully occupied throughout the relevant period.

Air Pollution

Sir Graham Bright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the costs to public funds of (a) health care and (b) clean-up measures from pollution from diesel vehicles. [28178]

Mr. Clappison: Diesel vehicles emit a number of pollutants. Of these the pollutant most strongly linked with health effects is particulate matter less than 10 microns across—PM10. During winter episodes in most major United Kingdom cities the dominant contribution of primary PM10 comes from road traffic, notably from diesel-powered vehicles, increasing from about a quarter to in excess of 70 per cent. It is difficult to estimate precisely the effects on health of particles from diesel vehicles. Healthy individuals are unlikely to be affected by levels of PM10 found in ambient air in the United Kingdom. However, there is growing evidence of a link between PM10 and premature mortality, hospital admissions and ill-health in those with pre-existing heart or lung conditions.

Pollutants from road traffic, including diesel vehicles, have other environmental impacts, for instance soiling of buildings caused mainly by particulate elemental carbon. It has been estimated[1] that in the financial year 1990–91 the UK stone cleaning market had a value of £79 million.

[1] Mansfield T (1992) Sources of Building Soiling and a Review of the Stone Cleaning Industry 1991, International Conference on Stone Cleaning, Edinburgh.

Sir Graham Bright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what powers local authorities have to set pollution limits for vehicles used to undertake local authority services. [28179]

Mr. Clappison: Statutory emission limits for new vehicles and for those in service are set by the Secretary of State for Transport and approved by Parliament. Local authorities have no special powers to impose different limits. It would be a matter for a local authority should it wish to set separate conditions for vehicles undertaking a local service, provided these did not breach compulsory competitive tendering requirements.

Sir Graham Bright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many airborne particulates monitoring sites there are in the United Kingdom; [28180]

(2) what are the current levels of airborne particulates as measured in the United Kingdom. [28181]

Mr. Clappison: There are currently 22 sites in the Department of the Environment's national automatic monitoring network which measure fine particulate matter—PM10. A further 26 PM10 monitors will be added to the network by the end of 1996, bringing the total number of PM10 sites to 48. The Department also, in co-operation with local authorities, monitors particles in the form of smoke at 225 sites throughout the UK.

In 1995, the annual average mean concentration of PM10, measured at the 16 national automatic urban monitoring sites in operation, ranged from 20 to 28 microgrammes per metre cubed. The maximum 24 hour running average concentration at the same sites ranged from 68 to 395 microgrammes per metre cubed. The average annual average concentration of smoke at 225 sites between April 1994 and March 1995 was 9 microgrammes per cubic metre. The maximum daily average smoke concentration during this period ranged from 9 to 263 microgrammes per cubic metre.

Current concentrations of PM10 from the national automatic monitoring network are updated hourly on the Internet (http://www.open.gov.uk/doe/doehome.htm).

Fire Service Pension Scheme

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to place the funding of the fire service pension scheme outside the capping criteria; and if he will make a statement. [28248]

Sir Paul Beresford: We have no plans to place the funding of the fire service pension scheme outside the capping criteria. Any decisions on capping criteria for 1997–98 will be considered in the context of the local government finance settlement.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much was spent on official hospitality by his Department and all associated agencies in the financial year 1995–96. [28570]

Sir Paul Beresford: Total expenditure by my Department and its agencies, including the residual functions of Property Services Agency services, in 1995–96 is expected to be £107,000. This does not include the agencies which transferred to the Office of Public Service on 1 January 1996. I also refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service today.

Purchase Grant Scheme

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when he intends to consult on detailed proposals covering the remaining counties of England to exempt small rural settlements from the purchase grant scheme; and if he will make a statement; [28956]

(2) when he intends to consult on detailed proposals covering the remaining counties of England to exempt small rural settlements from the purchase grant scheme; and if he will make a statement. [29183]

Mr. Curry: In March we issued a consultation paper on how we propose to exempt small rural settlements in England from the new purchase grant scheme. The paper set out the way we propose to implement the designation in England, and invited comments on our general approach, and on the detailed proposals for the first 15 counties and areas. Comments were sought from local authorities, housing associations, rural groups and other interested parties.

Today we issued a supplement to that paper, which gives detailed proposals for a further 15 counties or areas, covering Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly; Cumbria; Devon; Durham; Gloucestershire; Greater Manchester; Hampshire; Hereford and Worcester; Hertfordshire; Humberside; Isle of Wight; Kent; Shropshire; Oxfordshire and Wiltshire.

We will also consult on the remaining areas of England shortly.

Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. Copies of papers for each individual county or area providing copies of any maps needed have also been placed in both Libraries.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Environment Agency has now prepared its code on enforcement practice. [29042]

Mr. Clappison: The Environment Agency's code on enforcement practice was adopted on 23 April and copies have been placed in the Library of the House. It takes the form of a statement of enforcement policy which sets out how the agency will operate, and detailed guidance for warranted officers, setting out their responsibilities. The documents will be revised over time in the light of experience and comments from all the agency's customers.

Animal Feedstuffs

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what regulations govern the inclusion of cement dust in animal feedstuffs. [27342]

Mrs. Browning: I have been asked to reply.

There are no regulations controlling the specific use of cement dust in animal feedingstuffs. However, under the Agriculture Act 1970, it is an offence to sell, or have in possession with a view to sale, any material which is deleterious to animals or, through the consumption of animal products, deleterious to human beings. The Feeding Stuffs Regulations 1995, made under part IV of the 1970 Act, contain detailed provisions including controls on contaminants to feedingstuffs.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Solicitors' Indemnity Fund

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the solicitors' indemnity fund. [27564]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The solicitors indemnity fund, which provides compulsory insurance cover for all solicitors, was established under section 37 of the Solicitors Act 1974. The Act empowers the Law Society to make rules concerning indemnity against loss arising from any kind of civil liability, although most claims arise from allegations of negligence. The most recent rules are the Solicitors Indemnity Rules 1992.

Personal Injury Insurance Compensation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the maximum time after which personal injury insurance compensation may no longer be pursued; and what plans he has to alter this period. [27904]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The limitation period in respect of claims between an insurer and an insured person arising out of their contract is six years, subject to any stipulation in the contract to the contrary. The normal period in respect of claims for compensation for personal injury against the person causing the injury is three years from the date on which the cause of action accrued or the date of the plaintiff's knowledge. The Law Commission is at present reviewing limitation periods generally.

Justices of the Peace

Mr. Cox: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the present number of (a) men and (b) women from ethnic minority communities who are justices of the peace, serving courts in the Greater London area. [27953]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Information is only available in respect of three of the six Greater London commissions of the peace.

	Male	Female	Total
City of London	1	3	4
Inner London	67	45	112
Middlesex	Not available	—	144

No information is currently available in respect of the North-East, South-East and South-West London commissions.

TREASURY

Privatisation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many privatisations Bayesian probability theory was used in the analysis of maintenance costs of the capital equipment being privatised; and if he will make a statement on the value of the theory in assessing investment needs of (a) public and (b) private industries. [27938]

Mr. Jack: Information required to determine the number of privatisations in which Bayesian probability theory was used could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Bayesian probability theory is an established modelling technique relevant to determining estimates of maintenance expenditure for companies with a large capital base. It is not for HM Government to express a view of the value attributable to the use of Bayesian probability theory by private industries.

European Parliament (New Buildings)

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to the United Kingdom of the European Parliament's new buildings in Brussels and Strasbourg in the next year. [28315]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I assume my hon. Friend is referring to 1997. The cost of the European Parliament's new buildings for the forthcoming year are established only following the annual budget negotiations. We will not know the cost of these buildings until the 1997 EC budget is adopted in December.

Suicides

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many suicides in the United Kingdom involved the use of (a) a firearm and (b) a shotgun in (i) 1980, (ii) 1985, (iii) 1992, (iv) 1993, (v) 1994 and (vi) 1995. [28260]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The number of suicides—ICD [1]E955.0–E955.4 and E985.0–E985.4—in the United Kingdom involving the use of (a) a firearm and (b) a shotgun in 1980, 1985, 1992, 1993 and 1994 are shown in the table. Data for 1995–96 are not yet available.

Suicides in the United Kingdom involving the use of firearm and a shotgun in 1980, 1985, 1992, 1993 and 1994

	1980	1985	1992	1993	1994
Suicides and self-inflicted injury by firearm including shotgun	255	257	206	205	193
Suicides and self-inflicted injury by shotgun only	85	107	98	101	96
Injury by firearm including shotgun undetermined whether accidentally or purposely inflicted	25	38	24	20	24
Injury by shotgun only undetermined whether accidentally or purposely inflicted	10	13	9	9	12

[1] International Classification of Diseases, 9th Revision.

Codes E995.0–E955.4 refer to deaths where suicide is the underlying cause of death, whereas codes E985.0–E985.4 relate to deaths where it is undetermined whether the injury was accidentally or purposely inflicted. The majority of these, however, are generally regarded to be suicide.

Deaths in England and Wales for 1992 and earlier years represent the number of deaths registered in each year, while deaths from 1993 are deaths which occurred in each year.

Deaths in Scotland and Northern Ireland represent the number of deaths registered in every year.

Hourly Earnings

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many employees in (i) England and (ii) Great Britain earned (a) less than £1.50 per hour, (b) between £1.50 and £2.50 per hour, (c) between £2.50 and £3.50 per hour, (d) between £100,000 and per £250,000 per annum and (e) more than £250,000 per annum in 1995; and if he will list his projections for 1996. [28584]

Mrs Angela Knight: Information from the New Earnings Survey, April 1995 is shown in the table. Projections for April are not available.

New Earnings Survey, April 1995
Employees on adult rates, whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence

	England	Great Britain
Percentage of employees earning less than £1.50 per hour (excluding overtime)	0.6	0.6
Percentage of employees earning between £1.50 and £2.50 per hour (excluding overtime)	1.0	1.0
Percentage of employees earning between £2.50 and £3.50 per hour (excluding overtime)	7.2	7.3
Percentage of employees earnings between £100,000 and £250,000 per annum	0.1	0.1
Percentage of employees earning more than £250,000 per annum	<0.1	<0.1

Profit-related Pay

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the average marginal rate of tax used in calculating the cost of tax relief on profit-related pay; [28541]

(2) what is his most recent estimate of the cost of tax relief for profit-related pay for the tax year 1996–97. [28540]

Mr. Jack: The cost of income tax relief for profit-related pay schemes is approximately estimated on the assumption that the distribution of participants by marginal rate of tax is similar to that for employees generally. The average marginal rate of tax for employees in 1996–97 will be about 27 per cent.

Estimates of the cost of income tax relief for PRP tax relief for PRP schemes are published annually in table 1.6 of "Inland Revenue Statistics", copies of which are in the Library. An estimate of the cost in 1996–97 is not yet available.

Paracetamol Poisoning

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths relating to paracetamol poisoning have been reported to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys in each of the last five years. [27761]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The number of deaths from paracetamol poisoning reported to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys—the Office for National Statistics from 1 April 1996 following the merger with the Central Statistical Office—in 1993 and 1994 is shown in the table.

The data for 1990–1992 are published, for each year separately, in table 10 of "Mortality statistics: injury and poisoning, England and Wales", Series DH4, nos 16–18, copies of which may be accessed in the House of Commons Library.

Deaths from Paracetamol in England and Wales 1993 and 1994

Deaths by poisoning—accident	60 (14)	56 (14)
Paracetamol only	42 (8)	36 (9)
Paracetamol and other drugs	18 (6)	20 (5)
Deaths by poisoning—suicide	155 (22)	119 (12)
Paracetamol only	65 (6)	61 (4)
Paracetamol and other drugs	90 (16)	58 (8)
Deaths by poisoning—undetermined	89 (13)	79 (8)
Paracetamol only	59 (3)	49 (5)
Paracetamol and other drugs	30(10)	30 (3)

The figures in brackets indicate the number of paracetamol deaths with a mention of alcohol.

Custody Services

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will extend the scope of the Financial Services Act 1986 to cover regulation of custody services following the consultation carried out by the Securities and Investments Board. [28959]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I have accepted the recommendation of the Securities and Investments Board that the scope of the Act should be extended to those custody services covering the safekeeping and administration of investments. I believe that this will extend investor protection but am also concerned that it should not impose disproportionate burdens on authorised firms. I shall accordingly be seeking views on the terms in which the Act should be extended in a consultation paper which I hope will be issued shortly.

Stamp Duty (Unit Trusts)

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what stamp duty treatment he proposes for conversions of authorised unit trusts into open-ended investment companies. [28957]

Mrs. Angela Knight: In response to the consultative document which the Treasury published last year with draft regulations to permit the creation of open-ended investment companies—OEICs—the Treasury has received a number of representations that conversions of authorised unit trusts into OEICs should be exempted from stamp duty and stamp duty reserve tax—SDRT—including conversions of two or more trusts into a single OEIC.

When regulations are made to deal with the stamp duty and SDRT treatment of OEICs, I intend to include in them an exemption for conversions of an authorised unit trust into an OEIC or a single sub-fund of an umbrella OEIC. The regulations will also contain an exemption from stamp duty and SDRT, for a period of some two years, for conversions which involve a merger, such as the conversion of two or more authorised unit trusts into a single OEIC or sub-fund, or the merger of an authorised unit trust with an OEIC.

We also intend to introduce legislation in the next Finance Bill to exempt mergers between authorised unit trusts from stamp duty and SDRT if the merger is carried out after the Bill becomes law and within a period of some two years thereafter.

These measures will give unit trust groups a unique opportunity to rationalise their range of authorised unit trusts, and to convert some or all of them into OEICs if they wish. At the same time, the introduction of OEICs will continue to widen the opportunities for share ownership for the investing public.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent on official hospitality by his Department and all associated agencies in the financial year 1995–96. [28574]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Expenditure on official hospitality by HM Treasury and associated agencies responsible to the Chancellor of the Exchequer in 1995–96 is included in the published running costs.

SCOTLAND

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which towns in Scotland currently have closed circuit television to assist with crime prevention; which will have schemes installed during 1996; what is his policy regarding further expansion of such schemes; if he will make further financial assistance available; and if he will make a statement. [27914]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The towns which currently have CCTV installations are:

Aberdeen
Airdrie
Alloa
Ayr
Bathgate
Bearsden
Carnoustie
Coatbridge
Dalkeith
Dumfries
Falkirk
Galashiels
Glasgow
Glenrothes
Grangemouth
Hamilton
Inverness
Kilmarnock
Kirkcaldy
Kirkintilloch
Levenmouth
Milngavie
Motherwell
Paisley
Stirling
Wishaw

Towns which will have CCTV installed in 1996 are Nairn, Perth and Dundee. Towns planning to install CCTV, or to expand existing schemes, will shortly be submitting applications for funding from the Scottish Office closed circuit television challenge competition, which I announced on 13 December 1995. Some £4 million has been made available for the competition over the next three years—£1 million in 1996–97 and £1.5 million in 1997–98 and 1998–99. This will make a significant contribution to making further reductions in crime and the fear of crime in Scotland.

Health Boards

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what allocations he has made of bridging finance for health care to each of the health boards in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [27915]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The total amount of bridging finance allocations issued to each of the health boards in Scotland in the financial years 1991–92 to 1995–96 are as shown:

Health Board	Allocation (£ million)
Argyll and Clyde	3.023
Ayrshire and Arran	2.051
Borders	0.791
Dumfries and Galloway	0.332
Fife	2.846
Forth Valley	1.791

Lothian	9.641
Orkney	0.210
Shetland	0.047
Tayside	2.182
Total	56.588

Bridging finance continues to be an effective way of facilitating the Government's care in the community policies.

Old People's Homes

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number of places in (a) old people's homes and (b) nursing homes in the private, public and voluntary sectors for each of the new council areas in Scotland as at 1 April, indicating for each the vacancies. [27916]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The latest available information is for 30 September 1995 and is set out in the table:

Pre-school Education

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will conduct a survey of day care and pre-school education (a) to show how many in each category have (i) outdoor play space for their sole use and (ii) furnishings and fittings of a suitable size for pre-fives and (b) to establish whether they have to stow away equipment every day so that others can use the same premises. [27903]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The results of the first survey of provision for day care and pre-school education for young children in Scotland are included in a statistical bulletin published in March by the Scottish Office. Copies were placed in the Library. In deciding whether to register facilities under the Children Act 1989 local authorities have to satisfy themselves on the suitability of place spaces and equipment provided. There are no plans to conduct an additional survey to collect information about such detailed aspects of provision.

Chernobyl (Farms)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which farms in Scotland are subject to restrictions because of fall-out from Chernobyl; what was the total compensation paid to all affected farms in each of the past 10 years; how long it is estimated restrictions will continue in force; what is his estimate of the total future cost involved; and if he will make a statement. [27917]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Following the de-restrictions which took effect from 17 January 1996, 36 farms in Scotland remain affected by post-Chernobyl controls on the movement and slaughter of sheep. These farms are located in the following council areas: Stirling, 11 farms; East Ayrshire, 16 farms; East Renfrewshire, three farms; and Dumfries and Galloway, six farms.

The sheep compensation scheme was introduced in July 1986 to compensate farmers whose enterprises had been disrupted as a result of statutory movement and slaughter restrictions. The total paid to date is detailed in the table.

Financial year	Expenditure £
1986–87	1,388,135
1987–88	160,987
1988–89	151,937
1989–90	178,206
1990–91	164,820
1991–92	141,307
1992–93	107,769
1993–94	98,044
1995–96	80,827

Restrictions are reviewed on a regular basis and are removed wherever the monitoring of sheep has revealed residual radioactivity to have declined to within acceptable levels. The downward trend in radiocaesium activity levels is welcome. However, it is not possible to indicate at this time when all restrictions may be removed or to estimate total future costs involved.

Forestry

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to improve forestry consultation procedures. [29130]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In our response to the Environment Committee's report on "Forestry and the Environment" we said that we would ask the Forestry Commission to review its procedures for consulting on planting and felling proposals. The Forestry Commission has now completed this review following consultation with the relevant statutory bodies and a wide range of environmental, land use and forestry organisations.

The review revealed that the Forestry Commission consults on the vast majority of schemes but that consultation results in no substantive comment in most cases. Woodland owners and landowners said that the present procedures are time consuming and expensive and that the application of the procedures to small and non-contentious cases results in unnecessary delays; they said that the Forestry Commission should be able to determine applications in a wider range of circumstances than at present. On the other hand, local authorities, statutory nature conservation, countryside and environment protection bodies and environmental organisations were concerned that any changes to the procedures should not preclude consultation on sensitive cases and that the Forestry Commission should agree the circumstances in which consultation will take place. They were also concerned that the procedures should apply to all types of woodland planting including short rotation coppice and planting on set-aside land.

Since the present arrangements were introduced in 1984 the background against which grant and felling applications are considered has changed considerably. We now have a grant scheme designed to deliver multiple purpose forestry and a series of detailed environmental guidelines. We operate a general presumption against the felling and conversion of woodland to other land uses. Large or very sensitive new planting proposals are subject to statutory environmental assessment. In addition, indicative forestry strategies give local authorities the opportunity to indicate in broad terms those areas which they regard as environmentally sensitive and those where they would like to see forestry positively encouraged. We have also introduced a public register of new planting proposals which enables interested parties to know what is proposed and to submit comments. As we announced in the 1996 sustainable development White Paper—"This Common Inheritance: 1996 UK Annual Report", Cm 3188—the Forestry Commission is preparing a set of forestry standards that we will use as a basis for monitoring and reporting on environmental standards in managed woodland.

Against this background and in the light of the review we have decided to make a number of changes to the procedures.

We believe that the public should be given a greater opportunity to comment on new planning and felling and restocking proposals. We have therefore decided to include felling proposals in the Forestry Commission's public register of applications and to make the register more readily accessible. As well as making the register available for inspection by the public in local authority planning offices the commission will, in due course, arrange for the register to be accessed via the Internet. The commission will also send copies of the register to the relevant statutory bodies. Anyone with an interest in a woodland planting or felling and restocking proposal will be able to comment to the Forestry Commission, which will take account of all the comments it receives in determining an application.

In addition, the Forestry Commission will consult relevant statutory bodies before deciding on new planting proposals in the following circumstances:

- planting proposals that affect a national nature reserve, site of special scientific interest, special protection area designated under the EC wild birds directive or special area for conservation designated under the EC habitats directive; with Scottish Natural Heritage, English Nature or the Countryside Council for Wales;
- planting proposals that affect a scheduled ancient monument; with Historic Scotland, English Heritage or Cadw;
- planting proposals of five hectares or more inside a national park; with the national park authority;
- planting proposals of five hectares or more in a national scenic area, area of outstanding natural beauty or heritage coast; with Scottish Natural Heritage, the Countryside Commission or the Countryside Council for Wales;
- in addition, planting proposals of 10 hectares or more; with the local authority.

These arrangements for consulting on new planting proposals will apply to all types of woodland planting including short rotation coppice and planting on set-aside land.

The Forestry Commission will continue to operate the present arrangements for notifying archaeological authorities of new planting proposals.

Whereas new planting involves a change of land use, felling is part of the on-going business of woodland management and we believe it should be handled with a lighter touch. The Forestry Commission will consult local authorities and the relevant statutory bodies on felling proposals in the following circumstances:

- felling proposals that affect a national nature reserve, site of special scientific interest, special protection area or special area for conservation; with Scottish Natural Heritage, English Nature or the Countryside Council for Wales;
- felling proposals that affect a scheduled ancient monument; with Historic Scotland, English Heritage or Cadw;
- felling proposals that affect trees that are subject to a tree preservation order, with the local authority.

Environmental sensitivity does not depend on size and location alone and there may be circumstances in addition to those I have set out when it will be appropriate for the Forestry Commission to consult local authorities or statutory bodies before determining applications for new planting or felling. The Forestry Commission may therefore agree other, special circumstances when it will consult local authorities or relevant statutory bodies where a local authority or statutory body identifies clear and objective grounds for doing so.

In all those cases where the Forestry Commission consults a local authority or statutory body on a new planting or felling proposal the present arrangements for resolving objections will continue to be applied. In all other cases, the Forestry Commission will determine applications in the light of any comments it receives, including any views it may decide to solicit from any organisation or individual.

Concern was expressed during the review that the 1984 ministerial direction does not give the Forestry Commission sufficient powers to require new planting and felling proposals to comply with its environmental guidelines before consultation. This has resulted in the Forestry Commission consulting on proposals that do not meet the necessary standard. This wastes time and reduces confidence in the procedures. We have therefore decided that the commission should be able to reject an application at any stage if it does not meet the environmental guidelines or if, in the opinion of the commission, it would be likely to cause significant harm to the environment.

The arrangements that we have announced today will remove unnecessary and unproductive consultation which is wasteful of everyone's time and off-putting to those wishing to plant or manage woodlands. The greater openness we are introducing, together with the Forestry Commission's existing environmental guidelines, statutory environmental assessment for large or very sensitive woodland planting proposals and the forestry standards which the Commission is currently preparing, will allow consultation to be focused on genuinely sensitive cases.

I am confident that the new arrangements will eliminate much of the unnecessary bureaucracy inherent in the present system while, at the same time, maintaining the present high standards of environmental protection. The arrangements will come into effect on 1 August 1996.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group

Sir Jim Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the recent meeting of the Commonwealth ministerial action group. [28304]

Mr. Hanley: I have sent a copy of the concluding statement of the second meeting of the Commonwealth ministerial action group held in London on 23 April to the Library of the House. The group welcomed the transition to an elected civilian government in Sierra Leone in March. It appealed to the international community to assist the Gambia to complete its transition programme to civilian democratic rule. On Nigeria, the group regretted that the Nigerian Government had declined to pursue a dialogue with the Commonwealth since its first meeting and that the human rights situation had continued to deteriorate. Pending further discussion with the Nigerian Government over the next month, the group recommended to Commonwealth member Governments the adoption of a number of measures in order to register continuing disapproval of developments in Nigeria and agreed to consult the European Union, the United States and other members of the international community on possible other additional economic measures.

Government Communications Headquarters

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what services are currently being considered for outsourcing in GCHQ. [28531]

Mr. Rifkind: On 10 April 1996 the director of GCHQ announced that GCHQ's logistics and engineering support services would, from later this year, be contracted out to Vosper-Manteck. There are no current plans for further outsourcing.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the implications for national security of outsourcing at GCHQ; and if he will make a statement. [28532]

Mr. Rifkind: The need to continue to protect the security of GCHQ's sensitive work remains of paramount importance. The arrangements for the outsourcing of GCHQ's logistics and engineering support services will preserve its ability to meet that need. As with all commercial contractors whose service GCHQ employs, the staff of the new contractor will be subject to the same stringent level of security checking as GCHQ's own staff.

Israel-Lebanon Peace Settlement

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government have taken to ensure that European Union countries play a part in the negotiation and implementation of a lasting peace settlement between Israel and Lebanon. [28561]

Mr. Hanley: We and our EU partners are making a significant contribution to the efforts to achieve a lasting peace in the region. The EU provides economic assistance to Lebanon and is involved in the political process. For instance, it will participate in the consultative group on reconstruction in Lebanon.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter to the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) of 2 April—Foreign Office reference: GV100/31101—about his constituent. [28546]

Mr. Hanley: Replies were sent on 3 and 7 May.

Armed Conflict

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he intends to put forward at the Council of Foreign Ministers on 13 May to make the European Union more effective in preventing armed conflict (a) between and (b) within states. [28451]

Mr. David Davis: I shall not be putting forward any proposals about the EU's role in conflict prevention at the 13 May Foreign Affairs Council. The EU's role in conflict prevention in Africa was considered at the 25 March Foreign Affairs Council. Officials are currently examining detailed proposals. The UK plays a leading role in conflict prevention—through national action, through the EU's common foreign and security policy, and through other international organisations, in particular the UN.

Cyprus

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last visited Cyprus. [28411]

Mr. David Davis: The last visit by a Foreign Secretary to Cyprus was in October 1993 for the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in October 1993.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice his Department issues to hon. Members proposing to visit Cyprus. [28414]

Mr. Davis: We welcome the many visits hon. Members make to Cyprus. We encourage them to have contact, where possible, with both Cypriot communities. We advise hon. Members to give us good advance notice of their visits, so that we can offer appropriate assistance.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [28410]

Mr. Davis: The Government remain committed to an active and leading role in the search for settlement in Cyprus within the framework of the UN Secretary-General's mission of good offices.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Royal Fine Art Commission (Report)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when Sir Geoffrey Chipperfield's report on the Royal Fine Art Commission will be made available to the House. [28960]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have today placed in the Library copies of Sir Geoffrey Chipperfield's report and my conclusions. Sir Geoffrey has recognised the valuable work done by the Royal Fine Art Commission to improve the quality of design in the major developments which it reviews. He has considered ways in which this work might be done more effectively and has recommended closer links with the statutory planning system. We are discussing with the Department of the Environment how this may best be done and we shall jointly be consulting the local authority associations.

The report also makes various recommendations for the more efficient running of the commission and its secretariat. We have considered these and implemented them where appropriate.

The commission has a high rate of success in persuading developers to adopt suggested improvements, and it has over the years produced a series of influential seminars and publications. I am grateful for the large amount of time which the chairman and 17 commissioners give to this important work.

Broad-band Communications

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the future use of broad-band communications networks by libraries, museums and galleries. [29162]

Mr. Sproat: The Government are determined to ensure that the latest information technology will be available to public libraries, museums and galleries to give greater access, by the general public, to information and our cultural heritage. With this in mind I held a series of meetings earlier this year with representatives of the cable industry. I am glad therefore to be able to welcome the Cable Communications Association's decision to contribute £50,000 to fund a feasibility study into the use of broad-band networks to ensure that libraries, galleries and museums are used to their full potential. The study will be managed by the Library and Information Commission, and will draw on expertise from the libraries, museums and education sectors.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Electricity Supply

Mr. Stewart: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his policy on the supply of electricity from Scotland to customers in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [27841]

Mr. Page: Subject to the conditions of their licences, this is a commercial matter for the parties involved.

Political Donations

Mr. Allen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will prosecute under the Companies Acts the company whose name has been supplied to him for failure to declare political donations made by its subsidiary in the year ending April 1995. [28469]

Mr. Oppenheim: If allegations of non-compliance with statutory disclosure requirements are drawn to my Department's attention, my Department will look into them, and if there has been a failure to comply with those requirements, it will take appropriate action.

Mr. Allen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will amend the Companies Act 1985 to require Companies House to maintain a register of companies making political donations together with the sum donated and the recipient; and if he will make that register open to public inspection. [28309]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Companies Act 1985 already requires companies to disclose, in their annual directors' reports, political donations exceeding £200.

Manufacturing Industry

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the date by which gross domestic product in manufacturing will be at least 3 per cent. higher than in 1990. [28402.]

Mr. Oppenheim: My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer will set out his latest estimate of manufacturing output in the "Summer Economic Forecast" which will be published in July.

Common Cold Unit

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the common cold unit at Harnham, Salisbury, closed; what were the duties and aims of the unit; for what years since 1966 it published an annual report which was available to the public; and what means it used to advertise for volunteers. [28265]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The common cold unit, which opened in 1946, closed upon the retirement of its director, Dr. D. A. J. Tyrell, in 1990.

In the earlier years, the work of the unit was directed at finding the viruses that caused colds. Late studies looked at how influenza viruses might be attenuated to produce a vaccine strain, and whether it would be possible to prevent or treat colds by giving antiviral drugs. In the last years of the unit, molecular techniques were applied to detect and analyse viruses and the response of the body to them.

As far as I have been able to ascertain, the unit did not publish any annual reports.

Up until the early 1960s, volunteers were recruited largely as a result of favourable press coverage and talks and lectures in colleges and voluntary groups, as well as through word of mouth. The publicity effort became more systematic from the late 1960s, first with the publication of leaflets for use in library and workplace noticeboards, then with advertisements in selected publications. A significant number of volunteers over the years came forward as a result of return visits.

Balance of Trade

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish the net balance of trade between the United Kingdom and the rest of the EU for each year since accession. [28175]

Mr. Oppenheim: The net visible trade balance between the UK and the current 15 EU members for each year since 1973 is published by the Office for National Statistics in table A3 of the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. It is also available on the central shared database, which can be accessed from the Library of the House.

Chemical Metrology

Mr. Day: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the Laboratory of the Government Chemist's work for his Department regarding chemical metrology. [28844]

Mr. Ian Taylor: In the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Hall Green (Mr. Hargreaves) on 2 April 1996, Official Report, columns 149–50, regarding the sale of the Laboratory of the Government Chemist, I stated that LGC will continue to meet the Department's needs as the centre of excellence in chemical metrology. To ensure this, the Department will be guaranteeing work to LGC. The principal element in this will be the major programme in supporting valid analytical measurement—VAM—one of the programmes making up the national measurement system. LGC has acted as main contractor and co-ordinator for VAM since 1988. The Department has committed itself to support this work for a further five years. LGC will also be undertaking other projects, particularly in analytical innovation, biotechnology, and consumer safety, under the DTI's innovation and technology support budget. The total of the guaranteed work to be placed at LGC is £33.5 million over five years. In addition, if the contract referred to in my answer of 2 April is not awarded to the purchaser, the guaranteed workload at LGC will be increased by £750,000 over the five-year period.

Competitiveness White Paper

Mr. Waller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he will publish the KPMG study on outward investment commissioned in the first competitiveness White Paper; and what were its main findings. [29129]

Mr. Nelson: The KPMG study on outwards investment was published by HMSO on Thursday 9 May. Copies are available in the Libraries of both Houses. The study's main findings were that outward investment is becoming increasingly important for UK firms of all sizes, in both services and manufacturing sectors; that the main factor influencing outward investment is the need to increase sales and develop markets; and that the effect of overseas investment on UK firms' employment levels is neutral to positive for all but a small minority of projects.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Waller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the review of the scope for agency status for the industrial tribunals mentioned in chapter 7 of the Green Paper, "Resolving Employment Rights Disputes: Options for Reform." [29131]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government have decided to create a new executive agency within the Department of Trade and Industry to provide the administrative support to the industrial tribunals and the Employment Appeal Tribunal with effect from 1 April 1997. The change to agency status will not affect the tribunal judiciary, who will remain independent of the Executive.

Creating an executive agency will help the tribunals to build on the improvements they have been making over recent years and allow a stronger focus on performance. This will be important in order to deal with an increasing caseload and to improve the quality of service to tribunal users.

South West Leisure Products Ltd.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 29 February, Official Report, column 676, what checks were made at the time of the granting of regional development grant in 1989 to South West Leisure Products Ltd. (a) into the background of the directors and (b) as to whether the company had been placed in the hands of the administrative receivers; and if he will make a statement. [24712]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 16 April 1996]: The only payments of regional development grant to the company were made in 1985 and then eight months before the appointment of administrative receivers in October 1988. Firms meeting the criteria for regional development grants would receive payment of grant automatically on the basis of providing assets or jobs in a development area relating to qualifying activities which would result in new or increased productivity, or would effect a change in the product or process. It was unusual for checks to be made into the background of directors. In accordance with normal practice under the scheme the case file was destroyed—six years after the last action was taken.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 29 April, Official Report, column 363, what was the value of the money paid on demand from the creditors of South West Leisure Products Ltd. under the provision of the two loans guaranteed by his Department. [28297]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 7 May 1996]: The loans guaranteed under the small firms loan guarantee scheme resulted in payments of £27,179.63 and £14,278.82 being made to the lender in November 1988.

Business Links

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the sums of money paid by each business link for information technology systems and licences. [28147]

Mr. Page [holding answer 7 May 1996]: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the information technology system that is used in each operating business link. [28146]

Mr. Page [holding answer 7 May 1996]: All business links are required to have effective IT systems for office services, common client database, client management, and electronic mail. The systems used vary depending on the particular requirements of each business link and details could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

ROM-Data Corporation Ltd.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his letters to the hon. Member for Plymouth, Devonport dated 15 February, 24 March and 2 April, if his Department is currently conducting disciplinary proceedings following the collapse of ROM-Data Corporation Ltd.; and when he expects the process to be concluded. [28269]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 7 May 1996]: An inquiry under the Department's disciplinary procedures is presently in hand. It is not possible to say when this will be completed, but it is in everybody's interest that it should be concluded as quickly as possible, consistent with the principles of fair treatment for those members of staff involved and employment law.

Meat Industry (Job Losses)

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with the meat manufacturing/processing industry in respect of compensation for losses related to BSE; and if he will make a statement. [24102]

Mrs. Browning: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend and I have had extensive discussions with all sectors of the meat industry about the difficulties they are currently facing.

It is not the Government's policy to offer compensation to businesses for losses associated with the BSE scare. The assistance which has been made available is intended to keep open the essential links in the beef supply chain while businesses adapt to the new circumstances.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Adventure Activity Facilities

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what resources are available to Tourism Quality Services Ltd. to enable it to carry out its functions adequately as licensing authority for persons providing facilities for adventure activities; and how many people it employs. [28097]

Mr. Robin Squire: Tourism Quality Services Ltd. will receive income from licence and inspection fees. It is expected to become self-financing on a non-profit-making basis within two to three years. There is a provision in the Activity Centres (Young Persons' Safety) Act 1995 for the Secretary of State to make grants to TQS in respect of expenses which are not met by fees. Provision has been made in the supply estimates for 1996–97 for a grant of up to £238,000 if required. TQS expects eventually to employ between 30 and 40 people to meet the expected demand for licences.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much was spent on official hospitality by her Department and all associated agencies in the financial year 1995–96. [28571]

Mr. Robin Squire: The expected spend for 1995–96, rounded to the nearest £000, is:

DfEE: £98,000

Agencies (Teachers' Pensions Agency and Employment Service): £6,000

Higher Education

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students there are from ethnic minority groups in higher education; and what was the figure in 1979 and 1989. [28090]

Mr. Forth: Information on the ethnicity of higher education students in 1979–80 and 1989–90 was not collected centrally. Information for 1995–96 is as follows:

Home entrants to higher education in higher education institutions in the UK 1995–96 (provisional)

Ethnic group	Number (thousands)
White	472.2
Black Caribbean	7.0
Black African	9.3
Black other	3.0
Indian	14.8
Pakistani	7.7

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total number of students in higher education; and what was the figure in 1979 and 1989. [28088]

Mr. Forth: The information is given in the following table:

Total higher education students

Academic year	Number (thousands)
1979–80[1]	708.2
1995–96[2]	1,650.6

[1] Great Britain, excluding the Open university. [2] Provisional. United Kingdom, excluding the Open university.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many mature students there are in higher education; and what was the number in 1979 and 1989. [28089]

Mr. Forth: The information is given in the following table:

Mature[1] students in higher education

Academic year	Number (thousands)
1979–80[2]	350.0
1995–96[3]	987.4

[1] Those aged 21 and over on an undergraduate course, and those aged 25 and over on a postgraduate course.
[2] Great Britain, excluding the Open university.
[3] Provisional. United Kingdom, excluding the Open university.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many women are now in higher education; and what was the figure for 1979 and 1989. [28225]

Mr. Forth: The information is given in the following table:

Female students in higher education

Academic year	Number (thousands)
1979–80[1]	253.4
1989–90[1]	433.0
1995–96[2]	828.9

[1] Great Britain, excluding the Open university.
[2] Provisional. United Kingdom, excluding the Open university.

Her Majesty's Chief Inspector

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment under what criteria Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools is appraised; and what criteria determine the payment to him of a bonus. [28276]

Mr. Robin Squire: The performance of Her Majesty's chief inspector is appraised each year by the permanent secretary for education and employment. This appraisal takes account of the published job description, a copy of which is in the Library, and the priority objectives for that year agreed between the permanent secretary and HMCI at the beginning of the year. HMCI can each year receive a non-consolidated bonus in recognition of his performance against these objectives.

Grant-maintained Status (Promotion Costs)

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much her Department (a) spent in 1995–96 and (b) plans to spend in 1996–97 on promoting grant-maintained status for schools. [28211]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department provides factual information about grant-maintained status to schools and parents to help them look at the option in a balanced and objective way.

We provide this information primarily through publications, "Going GM" conferences, GM open days, and other support. Expenditure on all these activities in 1995–96 was some £0.6 million. The budget for GM schools' information for 1996–97 allows for spending up to a maximum of £0.9 million.

Conduct of Schools (Ministerial Powers)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she next proposes to use her powers under section 220 of the Education Act 1993. [28958]

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I am today launching consultation on a proposal to transfer Langham school, Haringey, to the control of an education association.

After an inspection in November 1994, Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools decided that this 900-pupil secondary school in Tottenham was failing to provide and acceptable standard of education to its pupils. The school's governors and Haringey local education authority prepared an action plan for the school's recovery. However, subsequent monitoring visits by Her Majesty's inspectors have found very limited progress at the school. The most recent visit in March recorded that GCSE entries and results declined between 1994 and 1995. The expectations of teachers and the achievements of pupils remain low. The standard of teaching has not improved. Indeed, while the 1994 Ofsted report found that "the majority of the teaching is generally satisfactory", the March 1996 Ofsted report, based on a smaller but still significant sample of lessons, found that "the quality of teaching was satisfactory in less than half the lessons".

I have considered carefully the findings of Ofsted. I have also read carefully a joint response to Ofsted's findings submitted by the school's governors and Haringey LEA. In their response they point to a fall in exclusions and to improvements in behaviour but they accept the findings of Ofsted on the quality of teaching and pupils' achievements.

Having considered all the circumstances of the school, I now propose to place Langham school under the control of an education association. However, before taking a decision on this, I am inviting comments from all interested parties by 14 June 1996.

If the school is transferred to an education association, I have it in mind to place it under the control of the North East London Education Association, which was previously responsible for Hackney Downs school. I am therefore consulting the NELEA on this proposal on a contingency basis.

Although Langham school presents serious challenges, I very much hope that the action that I am proposing will result in its improvement to the point where it offers a good education to all its pupils.

PRIME MINISTER

Office Space

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the square footage and cost of office space rented by his Department and its agencies and the number of his Department's or agencies' buildings partly or fully unoccupied together with the square footage of that unoccupied office space and its estimated rental value where available in each of the past five financial years. [27731]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office is part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 9 May. [27569]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 9 May. [27570]

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

European Union Flag

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister which Government offices displayed the European Union flag on 8 May; and if he will make a statement. [28592]

The Prime Minister: So far as I am aware, none.

DEFENCE

Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what restrictions are placed on staff at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment in respect of testing chemical agents on themselves; when this policy was introduced; and if staff who break this policy are subject to disciplinary action. [28037]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 9 May 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question about staff at the former Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment testing substances on themselves since this falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency which includes CBD Sector in one of its divisions.

Staff in what is now called the Protection and Life Sciences Division, Porton Down are not permitted to test chemical agents on themselves. This has been a long standing policy of the establishment at Porton Down but we have been unable to find a date on which this policy was formally introduced. We are aware that some experiments were conducted involving staff and the incapacitating drug LSD in the early 1960s but we are unaware of any other formal studies since that time having been undertaken involving members of staff. If any member of staff was found to have deviated from the policy on self testing they would be subject to the same disciplinary action expected for any other infringement of workplace regulations.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the three-year review of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment as an agency of his Department finished. [28041]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 9 May 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the three year review of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment as Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency which now includes the former CBDE in one of its divisions.

The three year review of the Chemical and Biological Defence Agency consisted of three elements: the evaluation of performance, reconsideration of Prior Options, and revision of the Framework Document. The evaluation of performance was carried out by Coopers and Lybrand in 1993 and their report was received in early 1994. The second phase involving reconsideration of the Prior Options coincided with the Defence Cost Studies being carried out by the Ministry of Defence as part of the Front Line First review. The Defence Cost Studies exercise recommended that CBDE should become an element of a new science and technology agency which became known as the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency and was launched as a trading fund on 1 April 1995. The move into the DERA therefore superseded the Prior Options reconsideration and the revision of the Framework Document.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if service personnel who take part in the service volunteers programme at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment are subject to (a) positive and (b) negative vetting; [28035]

(2) if service personnel who take part in the service volunteers programme at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment are required to sign the Official Secrets Act 1911 during their stay. [28034]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 9 May 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your questions about whether service volunteers attending the former Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down are security vetted and sign the Official Secrets Act. This falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency and I am answering both questions in this reply.

All those who take part in the volunteer programme at what is now known as the Protection and Life Sciences Division, Porton Down are serving members of the Armed Forces and as such will have signed the Official Secrets Act. The volunteers are not required to sign the Official Secrets Act again during their stay at Porton Down

Since 1990 service personnel have had routine security clearances conducted as part of the recruitment process. No further levels of security clearances are required in order to take part in the studies conducted at Porton Down.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what details of experiments, when requested, are given to relatives of service personnel who took part in the service volunteers programme at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment in cases where the service personnel are no longer living. [28043]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 9 May 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question about providing information to relatives of volunteers at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment Porton Down since the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency now includes CBD Sector in one of its divisions.

To date we have not received any enquiries from the relatives of deceased former volunteers. If we were to be approached by the close relatives of a former volunteer we would provide them with the same information we would have given the volunteer himself regarding their parent, child or spouse's experiences at Porton Down.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for which civilian organisations the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment has carried out work since 1966; and if it has been the objective of the establishment to increase its work for civilian bodies since 1966. [28042]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 9 May 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question about work done for civilian organisations by the Chemical and Biological Defence Sector (CBD) of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA).

In common with the rest of DERA, CBD undertakes work for other government departments and the commercial sector. It does this primarily to maintain its scientific capability against a background of continuing budgetary pressures on the MOD. Without such work the scientific support essential for the defence of the realm in the face of an increasingly complex spectrum of chemical and biological threats would be compromised.

A secondary motivation for CBD's involvement in non-MOD work is to facilitate technology transfer in line with UK Government policy. This aims to maximise the benefit of MOD expenditure on defence research through its application in other areas. Working with the civil sector on a commercial basis allows the MOD's technology to be valued as an investment and properly exploited to the good of the UK economy.

I regret it would involve disproportionate costs to try and identify all the civilian organisations for which the establishment at Porton Down has conducted research since 1966.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the responsibilities and objectives of the medical division of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment; when this division was set up; who have been the superintendents or heads of this division since 1966; and in which years they were superintendent or head of this division. [28036]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 9 May 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the medical division of the former Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down which is now part of the Chemical and Biological Defence Sector of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA).

As part of the organisational changes which occurred when the former CBDE joined DERA the medical division was amalgamated with the former biology and microbiology divisions to form the Medical Countermeasures business centre. This department has the responsibility of carrying out research to increase the body's capability to withstand attack from chemical or biological warfare agents and to provide treatments should personnel be exposed to such materials. The research interests include biochemistry and toxicology, drug evaluation, vaccine research, physiology and human factors, and surgical and materials specialisations.

The Medical division was first formally identified by that title in 1954 and had its roots in the physiology section which had existed at Porton Down since World War 1. Since 1966 it has had 5 superintendents who have held the posts for varying periods of time from one to thirteen years. Apart from acknowledging the head of the establishment I regret it is not our practice to name individuals who hold specific posts within the organisation.

I hope this information is helpful.

Defence Research Information Centre

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the responsibilities of the defence research information centre; what are the titles of the publications or bulletins which are published by the defence research information centre (a) regularly and (b) occasionally; and what is the function and nature of each of these publications or bulletins. [28044]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 9 May 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the Defence Research Information Centre which is now part of the Defence Support Services division of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency of which I am Chief Executive.

I hope this information helps.

HMS Dasher

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will arrange for all papers relating to the loss of HMS Dasher on 27 March 1943 on the River Clyde, including the findings resulting from subsequent dives by the wrecks section of the Hydrographic Office, to be made available to interested parties. [28169]

Mr. Soames: HMS Dasher, an escort carrier based on a mercantile hull and built in the USA, blew up and sank on 27 March 1943, due to an explosion in her aviation fuel system. All papers relating to her loss have been available at the Public Record Office since 1972. A deep dive on this wreck was conducted in January 1982, on behalf of the Royal Navy Hydrographic Office. The purpose of the dive was positively to identify Dasher, which is lying close to another wreck, and to obtain an accurate fix of her position for charting purposes. The information now appears on Admiralty chart No. 2491.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will bring forward proposals for official recognition by the Royal Navy of the loss of HMS Dasher and the loss of human life. [28170]

Mr. Soames: The names of all those who died as a result of the loss of HMS Dasher, and whose bodies were not recovered, are commemorated on various official war memorials. The graves of those whose bodies were recovered are the responsibility either of their families or, if the bodies were not claimed at the time, of the Commonwealth War Graves Commission. In line with the general practice, my Deaprtment has no plans for further recognition of the loss of HMS Dasher.

War Crime Sites

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of British troops deployed with the United Nations implementation force—IFOR—in respect of their role in protecting suspected war crime sites at the request of the international tribunal of The Hague. [28273]

Mr. Soames: IFOR's primary mission in Bosnia is to ensure compliance with the military aspects of the peace agreement. It does not have the resources to guard suspected mass grave sites on a continuous basis without detriment to this mission. IFOR provides, however, a secure environment for the tribunal's work and logistic support and protection for its investigators on a case-by-case basis. In addition, IFOR conducts aerial reconnaissance and patrols in the area of suspected mass grave sites to monitor and report on any tampering or suspicious activity.

The United Kingdom fully supports the work of the tribunal and British troops are closely involved in assisting their investigations. The tribunal's chief prosecutor has expressed full satisfaction with the level of support provided by IFOR.

Defence Analytical Services Agency

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Defence Analytical Services Agency for 1996–97. [28961]

Mr. Soames: Key targets have been set for the chief executive of the Defence Analytical Services Agency for financial year 1996–97. The targets build on the progress already made by the agency since it formed in July 1992 and are as follows:

Delivery of customer service and quality

About three quarters of the agency's business is covered by service level agreements with customers, which set out the targets and standards for the level of service, timeliness and quality of work. For the remaining parts of the business, for which service level agreements are not appropriate, project agreements are in place. Key targets are:

(a) To meet at least 95 per cent. of the timeliness and quality targets set in the service level agreements and project agreements.

(b) To have at least 90 per cent. of customers saying they are at least satisfied with the timeliness, quality of work and helpfulness of staff in the annual customer satisfaction survey covering all aspects of the business.

(c) To engage customers in a fundamental review of service level agreements to ensure they fully reflect current and expected needs.

(d) To demonstrate a further, independently assessed, improvement in the quality of published output.

Efficiency and use of resources

The agency plans to make significant savings in 1996–97 as well as meeting the demands arising from a number of important studies and initiatives. Key targets are:

(e) To bring forward £136,000 "Competing for Quality" savings scheduled for 1997–98 to 1996–97.

(f) To support the MOD's work on the Gulf health research programme, implementation of the Bett study, and civilian pay and grading from within existing resources.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent on official hospitality by his Department and all associated agencies in the financial year 1995–96. [28568]

Mr. Soames: During financial year 1995–96 my Department spent £5.105 million on official hospitality. These figures include expenditure incurred by the Ministry of Defence itself, by formations and establishments of the armed forces at home and abroad, and by individual officers occupying command and international appointments for which entertainment allowances are payable. SOCIAL SECURITY

Lone Parents

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate his Department has made of the percentage of lone parents in (a) 1984 and (b) 1995 who are (i) divorced and (ii) widowed; and if he will make a statement. [27896]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The latest available estimates are for 1994–95.

The estimates are:

Percentage

	1984	1994–95
Divorced/separated	68	58
Widowed	12	5
Single never married	20	37

Note:
The estimates are based on sample survey data.

Department of Social Security data.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the reasons for (a) disregarding disability living allowance for assessment purposes under the Child Support Acts and (b) taking it into account in the severe disability allowance. [28033]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Disability living allowance is paid in recognition of the additional needs of a disabled person. It is disregarded in the assessment of child support maintenance liability since it would be inappropriate to treat it as income available for that purpose.

For this reason the allowance is disregarded in calculating entitlement to severe disablement allowance and the severe disability premium in income support. Severe disability allowance does not exist.

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the cost to the Benefits Agency of carrying out a trawl of its industrial injuries benefit cases to identify the retirement allowance and reduced earnings claimants who have attained pension age since April 1989 before the introduction of the changes to the reduced earnings allowance on 24 March. [28029]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of industrial injuries benefit is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 8 May 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent parliamentary Question asking what was the cost to the Benefits Agency (BA) of carrying out a trawl of their Industrial Injuries Benefit cases to identify the Retirement Allowance and Reduced Earnings claimants who have attainted pension age since April 1989 before the introduction of the changes to the Reduced Earnings Allowance on 24th March.

£2,287,000 was allocated to BA Districts for this identification exercise. This figure is provisional and may be subject to change.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Motability

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what access Motability has to the funds of Motability Finance Ltd; [27540]

(2) who is responsible for the financial reserves of Motability Finance Ltd. [27232]

Mr. Burt: Financial reserves are maintained by Motability Finance Ltd. as a normal business measure to safeguard the operation of its lease and hire purchase schemes. Those reserves are legally owned by MFL. Reserves held in excess of requirements have been transferred by way of gift into the Motability 10th Anniversary trust, which provides charitable support to the Motability scheme.

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the percentage of Child Support Agency assessments cleared (a) within 13 weeks, (b) within 26 weeks and (c) in more than 26 weeks in each month since the Child Support Agency started to operate. [28055]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Social Fund

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average value of (a) social fund loans and (b) social fund grants to pensioners in the most recent year for which figures are available. [28339]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out below.

AVERAGE VALUE OF SOCIAL FUND DISCRETIONARY AWARDS TO PENSIONERS: 1995–96

Community care grants: £264.82

Budgeting loans: £236.40

Crisis loans: £66.45

Note:
The definition of the pensioner client group includes applicant or partner aged:

60 or over with income support—IS—pensioner premium

80 or over with IS higher pensioner premium

60 to 70, disabled with IS higher pensioner premium.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the expenditure on (a) social fund grants and (b) social fund loans to pensioners in the most recent year for which figures are available. [28338]

Mr. Evans: The information is set out in the table.

Social fund grants and loans pensioner expenditure: 1995–96

Community care grants: £13.5 million

Budgeting loans: £6.5 million

Crisis loans: £0.4 million

Note:
The definition of the Pensioner client group includes applicant or partner aged:
60 or over with income support—IS—pensioner premium
80 or over with IS higher pensioner premium
60 to 70, disabled with IS higher pensioner premium.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average pay back period for social fund loans to pensioners; and what is the average weekly deduction from benefit. [28340]

Mr. Evans: The average pay back period for social fund loans to pensioners is not immediately available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The repayment terms for social fund loans are designed to be affordable to the applicant. The rate of repayment depends upon the applicant's individual circumstances. Although most loans are repaid within 78 weeks, the period of repayment may be extended up to 104 weeks.

The average weekly deduction from pensioners' benefit is £6.25. This figure is calculated from statistics published in the income support statistics quarterly inquiry, May 1995 and is the latest information available.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners currently have more than one social fund loan; what is the current average value of (a) the loans outstanding and (b) the original sum borrowed. [28341]

Mr. Evans: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much was spent on official hospitality by his Department and all associated agencies in the financial year 1995–96. [28566]

Mr. Burt: Expenditure information for the 1995–96 financial year has not yet been finalised but provisional figures indicate the total amount spent in that year on official hospitality by the Department of Social Security and all associated agencies was £105,541.

Mortgage Interest Direct

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if adjudicating officers are implementing the R v. Secretary of State ex parte Golding judgment. [26510]

Mr. Roger Evans [holding answer 24 April 1996]: The Department has taken further advice regarding the implications of the judgment. Contrary to what we thought at the time of the judgment we now understand that, pending the Department's appeal against the decision, paragraph 11 of schedule 9A to the claims and payments regulations is not an appropriate vehicle for recovering overpayments of mortgage interest direct directly from lenders where the overpayment occurred prior to the new adjudication decision. The Benefits Agency has instructed local offices accordingly.

Severe Hardship Payments

Mr. Roger Evans [Pursuant to his reply 3 April, Official Report, column 419]: Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency is writing again to clarify his reply of 3 April 1996.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 8 May 1996:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the number of young people claiming severe hardship payments currently (a) nationally, (b) in London, (c) in Waltham Forest, (d) in Redbridge and (e) in Leyton. I am writing to clarify the information provided in my letter of 3 April 1996.

I regret that the figure I quoted for the number of young people claiming severe hardship in the BA Districts which include the London postal area was incorrect. The figure should have been 617. This figure is provisional and subject to change.

I apologise for any inconvenience this may have caused you.

A key objective of the regional strategy for Northern Ireland health and personal social services 1992 to 1997 was that each board should ascertain the number and needs of sensorily impaired people in its population and ensure access to specialist teams of staff to provide support for people with a hearing and/or visual impairment. Boards have identified services for sensorily impaired people as a priority in their purchasing plans in accordance with their regional strategy and rehabilitation and social work services are provided for deaf-blind people within each board area.

WALES

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) deputations and (b) representations he has received concerning BSE; and if he will make a statement. [28067]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office has received numerous representations about BSE and we have met many individuals and organisations on this subject.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what further steps he will take to tackle BSE in Wales. [28404]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government are considering the possibility of selective culling to accelerate the decline in the number of BSE cases occurring in the future. Any such cull would have to lead to a genuine reduction in the future incidence of BSE if it was to be worth doing. The aim would be to target cattle most at risk of developing

BSE. A final decision on whether to take this approach will be made in the context of negotiations on lifting the current European Union ban on the export of British beef.

South-East Wales Ambulance Trust

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultation he has had with the chairman of the South-East Wales ambulance trust about management redundancies; what provision will be made in the accounts for the year 1996–97 for the costs of the redundancies; and what assessment he has made of that impact on the delivery of services. [28081]

Mr. Hague: None; these are operational matters for the board of the trust. My officials will be discussing with the trust its plans for 1996–97 on receipt of its annual operational plan by the end of May 1996.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultation he has had with the chairman of the South-East Wales ambulance trust concerning plans to reduce the number of ambulance stations in (a) Powys, (b) Gwent and (c) South Glamorgan. [28082]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend and I have no plans to meet leaders of the unitary councils in Wales to discuss the consequences of local government reorganisation.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each health board area in Wales the number of fully-trained specialists in the NHS in (a) speech and language therapy, (b) physiotherapy and (c) chiropody for (i) 1990 and (ii) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [27895]

Mr. Richards: The information is given in the following table. Reliable data are not available for 1990 so 1991 data have been given. Staff employed by NHS trusts are shown in the health authority area in which the trust is situated.

[3] As most staff in the relevant pay groups are paid on local pay scales and details of occupation are not available centrally, no reliable information can be given.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff he employs in (a) Wales and (b) London; and what were the equivalent figures since 1980. [28064]

Mr. Hague: The number of full-time equivalent staff employed in my Department in (a) Wales and (b) London is:

	Wales	London

Bridges

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the amount of money committed by his Department for carrying out assessments required to plan for the strengthening of bridges required under European Union regulations (a) for each local authority in Wales and (b) for Wales; and how much is committed for 1995–96 and for 1996–97 showing the totals as a percentage of overall local authority budgets; and if he will make a statement. [28156]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: It is estimated that some £4.5 million will be spent on the trunk road—including M4 motorway—assessment programme. Within this total, £706,000 was expended in 1995–96 and £473,000 is estimated for 1996–97.

Local authorities are responsible for bridges on non-trunk roads. The bulk of local authority resources are not attributed to particular activities and it is for individual authorities to determine the level of resources to allocate to bridges, and other programmes, taking into account statutory responsibilities and local priorities.

River Pollution

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what research he has evaluated about the danger of acidification of the head waters of Welsh rivers as a result of emissions from power stations in (a) Pembrokeshire and (b) elsewhere. [27919]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: A report commissioned by the Welsh Office entitled "A Review of the Impact of Current and Future Acid Deposition in Wales" was completed in February 1993. I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House. This review has led to a survey of acidification in rivers and lakes which is under way: it is planned to publish the results in 1997.

Penyclipe Tunnel

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what maintenance costs have been incurred on the Penyclipe tunnel for each year of its operation. [28453]

Mr. Hague: Ministerial colleagues and I make overseas visits from time to time to promote inward investment into Wales, to assist our businesses in the promotion of their international trade and in relation to European and other issues. A full list of such visits was placed in the Library of the House on Friday 1 March this year. I have subsequently led a short inward investment mission to the USA, and my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State visited Luxembourg to attend an Agriculture Council meeting.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the rail links between (a) north Wales and London Euston, (b) north-east Wales and the channel tunnel and (c) Holyhead and Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [28408]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The provision of rail links in North Wales is a commercial matter for the railway operators.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will undertake discussions with the rail regulator with regard to the future levels of service between north and south Wales. [28272]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The franchising director has completed consultation on the south Wales and west draft passenger service requirement. He is assessing the representations he has received and will publish the final requirement in due course.

Services to be provided in addition to the requirement will be a matter for the commercial judgment of the franchisee.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent on official hospitality by his Department and all associated agencies in the financial year 1995–96. [28565]

Comptroller and Auditor General's Report

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the name and address of the general practitioner fundholding practice mentioned in paragraph 43 of the Comptroller and Auditor General's report on the "NHS (England) Summarised Accounts 1994–95;" and if he will list the health authority and the job titles of the three members of staff who received relocation payments mentioned in paragraph 48 of the Comptroller and Auditor General's report on the "NHS (England) Summarised Accounts 1994–95". [22988]

Mr. Malone: No. It is not normal practice for Ministers to identify individuals mentioned but not named in such reports.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 502, what was the grade of the ex-civil servant who carried out the independent inquiry into the circumstances leading to the failure to enact the secondary legislation in respect of the payment of management allowances to general practitioner fundholders; which branch of his Department that person worked in when last a civil servant; what was the cost of the inquiry; and if the work carried out was tendered for in open competition. [28118]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 25 April at columns 282–83. Mr. Strachan Heppell, a deputy secretary, was previously the head of the health and social services group in the Department before his retirement from full-time work in 1995. Mr. Heppell was asked to undertake the inquiry because of his prior knowledge of departmental and wider civil service standards and procedures and at no additional cost to the Department.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 502, when the implementation team was set up; what grades of civil servant and how many in each grade have been assigned to it; and how long he expects the team will require to complete the action plan. [28119]

Mr. Malone: A small project team of senior managers has been set up, led by Department's principal establishments and finance officer, to take forward implementation of the inquiry's recommendations. Changes already in hand will address some of the problems identified. Others will require work over several months.

Breast Implants

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on silicone breast implants in the last year. [28318]

Mr. Horam: We have received 33 representations from hon. Members, members of the public and manufacturers.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to change the rules with regard to exemption from prescription charges for terminally ill patients. [28557]

Mr. Malone: None. Many people who are terminally ill benefit from our extensive exemption arrangements, which are among the most generous in Europe. In 1996–97 we expect 85 per cent. of prescriptions to be dispensed free.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 7 March, Official Report, columns 321–22, (1) if the data on myocardial infarction from the Spitzer and Jick studies was made available to the Committee on Safety of Medicines on 13 October 1995; [27751]

(2) if the interim data from the transnational study was made available to the Committee on Safety of Medicines at its meeting on 13 October 1995. [27752]

Mr. Malone: Limited data on myocardial infarction from the Jick study were made available to the committee. The committee considered the data on venous thromboembolism from the transnational study at its meeting on 13 October 1995, but no data on myocardial infarction from this study were available to the Medicines Control Agency or the Committee on Safety of Medicines at that time.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 25 March, Official Report, column 428, if his officials assisted the chairman of the Committee on Safety of Medicines in drafting the letter of 18 October relating to oral contraceptives containing desogestrel and gestodene. [27753]

Mr. Malone: The letter was drafted by the chairman of the Committee on Safety of Medicines on the basis of the committee's recommendations. Officials were involved in making minor amendments to the letter. The final version was agreed by the chairman.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons he is unable to make available the advice from the Committee on Safety of Medicines of 13 October 1995 on oral contraceptives. [27756]

Mr. Malone: The advice of the Committee on Safety of Medicines is considered to be a confidential communication between the committee and the licensing authority. Such communications are not normally published because they may contain information which is sensitive for commercial reasons or because their disclosure would undermine the policy-making process.

However, on this occasion, in the interests of public health, the advice given by the CSM at the meeting on 13 October 1995 was sent out in a letter from the chairman dated 18 October 1995 to all doctors and pharmacists. Copies of this letter are available in the Library.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those members of the transnational study team which his officials met on the afternoon of 9 October 1995. [27759]

Mr. Malone: Professor W. Spitzer and Dr. K. MacRae.

Mr. Malone: The "Dear Doctor" letters sent by the Committee on Safety of Medicines to the medical profession since 1980 are shown in the table. Information regarding any licensing action taken in respect of some of the products listed in the letters is confidential. The relevant information for the others could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

[27758]

(2) if he will provide a list of properties that have definitely been identified as being for sale, indicating their location and market value. [27288]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 30 April 1996]: Information on properties sold in the last three years is not available centrally.

A list of non-trust national health service properties which are currently for sale will be placed in the Library.

It would be inappropriate to quote market values for individual properties as this could prejudice negotiations with prospective purchasers.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Firearms Amnesty

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what happened to the weapons collected under the 1989 firearms amnesty; and how many were destroyed. [28115]

Mr. Maclean: Of the 47,902 firearms surrendered to police forces during the September 1988 amnesty, approximately 3,000 were allocated to suitably authorised, publicly funded museums and other public bodies with a legitimate interest in the historical or scientific development of weapons. The remainder were destroyed.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many weapons were collected under the 1989 firearms amnesty; and how many were self-loading rifles. [28114]

The table also shows figures for those who may not have been charged with an offence but were excluded, deported, or removed.

Figures for convictions are not readily available on a year-to-year basis. From January 1989 to December 1995, 22 people detained under the prevention of terrorism legislation were convicted of offences under the Act(s)*, and 75 people were convicted of offences under other legislation.

In addition, since 1989 nine people have been removed to Northern Ireland, charged and subsequently convicted of offences.

Northern Ireland

Year	Detained	Charged
1989[1]	1,583	360
1990	1,549	370

1993	1,641	382
1994	1,503	367
1995	443	108

Figures on convictions in Northern Ireland are not readily available and would be collected in the time available only at disproportionate cost.

[1] The Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 came into effect on 22 March 1989. These figures may include some people who were detained and/or convicted under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984 from 1 January 1989 to 22 March.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current average time a prisoner spends on remand; and what was the figure in 1979. [28108]

Miss Ann Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Ian Pearson, dated 9 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the current average time a prisoner spends on remand; and what was the figure in 1979.

Information for 1995 is given in the attached table. Information for 1979 is published in table 2.1 of the 1989 edition of 'Prison statistics, England and Wales', a copy of which is in the Library.

Estimated average time spent in custody for untried and convicted unsentenced prisoners, in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales in 1995[(1)] by sex.

Type of custody	Estimated average number of days in custody[4] Male	Female
Untried[2]	56	43
Convicted Unsentenced[3]	34	30

[2] Time spent in custody before conviction.

[3] Time spent in custody after conviction before sentence.

[4] Estimated from number of receptions and average population in 1995.

Notifiable Offences

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many notifiable offences were recorded by the police: how many persons were (a) cautioned by the police and (b) found guilty at (i) magistrates courts, (ii) Crown courts, (iii) both courts and (c) found guilty or cautioned in (1) 1980 and (2) 1995 in the Metropolitan police area. [28022]

Mr. Maclean: Information for 1980, 1994 and 1995 is given in the table below.

Summary of criminal justice statistics 1980, 1994 and 1995

Metropolitan Police Area

	1980	1994	1995[1]
Notifiable offences recorded	584,137	849,976	840,478
Indictable offences
Cautions	8,464	37,167	—
Convictions—magistrates' courts	68,659	39,603	—
Crown court	15,140	13,156	—
All courts	83,799	52,759	—
Total cautioned and convicted	92,263	89,926	—

[1] 1995 cautioning and convictions data will not be available until the autumn 1996.

Rifle and Pistol Clubs

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many approved rifle and pistol clubs there were in the United Kingdom during (a) 1980, (b) 1985, (c) 1992, (d) 1993, (e) 1994 and (f) 1995. [28264]

Mr. Maclean: There are currently 2,160 approved clubs in the United Kingdom. Information about the number of clubs in previous years is available only at disproportionate cost.

Pursuant to my reply of 21 March to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr Corbyn), column 295, I should like to correct the figure quoted at that time for approved rifle and pistol clubs in England and Wales which is now known to be incorrect. The correct figure is 1,871.

Abusive Telephone Calls

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions there have been in each of the past 15 years related to abusive and threatening telephone calls; and if he will make a statement. [27565]

Mr. Maclean: It is not possible, from the information held centrally to identify offences relating to "the sending, by means of public telecommunicating system, a message or other matter that is grossly offensive or of an indecent, obscene or menacing character" from other summary offences pertaining to the appropriate Acts.

Police and Fire Services

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to establish police and fire service funds to meet future pension liabilities for new entrants to which both employers and employees would pay contributions; and if he will make a statement. [28247]

Mr. Maclean : The Government have no plans to make the police and fire service pension schemes funded ones. Like most other public service pension schemes, they are financed on a "pay-as-you-go" basis.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent on official hospitality by his Department and all associated agencies in the financial year 1995–96. [28572]

Mr. Howard: The provisional figure for expenditure on official hospitality by my Department and its executive agencies in the financial year 1995–96 is £32,331. This differs from the projected budget of £60,570 given in my reply of 18 December, Official Report, column 969, principally because of a significant reduction in forecast expenditure on hospitality by the Forensic Science Service executive agency.

"Wheelclamping on Private Land"

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he published "Wheelclamping on Private Land"; when the consultation period ended; and when he intends to bring forward proposals to deal with the issue. [28413]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 8 May 1996]: The consultation paper "Wheelclamping on Private Land" was published on 23 February 1993, with a request for response by 31 May 1993. The consultation exercise produced a great deal of useful information but no consensus about a solution. We are considering what action, if any, should be taken to regulate this activity.

Clear-up and Conviction Rates

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what have been the conviction rates in cases involving a plea of not guilty for each police authority in each of the last five years in (i) violent crime, (ii) car crime, and (iii) other serious crime; and if he will make a statement. [28228]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 8 May 1996]: Information regarding plea data is not available.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on conviction rates across England and Wales. [28234]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 8 May 1996]: Information is published annually in the Command Paper "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" on the number of prosecutions and convictions, from which the conviction rate can be calculated. Copies of the Command Paper are in the Library.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what have been the (a) crime clear-up and (b) conviction rates for each police authority area in each of the last five years in (i) violent crime, (ii) car crime, and (iii) other serious crime; and if he will make a statement. [28229]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 8 May 1996]: The available information is given in the following tables. Information on conviction rates for 1995 will not be available until the autumn.

[1] Includes the indictable offences excluding violent and car crime offences as in tables above.
Indictable offences only have been used as nearest equivalent to notifiable offences.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are his definitions of (a) crime clear-up rates and (b) conviction rates. [28230]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 8 May 1996]: The clear-up rate is the number of offences cleared up as a percentage of the number of offences recorded, excluding offences of criminal damage value £20 and under. The conviction rate is the number of convictions at all courts as a percentage of prosecutions.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the changes made to the crime clear-up rates statistical methodology over the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [28238]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 8 May 1996]: There have ben no changes to the statistical methodology for clear-up rates. Since 1994, the Home Office has adopted the Audit Commission definitions of primary and secondary clear-ups, but this has no effect on the number of offences cleared up or on the overall clear-up rate. The definitions are given in note 4 of Home Office statistical bulletin 3/96, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Prisons (Drugs)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been successfully prosecuted in each of the last six years for smuggling illegal drugs into prisons; and if he will make a statement. [28232]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 8 May 1996]: The location of an offence committed under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 is not recorded centrally.

Ministerial Group on Juveniles

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Ministerial group on juveniles met; and what (a) reports and (b) initiatives have been published as a result of the meeting. [28239]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 8 May 1996]: The ministerial group on juveniles met on 18 January and 13 March. A press notice published after the group's inaugural meeting announced a programme of work, which is now being taken forward, to strengthen measures for intervening effectively with those children who are most at risk of offending. This work will include the publication of practical guidance to help local agencies ensure a co-ordinated approach to identifying and dealing with these children.

Child Abuse (North Wales)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what consultations he has had with the chief constable of North Wales concerning compensation payments to alleged victims of child abuse at North Wales children's homes in circumstances where no proceedings have been taken against those allegedly guilty of the abuse; [27624]

(2) how many alleged victims of child abuse in North Wales children's homes have been paid compensation by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board; and how many such payments involved victims allegedly abused by persons against whom no police proceedings have taken place. [27627]

Mr. Maclean [holding answers 8 May 1996]: I have not had any consultations with the chief constable of the North Wales police on this matter.

I understand that to date the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board has made 27 awards of compensation and refused 14 applications. The number of payments made where no prosecution resulted is not readily available. However, the standard of proof required under the compensation scheme is that obtaining in the civil courts, namely "the balance of probabilities", not the stricter standard of "beyond reasonable doubt" required in the criminal courts. It is accordingly within the board's discretion to make awards in cases where no prosecution is brought.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Beef Exports

10. Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of United Kingdom beef exports is represented by beef exported from Northern Ireland. [27466]

Mr. Baldry: Beef exports from Northern Ireland accounted for approximately 28 per cent. of total UK beef exports in 1995.

14. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress he has made in promoting the full resumption of the international beef trade; and if he will make a statement. [27471]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement I made on 1 May, Official Report, columns 1147–48.

15. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on developments in European Union beef markets. [27472]

Mr. Baldry: EU beef markets are, to say the least, extremely turbulent at the present time.

18. Mr. Duncan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made on the implications of the EU ban for the future of the beef industry. [27476]

Mr. Baldry: The United Kingdom's long and distinguished history as a trading nation has benefited considerably in recent years from a significant export trade in beef and beef products. The cessation of that trade directly threatens thousands of British jobs, severe financial hardship for those involved and possibly irreparable damage to the structure and profitability of the British beef industry.

19. Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has made to his German counterpart about the European Community ban on British beef. [27477]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been in contact with my German counterpart, Joachim Borchert, on numerous occasions over the last few weeks during which time I have consistently and forcefully impressed upon him the fact that the export ban is unjustified and should be lifted forthwith.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the penalties for a breach of the EC ban on the export of British beef and beef products by a British exporter, and about how such penalties would be enforced. [27350]

Mrs. Browning: It would be an offence under the Products of Animal Origin (Import and Export) Regulations 1992 (SI 1992 No 3298), as amended, to export or to consign for export to another member state, British beef or beef products without the necessary export health certification. These export certificates have been withdrawn by the Government following the EC ban. A copy of the regulations is available in the Library of the House. The penalties applying are set out in regulation 28. Enforcement of the regulations is shared between the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the local authority concerned. In practice local authorities generally take prosecutions under the regulations. Under regulation 3 the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, and in some circumstances the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Health, have powers to act where a local authority has failed to enforce.

All export certificates required by third countries to accompany consignments of British beef and beef products have also been withdrawn. Operational staff at all Customs export stations have been informed of the terms of the EC ban and have been instructed to refuse to release for export to third countries any goods covered by the ban. Customs' legal powers in respect of properly declared goods of the descriptions covered by the Commission decision extend no further than refusing permission to export. Failure to present goods for such export, however, is an offence under the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979.

In the case of wilful breach of Customs controls, for example by misdescription of banned beef and beef products, powers in the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 provide for the prosecution of offenders and in some circumstances the forfeiture of goods. The commissioners of Customs and Excise will consider prosecution of such offences in individual cases using the criteria that they apply in all prosecutions.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

11. Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met consumers' representatives to discuss measures to control bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [27467]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Yesterday.

17. Mr. Turner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met with consumers' representatives to discuss measures to control bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [27475]

Mr. Hogg: Yesterday afternoon.

22. Mr. Etherington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met farmers' representatives to discuss bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [27480]

Mrs. Browning: My ministerial colleagues and I are in frequent contact with farmers' representatives. We are always willing to discuss the current difficulties and to listen to their views.

26. Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he has given to knackers' yards and the rendering industry in relation to implementation of new BSE regulations. [27484]

Mrs. Browning: The rendering industry and knackers' yards have been kept fully informed of the requirements of the new BSE regulations as they affect these sectors.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will initiate a comprehensive inquiry into the cause of the duration of the problems in respect of BSE. [27473]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The ruminant feed ban introduced in 1988 has been instrumental in reducing the number of confirmed cases by 75 per cent. since the peak in 1993. It is clear that the ban was not completely watertight and it has been progressively tightened, most recently to prevent mammalian meat and bone meal being fed to any farm animals. But the benefits of the more recent measures will take some time to see, as the disease has a long incubation period.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the effect of the culling proposals agreed at the Council of Ministers at Luxembourg on 29 and 30 April on the incidence of BSE in Untied Kingdom beef and dairy herds. [28305]

Mrs. Browning: No agreement was reached at the Agriculture Council on 29 and 30 April on culling cattle. The impact of the proposals we put forward cannot be estimated with precision but could in theory reduce the number of cases in 1996 by up to a third and should in practice achieve a reduction of between 15 and 30 per cent.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has carried out into BSE in each of the last 10 years; and how much of this research has been to identify the BSE infective agent. [24420]

Mrs. Browning: Details of BSE research funded by MAFF since 1991–92 will be placed in the Library today. The projects which involve work to identify the BSE infective agent are listed separately.

Research records prior to 1991 are not held on computer; to provide the information for the period requested could only be done at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the number of suspected BSE cases per year since 1988 as a percentage of the national herd in that year. [24240]

Mrs. Browning: The number of suspected BSE cases per year since 1988 as a percentage of the national herd in that year are detailed in the following table:

Year	Percentage
1988	0.066
1989	0.220
1990	0.442
1991	0.770
1992	1.140
1993	1.112
1994	0.751
1995	0.445

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what scientific evidence the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee decided that masseter and temporal muscles in cattle heads over six months of age should be treated as specified bovine offal; and if he will make a statement. [24215]

Mrs. Browning: The Government sought advice from the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee on this point. The committee recommended that the removal of bovine head meat from bovine heads should be prohibited because they were concerned at the possibility of such meat being contaminated with brain material following stunning and pithing, rather than because of concerns about the safety of meat itself.

Animal Slaughter

12. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what support his Department is offering to the abattoir sector; and if he will make a statement. [27469]

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. and learned Friend announced on 16 April a £110 million package of support for the slaughtering sector. Following consultation, we have revised the operation of the stock purchase element of this scheme, in particular to maximise the help it gives to companies involved in the export trade. I am placing details in the Library.

Farm Animal Welfare

13. Ms Corston: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning the welfare of farm animals. [27470]

Mrs. Browning: We continue to receive a high volume of comment on animal welfare issues.

Set-aside

16. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the benefits to wildlife of the set-aside procedure. [27474]

Mr. Baldry: The Ministry is funding an evaluation of set-aside which examines its impact on plants, insects and birds. Research has shown that set-aside land can support significantly more wildlife than nearby cropped fields.

Dairy Imports

20. Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of (a) milk and (b) dairy products in the United Kingdom is imported from other EU nations. [27478]

Mr. Baldry: The figures are as follows:

Imports from EU	Percentage of total UK availability (domestic production plus total imports)
Milk	1
Butter	22
Cheese	33
Skimmed milk powder	11
Full cream powder	8
Condensed milk	6

Dairy Sector

21. Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact of the fall in domestic consumption of beef and the European Union world-wide ban on British beef exports on the United Kingdom dairy farming sector. [27479]

Mr. Baldry: The crisis of confidence in British beef and the EU ban on UK beef exports will have affected the dairy sector in several ways. Continental markets for surplus dairy calves have been lost completely and markets at home for beef calves and store cattle knocked back. As a result of the export ban, and national measures to keep out of the human food chain meat from animals aged more than 30 months, there is no longer any market outlet for dairy cows which have reached the end of their productive lives. Measures which provide alternative outlets for male pure-bred dairy calves and cattle aged over 30 months have announced by my right hon. and learned Friend on the 28 March and 16 April respectively.

Cattle Slaughter (Costs)

23. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the average cost of the slaughter and destruction of a cow. [27481]

Mrs. Browning: Meat and Livestock Commission estimates suggest that the average cost is between £55 and £60 per animal.

Common Fisheries Policy

24. Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of the fishing industry to discuss the common fisheries policy; and if he will make a statement. [27482]

Mr. Baldry: I met representatives of the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations at its annual general meeting on 3 May when we discussed the common fisheries policy and other current issues.

Arable Area Payments

25. Mr. Tipping: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the value of payments made under the arable area payments scheme in 1995. [27483]

Mr. Baldry: Payments under the arable area payments scheme in the United Kingdom in the 1995–96 financial year are estimated to total £1,304.9 million.

Organophosphates

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research (a) he has commissioned and (b) evaluated which has been carried out into the effect of organophosphates upon (i) humans and (ii) animals. [28095]

Mrs. Browning: Between 1991 and 1994 the national poisons unit, London, was funded by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to conduct studies into the effects on human health from acute exposure to organophosphorus sheep dips. Jointly with the Department of Health and the Health and Safety Executive, MAFF has also awarded a contract worth £500,000 to the Institute of Occupational Medicine in Edinburgh to carry out an epidemiological study designed to detect well-defined, predetermined chronic effects in humans of dipping sheep with OP sheep dips. This study is expected to be competed in April 1999.

No current research into the effects of organophosphates on animals is being undertaken by MAFF. Every veterinary medicine must satisfy statutory criteria of safety, quality and efficacy, and responsibility for undertaking or providing information on the necessary research to meet these criteria rests with applicants for marketing authorisations. That research is evaluated as part of the authorisation process. We have, however, agreed two major research projects, worth £1.2 million over three years, on alternatives to organophosphorus sheep dips.

There is also a very large quantity of published scientific literature on organophosphates, including papers on the effects in animals and humans, which is considered by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate as part of the continuing review of the use of OP sheep dips by the Veterinary Products Committee. References to these are widely available from commercial databases.

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many slaughterhouses have closed since 1 January 1993 on the grounds that they did not meet the structural requirements of directive 91/497/EEC. [27863]

Mrs. Browning: No figures are available to show how many slaughterhouses have closed since 1 January 1993 on the ground that they did not meet the structural requirements of directive 91/497/EEC. Slaughterhouses can close for a number of reasons, including commercial pressures arising from the significant overcapacity in the red meat slaughtering industry. In addition, if one operator decides to close, the premises may be taken over by another.

Meat Hygiene Service

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many customers are currently disputing the bills submitted to them by the Meat Hygiene Service; [28335]

(2) how many customers to date have refused to pay some or all bills submitted to them by the Meat Hygiene Service since the inception of the service. [28334]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 7 May 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Meat Hygiene Service to reply.

Letter from Johnston McNeill to Mr. Edward O'Hara, dated 9 May 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) your questions to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food concerning the number of customers currently disputing and refusing to pay the bills submitted to them by the MHS has been passed to me for reply. (28335 + 28334)

124 customers are currently disputing the bills submitted to them by the MHS. 125 customers have refused to pay some or all bills since the launch of the MHS on 1 April 1995.

As you may be aware the majority of these outstanding debts relate to payment strikes by some plants in support of the Woodspring Case, a civil action brought by Woodspring District Council against Bakers of Nailsea to recover unpaid meat inspection charges. The Association of District Councils calculated that by the end of the 1994–95 financial year, local authorities would be owed some £2.5 million in unpaid charges. The High Court found in favour of Woodspring Council in 1994, but the case is under appeal and also being considered by the European Court of Justice. A judgement is expected in the autumn of 1996. However, I would like to stress that the MHS continues to provide a 100% inspection service to all customers regardless of whether there is a dispute over the charge for the services. The MHS also allowed for debt arising from the Woodspring Case in its 1995–96 Business Plan. Costs arising as a result of Specified Bovine Material enforcement action by the MHS are paid for by central Government.

The Agency does operate rigorous debt recovery procedures. Invoices which remain unpaid after 21 days and which are not subject to query are passed to the Legal Department of MAFF who issue a warning "letter" before action. The intention is that a summons will be issued 14 days later unless payment has been received in the meantime.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the annual cost to the United Kingdom of membership of the common agricultural policy. [28403]

Mr. Baldry: Exchequer expenditure on the common agricultural policy reflects payments in the Untied Kingdom and contributions to expenditure in other member states through our net contribution to the EC budget. Our theoretical share of the cost of the CAP budget for 1996 would be around £3.6 billion after the Fontainebleau abatement is taken into account and assuming receipts estimated at £2.8 billion.

In addition the CAP imposes costs on consumers estimated for 1993 at some £3 per week per person. A note setting out the calculations of the costs to UK taxpayers and consumers has been placed in the Library of the House.

Set-aside Scheme

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will state the area of set-aside in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) France in each year since set-aside began; and if he will state the percentage of agricultural land which this represents in each year and the total payment in each country in each year. [28563]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 8 May 1996]: I list the information requested which relates to set-aside under the arable area payments scheme.

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Set-aside area (thousands)
UK	573	662	597
France	1,590	1,934	1,727
Set-aside as a percentage of land on which AAPS claimed
UK	[1]13.7	[1]15.4	[1]14.0
France	[1]12.3	[1]14.6	[1]13.1
Total set-aside payments (mecu)
UK	189	254	233
France	517	792	722

[1]per cent.

Fishing Vessels (Decommissioning)

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provision he has made to decommission fishing vessels in 1996; and if he will make a statement. [29215]

Mr. Baldry: I have laid before the House the fishing vessel decommissioning scheme 1996 which comes into force today. We want decommissioning to provide real long-term benefits to the fishing industry. By reducing pressure on fish stocks, the scheme can help conservation and improve fishing prospects for the future. To this end, we must ensure that expenditure is effective and provides good value for money.

We have determined the criteria to be used in the 1996 decommissioning scheme in the light of comments from the industry on our recent consultation paper and the cumulative value for public money obtained from the schemes so far and changes in the structure fo the fleet. The 1996 scheme will be opened up to more vessels on improved terms which take account of the comments made by the industry itself.

Key changes being made are:

- a reduction to 75 qualifying days fishing in each of the two previous years;
- the removal of the current restriction on licence type;
- the extension of eligibility to the nephrops and distant water segments.
- the possibility of allowing historic decommissioned vessels to remain afloat if donated to a registered museum.

Some £13 million is now available for decommissioning this year and, as in the 1995 scheme, provision is made to cover the possibility of more than one round of decommissioning during the year. Decisions on the amount to be spent and the number of tenders will take account of value for money represented by the bids received.

Other criteria for the 1996 scheme are similar to the 1995 scheme. The deadline for receipt of grant applications is 25 June 1996.

Small Food Businesses

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact of the Government's policies to promote small businesses on United Kingdom farmers and small food businesses. [27464]

Mrs. Browning: The Government are taking a significant number of steps to help small firms—and this includes farming and food businesses—though the Ministry has not made a sectoral study of the impact of this support.

Food Safety

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on Government policy on food safety. [27468]

Mrs. Browning: Our objective is that food sold in the United Kingdom should be safe for consumption. We have systems for identifying food safety risks, taking prompt action and announcing results. They are described in the 1996 departmental report (Cmnd. 3204) which was published recently.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Authority Trading Powers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent guidance he has given to the Audit Commission concerning local authority trading powers. [28467]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. My Department did, however, write to the local authority associations on 7 December 1995 on this issue and the Audit Commission was aware of that correspondence.

Landscape Preservation

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, by English county, the name, location and size in hectares of areas designated by local authorities (a) to protect local landscape character and value, (b) as quasi-green belts or green wedges, (c) to protect historic parkland and gardens and (d) further to protect the open countryside. [28878]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Government do not collect this information centrally. Under section 8C of the Historic Buildings and Monuments Act 1953, as amended by the National Heritage Act 1983, English Heritage compiles a register of parks and gardens of special historic interest in England.

Unitary Authorities (SSAs)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the amount of standard spending assessment per person for (a) North Lincolnshire unitary authority, (b) North East Lincolnshire unitary authority and (c) North Yorkshire unitary authority and Kingston upon Hull unitary authority. [28623]

Sir Paul Beresford: The figures requested are as listed:

	Local Authority	SSA per head £
(a)	North Lincolnshire unitary authority	718
(b)	North East Lincolnshire unitary authority	760
(c)	North Yorkshire county council	595
	Kingston upon Hull unitary authority	814

As a county council, North Yorkshire does not provide as wide a range of services as unitary authorities.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Higher Education (Inquiry)

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will announce the membership of the national committee of inquiry into higher education, and its terms of reference. [29330]

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The national committee of inquiry into higher education faces an important and challenging task. Higher education has a vital role to play in raising the levels of the nation's skills and competitiveness and thus enhancing our capacity to generate wealth and to improve our quality of life. The national committee of inquiry will make recommendations on how the purposes, shape, structure, size and funding of higher education should develop to meet the needs of the United Kingdom over the next 20 years. It will have a significant influence on future generations of students, on the development of universities and colleges, and on the wider economy, society and culture of the country.

My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland and I are therefore grateful to all those who responded to our consultations on the committee's composition and draft terms of reference. In the light of those responses, we are pleased to appoint the following members:

Sir Ron Dearing (Chairman) and Professor John Arbuthnott: Principal and Vice-Chancellor of the University of Strathclyde

Baroness Dean of Thornton le Fylde: (formerly Brenda Dean)

Ms Judith Evans: Director of Corporate Personnel, Sainbury's

Sir Ron Garrick Managing Director and Chief Executive of Weir Group

Sir Geoffrey Holland: Vice-Chancellor of the University of Exeter

Professor Diana Laurillard: Pro Vice-Chancellor (Technology Development) of the Open University

Mrs P. A. Morris: Headteacher, The Blue School, Wells

Sir Ronald Oxburgh: Rector of Imperial College of Science, Technology and Medicine

Dr. David Potter: Chairman of Psion Plc

Sir George Quigley: Chairman of Ulster Bank

Sir William Stubbs: Chief Executive of the Further Education Funding Council and Rector Designate of the London Institute

Sir Richard Sykes: Deputy Chairman and Chief Executive of Glaxo-Wellcome Plc

Professor David Watson: Director of the University of Brighton

Professor Sir David Weatherall: Regius Professor of Medicine at the University of Oxford

Professor Adrian Webb: Vice-Chancellor of the University of Glamorgan

Mr. Simon Wright: Education and Welfare Officer, Students Union, the University of Wales College of Cardiff.

We are grateful to these members for agreeing to serve on this important inquiry.

We are placing a copy of the list of members and the full terms of reference in the Library.

DEFENCE

Gulf War (Chemical Weapons)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent (a) evidence and (b) reports his Department has received concerning the use of (i) chemical and (ii) biological weapons during the Gulf war. [28725]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) on 16 January, Official Report, column 535.

Procurement Collaboration

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's policy concerning (a) European and (b) American procurement collaboration; and if he will make a statement. [28729]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The United Kingdom is committed to pursuing greater collaboration armaments procurement both in Europe and with the United States. We have recognised for many years that co-operation with our allies is a most effective means of achieving value for money; the principal forum for this in Europe is the Western European armaments group. I announced on 13 March, Official Report, columns 648–49, that the UK wishes to join France and Germany in their work on setting up an armaments agency.

Equally, we are keen to promote procurement collaboration with the United States. We wish to maintain the UK's extensive two-way business relationship on defence equipment with the US, which we value for strategic reasons and as the sole source of equipment which it would be uneconomic to develop elsewhere.

Territorial Army

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the manpower strength of the Territorial Army at 1 April 1990; and what will be its estimated strength at 1 April 1999. [28727]

Mr. Soames: The manpower strength of the Territorial Army on 1 April 1990 was 74,440. On 14 July 1994 it was announced that the Territorial Army was to be restructured to an establishment of 59,000 by 1 April 1997. Present planning maintains the establishment of the Territorial Army at 59,000 in 1999 and it is hoped that the recruiting and retention initiatives will maintain the TA at this level.

Defence Statistics

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date he will publish the 1996 UK defence statistics. [28726]

Mr. Arbuthnot: On 18 July 1996.

Army Regiments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Army regiments there were at 1 April 1990; and what is the current number. [28728]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is given in the table:

Number of major army units at 1 April 1990 and 1 April 1996[1]

Corps	1 April 1990	1 April 1996
Royal Armoured Corps	[2]19	[2 3]11
Royal Artillery	[2]22	10
Royal Engineers	[4]13	[2]16
Infantry	[5]55	[5]41
Special Air Service	1	1
Army Air Corps	[6]4	[6]5
Royal Corps of Signals	[2]15	[2]12
Total	128	96

[1] The table covers Regular Army units of battalion size or equivalent in the major combat arms.
[2] Includes one training regiment.
[3] Excludes the Household Cavalry mounted regiment.
[4] Includes the Queen's Gurkha Engineers.
[5] Includes Gurkha battalions.
[6] Includes one Territorial Army squadron.

TRANSPORT

Railtrack (Safety of Structures)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the cost to Railtrack of complying with its safety standards for structures. [28555]

Mr. Watts: I have made no such estimate.

Railtrack has a key role in managing safety on the rail network in its capacity as infrastructure controller and through its compliance with and operation of the railway group standards code, as required by its network licence, in an efficient manner. Railtrack's asset maintenance plan for track and route structures forecasts the expenditure required over the 10-year period from 1 April 1994 for sustaining the operational capability of these assets in accordance with Railtrack's operational policies and standards, including safety standards, and to comply with its statutory obligations.

Marine Accidents Investigation Branch

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what regulations existed before 1994 concerning the requirement of the MAIB to consult individuals or organisations that were subject to potential criticism in MAIB reports. [28861]

Mr. Norris: Prior to 1994, section 9(4) of the Merchant Shipping (Accident Investigation) Regulations 1989 met this requirement.

Oil Spillage (Sea Empress Incident)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information has been requested by the Environment Agency from his Department about the Sea Empress oil spillage; when that information was requested; and if he will place a copy of his Department's reply in the Library. [28860]

Mr. Norris: There have been close contacts between the Environment Agency and my Department on a range of matters associated with the Sea Empress oil spillage.

It is not usual practice to place copies of correspondence between the Environment Agency and my Department in the Library.

Concessionary Travel

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to amend the London Regional Transport Act 1984 and the Transport Act 1985 to include men aged 60 years or over as a further eligible class of person for transport concessions as a result of the Atkins v. Wrekin district council and Department of Transport case considered by the European Court. [28986]

Mr. Norris: The European Court of Justice has not yet given its judgment in the Atkins case. When it does, we shall consider any implications for the current legislation.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Pre-School Voucher Scheme

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what qualifications will be demanded of those responsible for organising the provision of pre-school provision under the proposed voucher scheme. [28731]

Mr. Ancram: The consultation document "Pre School Education: The Voucher Scheme in Northern Ireland" describes the qualifications which the Government propose to require in respect of staff employed by providers under the scheme. These are:

Grant-aided nursery schools/classes: teachers(s) with qualified teacher status and qualified nursery assistant(s).

Reception classes in primary schools: qualified teachers and a classroom assistant.

All other settings: at least half of the staff must hold a relevant qualification in day-care or education.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provision he has made for increased capital expenditure for the education and library boards to respond to his voucher scheme for pre-school children. [28733]

Mr. Ancram: No additional capital resources will be made available under the pre-school voucher scheme itself but education and library boards will be able to apply for assistance to meet the capital costs of additional nursery provision from the special support programme for peace and reconciliation. It will in the first instance be a matter for them to determine their own capital priorities in response to the scheme.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provisions exist to cancel the contract to be issued to a pre-school voucher company without cost to public funds; and if he will make a statement. [28735]

Mr. Ancram: No contract has yet been drawn up between the Department of Education Northern Ireland and any company in respect of the pre-school voucher scheme.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if providers of pre-five activity under the proposed voucher scheme will be required to meet current standards required in terms of staff qualifications and health and safety standards in nursery education; and if he will list all differences in requirements. [28730]

Mr. Ancram: Providers of pre-school education will be required to meet different requirements in respect of qualifications, depending on the type of provision which they make. The different requirements proposed are set out in the consultative document which I have recently issued on the pre-school voucher scheme. All providers will be subject to the requirements of the Health and Safety at Work (NI) Order 1978.

Nursery Education

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the differences in requirements for accommodation for nursery education (a) conforming to Department of Education standards, and (b) proposed in draft regulations and guidance on family support, child minding and day care as required in the Children (Northern Ireland) Order 1995. [28732]

Mr. Ancram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current average cost in Northern Ireland of providing a full-time nursery education place. [28734]

Mr. Ancram: Information in the exact form requested is not readily available because it is difficult to identify separately the costs associated with nursery classes in primary schools. However, the average recurrent cost of a full-time nursery place in a nursery school based on Education and library boards' planned expenditure for 1996–97 is £2,130.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Motability

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of whether the financial reserves of Motability Finance Ltd. are being fully used to the benefit of its customers. [27716]

Mr. Burt: Financial reserves are maintained by Motability Finance Ltd. as a normal business measure to safeguard the operation of the Motability schemes.

Child Support

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will include costs of family travel in remote rural areas as essential living costs to be assessed by the Child Support Agency. [28104]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: A broad-bush allowance for high travel-to-work costs is already included in the child support formula and the departures scheme, which is currently being piloted with a view to its introduction later this year, will provide the flexibility for this to be varied where it does not fully meet individual circumstances. The new scheme will also take account of high travel costs for absent parents, necessary to enable them to maintain contact with their children.

The child support maintenance requirement is intended to cover the basic day-to-day needs of the children for whom an assessment is due. This is based on income support levels which apply nationally and it would not be appropriate to vary the amounts involved.

Family Credit

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list, by region, for 1995–96 (a) the total amount paid out in family credit, (b) the number of family credit recipients, (c) the average number of child dependants of each recipient and (d) the average weekly amount paid out to each recipient. [28223]

Mr. Roger Evans: The available information is set out in the table.

	Total amount of family credit paid 1995–96 £ million	Number of recipients	Average number of children	Average weekly family credit £
Northern
Eastern	313	114,000	2.0	52.40
Midlands	308	115,000	2.1	51.05
London North	199	76,000	2.1	50.10
London South	171	66,000	2.1	49.53

North Western	276	100,000	2.0	52.54
Scotland	182	70,000	1.9	49.52
Total for Great Britain	1,682	627,000	2.0	51.06

Notes:
1. The expenditure figures have been derived by apportioning the estimate of total family credit expenditure published in the 1995–96 departmental report, and must therefore be treated with caution.
2. Numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand.
3. Regions used are Department of Social Security administrative regions.
4. The number of recipients are for families in receipt of family credit at July 1995, this being the most recent information currently available.

Suspension of Benefits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what statutory powers he has under social security regulations to suspend or amend the payments of benefits awarded to claimants. [28629]

Mr. Roger Evans: Payment of an award of benefit made by the independent adjudicating authorities may be suspended or withheld, in whole or in part, by the Secretary of State for Social Security under the provisions of regulations 37, 37A or 37AA of the Social Security (Claims and Payments) Regulations 1987. The Secretary of State has no other powers which enable him to amend an award of benefit, however independent adjudication officers do have a power to review an award.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on how many occasions he has used powers to suspend or amend payments of benefits to claimants already in receipt of them; how many applicants were affected by these changes; and what was the total amount that these actions saved his Department in the payment of benefits in each of the last three years. [28631]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many official complaints have been received by the Child Support Agency in each month since the agency started to operate. [28056]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 9 May 1996.

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security as to the number of official complaints received by the Child Support Agency.

We have not separately identified 'official' complaints to the Agency, but have taken the broadest view as to what constitutes a complaint whether it be against the policy, the administration or some other aspect of Child Support legislation.'

So what we record as complaints will cover things like policy issues; concerns about the imposition of deduction from earnings orders; the level of assessed maintenance; requests for assessments to be rechecked; the time taken to process a case; general administrative concerns and suggestions that the other client's affairs have not been properly taken into account. We also include complaints and queries from people who are not clients of the Agency.

The table attached shows a monthly breakdown of all such complaints received in 1994/95 and 1995/96; we did not keep monthly totals in 1993/94.

I hope this is helpful.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Competitiveness

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the competitiveness of the United Kingdom economy relative to (a) other EU states and (b) the rest of the world. [28342]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The Government's plans for improving the competitiveness of the United Kingdom were set out in the 1994 and 1995 White Papers on competitiveness. Progress on those plans will be reported in a third Competitiveness White Paper in the summer.

The UK has had the strongest recovery since 1992 of any major EU country. Over the last international cycle, 1982 to 1993, Japan was the only G7 country to outpace the UK in terms of gross domestic product per capita growth. The UK significantly outpaced France, Italy, Canada and the European average.

HEALTH

Midwives

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to hold an inquiry into the reasons for the acute shortage of midwives in the South Thames area; and if he will make a statement. [28262]

Mr. Malone: None. This is a matter for local employers who since 1992 have been responsible for planning and training the number of midwives they need. The Inner London Education Consortium has increased the number of commissions for registered midwifery training by 35 per cent.

Mental Health (Prescription Charges)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to extend the list of eligible people with mental illnesses exempt from paying for prescribed treatment; and if he will make a statement; [28200]

(2) what representations he has received from (a) organisations and (b) individuals about the extra financial costs imposed by prescription charges on people suffering from mental illnesses; [28202]

(3) what plans he has to introduce free medication for people with mental illnesses who are treated in the community; and if he will make a statement. [28201]

Mr. Malone: None. Many people who are mentally ill benefit from our extensive exemption arrangements, which are among the most generous in Europe. In 1996–97 we expect 85 per cent. of prescriptions to be dispensed free.

We receive approximately two letters per month on this subject, mainly from individuals.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much cash has been spent on Alzheimer's disease research by his Department in each year since 1989; and if he will make a statement. [28212]

Mr. Bowis: The main agency through which the Government support bio-medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council which receives its grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. My Department's policy research programme is contributing £750,000 to the MRC cognitive and ageing study between October 1990 and June 1996. Another study, "Husbands and wives who care for elderly people with dementia and functional psychiatric disorder", was undertaken at the Institute of Psychiatry and ended in December 1995; the total cost was £134,331.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the pay-back period under the proposed PFI contracts for new hospitals at (a) Norwich, (b) Swindon and (c) Royal London. [28348]

Mr. Horam: The national health service trusts are currently negotiating their private finance initiative contracts with private sector partners or potential private sector partners. The dates of the payments under the contracts are part of these negotiations.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations the Medicines Commission has received relating to oral contraceptives containing desogestrel and gestodene; and what response the commission has made to those representations. [28136]

Mr. Malone: The chairman of the Medicines Commission has received requests from one individual for the commission to examine issues relating to these oral contraceptives. The chairman responded that it was not appropriate at this time for the commission to consider the matter.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) of 2 April, Official Report, column 186, what steps the Medicines Control Agency and the Committee on Safety of Medicines took to exclude a false low estimate of the risk of venous thromboembolism with oral contraceptives containing levonorgestrel. [28289]

Mr. Malone: Recent studies have indicated that oral contraceptives containing desogestrel or gestodene are associated with greater risk of venous thromboembolism than oral contraceptives containing levonorgestrel. A number of factors, including various forms of bias, confounding and chance can potentially influence the findings of such studies, leading to estimates of risk being falsely high or low. The Medicines Control Agency and Committee on Safety of Medicines carefully considered detailed analyses examining the possible effects of these factors and concluded that the observed differences in risk could not be fully explained by them.

Medicines (Safety)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the occasions during 1994 on which (a) the Licensing Authority, (b) the Medicine Control Agency and (c) the Committee on Safety of Medicines have taken legal action with respect to matters relating to the Medicines Act 1968; and how many injunctions have been sought during that period relating to material relating to the efficacy or safety of medicines. [28137]

Mr. Malone: A list of those occasions will be placed in the Library.

One injunction was sought with the consent of the Attorney-General and granted in 1994: to stop the illegal promotion and sale of gamma hydroxybutyrate, an unlicensed medical product known to be used as a drug of abuse.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each occasion that the chairman of the Committee on Safety of Medicines has sent "Dear Doctor" letters to United Kingdom doctors, what regulatory action accompanied the letter, the date of the letter and the date of the licensing action. [28139]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 9 May. The "Dear doctor" letters sent out by the chairman of the Committee on Safety of Medicines prior to 1980 are shown in the table.

Subject	Date of letter	Products containing the following drug substance(s)
Establishment of the Committee on Dental and Surgical Materials—advice on reporting of adverse reactions	23 January 1979	No safety issue
Mortality among women using oral contraceptives	6 October 1977	Combined oral contraceptives
Phenformin and lactic acidosis	7 September 1977	Phenformin
Sub-acute myelo-optic neuropathy with clioquinol;	May 1973	Clioquinol
Vaginal adenocarcinoma with stilboestrol;	May 1973	Stilboestrol
Safety of local anaesthetics containing noradrenaline, use in patients on antidepressants;	May 1973	Local anaesthetics (preparations containing 1:25,000 noradrenaline), Tricyclic antidepressants
Anticonvulsants and congenital abnormalities	May 1973	Anticonvulsants including primidone, phenobarbitone and phenytoin
Combined oral contraceptives and pulmonary embolism	May 1973	Oral contraceptives (>50 micrograms oestrogen)

Medicines Act 1968

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 186, if he will list for each of the 35 occasions in 1995 when the Licensing Authority instigated legal action, whom the legal action was taken against, what was the relevant statutory provision, what the outcome of the action was and what costs were incurred by the Licensing Authority. [28138]

Mr. Malone: A list of those occasions will be placed in the Library.

The relevant statutory provisions were sections 108(1), 67 and 45 of the Medicines Act 1968. It was not the practice in 1995 to apportion costs of enforcement action to each individual defendant.

Medicines Commission

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who employs the legal advisers of the Medicines Commission; and what is their relationship with (i) the Licensing Authority, (ii) the Department of Health and (iii) the Medicines Control Agency. [28140]

Mr. Malone: The Medicines Commission has access, on request, to legal advice from the office of the solicitor to the Department of Social Security in respect of medicines for human use and to the office of the legal adviser and solicitor to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in respect of veterinary products. The Department of Health and the Medicines Control Agency, who act on the Licensing Authority's behalf, receive legal advice from the office of the solicitor to the Department of Social Security.

Sheffield Centre for Health and Related Research

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to his answer of 26 April, Official Report, column 293, if he will list the staff employed by the Sheffield centre for health and related research who are former employees of the Trent regional health authority; and if he will make a statement on the academic research experience of the staff, their salary levels and which bodies are responsible for paying these salaries; [28343]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 26 April, Official Report, column 293, what was the position of the three staff formerly employed at Trent regional health authority who took up posts at the Sheffield centre for health and related research held at the regional health authority; and what severance terms were agreed by the regional health authority. [28420]

Mr. Malone: These are matters for the University of Sheffield. The three staff resigned from the Trent regional health authority and no severance terms were agreed. As to their positions, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 26 April at column 293.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding was provided by the former Yorkshire regional health authority to the Sheffield centre for health and related research. [28353]

Mr. Malone: None.

Redundancies

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 16 April, Official Report, column 477, what exceptions were made in providing redundancy terms more favourable than those listed in section 45 of the general Whitley council handbook or circular HSG (94) 18, following the dissolution of the former Yorkshire regional health authority; if he will indicate in each case the circumstances in which this was done; and by how much the terms agreed exceeded those set out in the guidance. [28352]

Mr. Malone: No exceptions were made.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total sum currently being made available (a) through the national health service executive and (b) direct from the Department of Health to the Sheffield centre for Health and related research in 1996–97. [28354]

Mr. Malone: The total value in 1996–97 of contracts awarded to the Sheffield centre for health and related research is £965,660 by the national health service executive and £555,390 by the Department of Health.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the staff employed by the Sheffield centre for health and related research who are former employees of the Yorkshire regional health authority; and if he will make a statement on the academic research experience of the staff indicating their salary levels and the bodies responsible for their pay; [28419]

(2) which staff from the former Yorkshire regional health authority (i) transferred to take up posts at the Sheffield centre for health and related research and (ii) took up posts at that centre following the dissolution of the regional health authority; what was their former position at the regional health authority; and what were the severance terms agreed by the regional health authority. [28421]

Mr. Malone: These are matters for the University of Sheffield.

Psychiatrists

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the current numbers of consultant psychiatrist posts in England and Wales by local health authority area. [28875]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the table.

Read Codes System

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 608, what estimate he has made of the number of (a) hospitals and (b) general practice doctors who have participated in the development of the Read codes system; what financial value he has placed on their time in evaluating the costs and benefits of continuing public investment in the Read codes system; and if he will make a statement. [28934]

Mr. Horam: The clinical terms projects involved approximately 2,000 clinicians including 72 general practitioners. Individual hospitals were not represented.

The clinicians were associated with 55 working groups. The chairman of each group received a small honorarium and members were re-imbursed travel expenses for attendance at meetings.

No estimate was made of the financial value of the time that each clinician spent on the project.

With regard to an evaluation of the Read codes I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 2 May at column 608.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 608, what was the total licence income accruing for all NHS sources to Computer Aided Medicine Systems Ltd. in each financial year since 1991–92; and on what occasion the appropriate risk-rewards ratio pertaining to this licence income was last independently evaluated. [28938]

Mr. Horam: The following are the revenues for national health service licences paid to Computer Aided Medical Systems Ltd. in each financial year since 1991:

April 1991 to 30 September 1992 (18 months)	1,530,900
1 October 1992 to 30 September 1993	1,286,912
1 October 1993 to 30 September 1994	1,572,877
1 October 1994 to 30 September 1995	1,684,016

All the company's accounts and business practices have been audited and accepted for each year up to 30 September 1994.

The annual audit for 1994–95 accounts began on 20 April 1996, and the report is awaited from the auditors with completion scheduled for the end of May 1996.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 607, if he will list those elements of the Read codes 3 system which will reach service strength in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999 and (e) 2000. [28937]

Mr. Horam: The time scale for key elements of Read codes version 3 to reach service level strength is as follows:

A product to support the business requirements of hospitals including disorders, procedures, signs and symptoms which describes the work of hospital doctors and is to be used by doctors and coders within hospitals to enable the production of discharge summaries, statutory data sets and reports.

1997

A product including additional terms and qualifiers to support the needs of general practioners and doctors in acute trusts for more detailed electronic clinical records.

Work will take place in 1997 to pilot exchange of clinical messages between and within the various healthcare sectors.

1998 onwards

The nature of the further refinement and development of version 3 will depend on the feedback from users.

Health Services

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will issue guidelines to helath authorities and health trusts requiring them to involve local health professionals in the planning of health services in their areas; [28874]

(2) if he will issue guidelines to health authorities and trusts requiring them to obtain the advice of (a) psychiatrists and (b) other health professionals practising locally in the NHS when developing strategic plans for mental health. [28873]

Mr. Malone: Health authorities are responsible for developing local health service strategies in partnership with primary care, local trusts and other agencies and are legally required to take appropriate professional advice in carrying out their functions. This is set out in EL(94)79 and HSG(95)11, copies of which are available in the Library.

Cancelled Operations

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 7 March, Official Report, column 324, if he will now provide comparable information on cancelled operations during the fourth quarter of 1995–96. [28939]

Mr. Horam: The information will be placed in the Library.

The national health service carries out some 5.5 million operations annually. Less than 1 per cent. are cancelled on the day the patient is due to arrive, or after arrival, in hospital, and 89 per cent. of patients whose operations are cancelled are readmitted within one month.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department collates on trusts which have established limited companies. [28723]

Mr. Horam: None.

Mental Handicap Hospitals

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mental handicap hospitals there were in each district health authority for each year since 1979; and how many have gained trust status. [28724]

Mr. Bowis: Information is not available centrally in the form requested. The number of trusts and directly managed units with learning disability beds, by region, in 1994–95 is shown in the table.

	Number of trusts	Number of DMUs
Northern and Yorkshire	19	0
Trent	11	1
Anglia and Oxford	13	0
North Thames	11	2
South Thames	18	3
South West	15	0
West Midlands	12	1
North West	15	0

Further detail on the number of beds is available in "Bed Availability for England", copies of which are available in the Library.

TREASURY

Office Space

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the square footage and cost of office space rented by his Department and its agencies and the number of his Department or agencies' buildings partly or fully unoccupied, together with the square footage of that unoccupied office space and its estimated rental value where available in each of the past five financial years. [27735]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The properties occupied by the Inland Revenue, HM Customs and Excise and the Office for National Statistics—formerly central statistical office-Paymaster, Valuation Office and the Royal Mint formed part of the Government common user office estate which, prior to 1 April 1996, was managed by Property Holdings. From that date Departments took over responsibility from Property Holdings when they became fully accountable for their own accommodation. Information relating to vacant CUE space for the years in question was given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Environment on 30 January, Official Report, columns 648–49.

Not all the information requested on occupation and cost of office space is available. However, for those Departments and agencies in respect of which information is held, the total square footage and cost of office space rented for the five years in question were:

Year	Square feet	Cost £
1991–92[1]	41,368	557,296
1992–93	2,678,800	28,365,826
1993–94	2,602,795	29,394,490
1994–95	2,577,414	27,940,773
1995–96	2,520,690	27,497,485

[1] Excluding Customs and Excise.

European Union

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate of the number of jobs lost to the United Kingdom economy as a direct result of the annual net contributions to the European Union made since 1973. [27940]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The direct employment effects of the United Kingdom's net contributions to the European Union could not be calculated without making assumptions about how the money might otherwise have been spent or used to reduce taxes.

Pre-tax Incomes

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update the answer to the hon. Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) of 20 December 1994, Official Report, column 1080, for 1993–94, 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97, giving his answer at 1996–97 prices. [28583]

Mr. Jack: The table provides estimates based on the survey of personal incomes of numbers of individuals for 1993–94, the latest year for which information is available at such high levels of income, 1983–84 and 1973–74.

Pre-tax income range (adjusted for changes in average male earnings)

Thousands

	£200,000–£400,000	£400,000+
1993–94	18	7
1983–84	7	1
1973–74	12	3

The income ranges used for 1983–84 and 1973–74 have been adjusted to take account of changes in average adult male earnings up to 1993–94.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to public finance from the BSE situation of (a) compensation to farmers, abattoirs and meat processing companies and (b) indirect losses from reduced tax revenue and employment in ancillary industries. [28520]

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend, the Member for Northampton, North (Mr. Marlow) on 26 April, Official Report, columns 321–22.

The indirect effects on Government tax revenues will depend upon both the length of time that output in ancillary industries is reduced, and the extent to which lower output and employment in the ancillary industries is offset by higher output and employment elsewhere in the economy. It is impossible to estimate these effects with any precision.

Bristol and West Building Society

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received concerning the proposed takeover of the Bristol and West building society. [28464]

Mrs. Angela Knight: None.

Government Deficit

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the general Government financial deficit in 1996–97; and what was the outturn in 1995–96. [28890]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Budget forecast of the general Government financial deficit in 1996–97 was £26 billion, equivalent to 3½ per cent. of gross domestic product. An updated forecast will be published in the summer economic forecast on 9 July.

An outturn estimate of the GGFD in 1995–96 is not yet available.

EU Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the directives which have affected his Department in each of the past three years and (a) the United Kingdom legislation introduced as a result of the directives, (b) the United Kingdom legislation which goes beyond the minimum standards set out in the directives and (c) the clauses within each piece of United Kingdom legislation which amplify the minimum standards set out in the directives. [27086]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 29 April 1996]: This information is not currently available, and could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost.

EU Budget Fraud

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what treaty changes the Government are proposing to the current intergovernmental conference to combat fraud and financial mismanagement of EU funds. [27191]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 8 May 1996]: As stated in "A partnership of Nations", the Government made significant progress at Maastricht in obtaining treaty changes to combat fraud and improving financial management. The Government believe that the Community should make better use of the existing provisions, but would naturally support any effective proposals to strengthen these.

Employees' Rights

Ms Jowell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what provision is available to employees of his Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) child care allowances, (n) carers' leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [27594]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 7 May 1996]: The information requested is as follows for the Treasury, Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise.

HM TREASURY

(a) Maternity leave

(b) Maternity pay

The Treasury gives three months and one week's paid maternity leave to a pregnant member of staff for the period of continuous absence before and after confinement provided that she (i) states that she intends to return to work in the Treasury after her confinement, and that she agrees to repay any payment made during that period if she fails to return—such repayment will exclude any statutory maternity pay to which there is entitled—(ii) is in paid service with the Treasury at the time her maternity leave begins and has rendered at least one year's such service, (iii) is not employed on a casual appointment, and (iv) is not employed on a fixed term appointment of less than two years.

Women who have not completed one year's service or who are employed for a period of less than two years are not entitled to contractual maternity pay, but may be able to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance.

A woman who qualifies for paid maternity leave will also qualify for a period of unpaid maternity leave. The total period of paid and unpaid maternity leave may not exceed 52 weeks.

(c) Paternity leave

Fathers are entitled to take two days paid paternity leave.

(d) Parental leave

Staff entering into adoption procedures may be granted up to 20 working days paid special leave.

(e) Flexible working hours

Flexible working hours are widely available in the Treasury to staff in pay range E and below. Participation is dependent on agreement between staff and managers in individual teams.

(f) Part-time working

(g) Job Sharing

(i) Home working

(j) Term-time contracts

Treasury staff can adopt alternative working patterns such as part-time working, job sharing, home-working and term-time working. Due to the nature of Treasury business, not all posts can be adapted to every alternative working pattern. Where adaptation is possible line managers are encouraged to make alternative working patterns available.

(h) Leave to care for sick children

Up to 10 days in any one leave year paid special leave may be granted for reasons of grave concern to the member of staff which can be dealt with only by him or her in person, for example, acute domestic difficulties such as care of a sick close relative or child.

(k) Annual hours contracts

The Treasury does not offer annual hours contracts.

(l) Workplace nurseries

The Treasury does not offer a workplace nursery, but does offer subsidised places in the Westminster holiday play scheme.

(m) Childcare allowances

Staff who are required to work extra hours or work outside their normal working pattern are entitled to claim reimbursement for additional child care costs.

(n) Carers' leave

This is covered by (h).

(o) Career break schemes

A career break of up to five years unpaid special leave may be allowed to staff with unavoidable domestic commitments or other exceptional circumstances. The scheme is open to all staff with a satisfactory attendance, performance and conduct record.

INLAND REVENUE

(a) Maternity Leave

(b) Maternity pay

The Inland Revenue gives three months and one week's paid maternity leave to a pregnant member of staff for the period of continuous absence before and after confinement provided that she (i) states that she intends to return to work in the Inland Revenue after her confinement, and that she agrees to repay any payment made during that period if she fails to return (such repayment will exclude any statutory maternity pay to which there is entitlement), (ii) is in paid service with the Inland Revenue at the time her maternity leave begins and has rendered at least one year's such service, (iii) is not employed on a casual appointment, and (iv) is not employed on a fixed term appointment of less than two years.

Women who have not completed one year's service or who are employed for a period of less than two years are not entitled to contractual maternity pay, but may be able to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance.

A woman who qualifies for paid maternity leave will also qualify for a period of unpaid maternity leave. The total period of paid and unpaid maternity leave may not exceed 52 weeks.

(c) Paternity leave

Men are entitled to two days paid paternity leave.

(d) Parental leave

The Revenue has no special arrangements for parental leave. But it recognises that people have family responsibilities, and allows paid time off for short-term emergencies or, for long-term needs, time off without pay and full employment rights on return to work.

(e) Flexible working hours

Flexible working hours are offered wherever possible and are worked in most Revenue offices, but availability is always subject to the needs of the job, and people can always choose to revert to a standard day if they wish. Each office adapts a centrally agreed scheme to its needs in consultation with its staff.

(f) Part-time working

Inland Revenue employees have been able to work part-time since 1985. The Revenue tries to meet individual needs but requests are considered in the light of the work of the office, service to taxpayers and the effect on other staff. On average, 15 per cent. of Revenue employees work part time at any one time.

(g) Job sharing

Staff can work part time on a job-sharing basis. As with part-time working, the aim is for flexibility to provide benefits for individuals and the department; jobs can be shared by two or more people sharing one or more full-time jobs.

(h) Care for sick children

If someone needs to care for their children or spouse or partner's children when alternative arrangements have fallen through or could not be made at short notice, the Inland Revenue will give up to five days special leave with pay to cover the emergency.

(i) Home working

There is currently no general provision for home working in the Inland Revenue but pilot experiments are under way to establish whether working at or from home on a voluntary basis will provide benefits for the department and individual employees, taking account in particular of the wider implications, such as security.

(j) Term-time contracts

There is a provision for Inland Revenue employees to work full or part-time hours during school terms but be absent during all or some of the school holidays. Arrangements for each year are agreed in advance and, if they choose, employees can plan to use some of their annual leave allowance to reduce the loss in pay.

(k) Annual hours contracts

The Inland Revenue does not offer annual hours contracts.

(l) Workplace nurseries

Inland Revenue employees have access to 15 nurseries through the workplace.

(m) Child care allowances

If a parent has to attend a training course which affects their normal working hours, the Revenue meets the cost of any additional child care expenses.

(n) Carers' leave

This is covered by career breaks.

(o) Career breaks

Career breaks are open to men and women in order to look after someone close to them such as children or elderly relatives. An employee would be eligible if they had completed probation and established a good record for health, attendance and performance. At the end of the career break the person concerned resumes the same employment rights as other employees.

The maximum absence is five years. If the initial arrangement was for less, an extension up to the maximum may be allowed, or a person may opt to come back sooner.

CUSTOMS AND EXCISE

(a) Maternity leave

(b) Maternity pay

Customs and Excise gives three months and one week's paid maternity leave to a pregnant member of staff for the period of continuous absence before and after confinement provided that she (i) states that she intends to return to work in Customs and Excise after her confinement, and that she agrees to repay any payment made during that period if she fails to return (such repayment will exclude any statutory maternity pay to which there is entitlement), (ii) is in paid service with Customs and Excise at the time her maternity leave begins and has rendered at least one year's such service, (iii) is not employed on a casual appointment, and (iv) is not employed on a casual appointment, and (iv) is not employed on a fixed term appointment of less than two years.

Women who have not completed one year's service or who are employed for a period of less than two years are not entitled to contractual maternity pay, but may be able to receive statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance.

A woman who qualifies for paid maternity leave will also qualify for a period of unpaid maternity leave. The total period of paid and unpaid maternity leave may not exceed 52 weeks.

Paternity leave

Fathers are entitled to two days paid paternity leave per confinement. Staff who are temporarily appointed for a period of less than two years are excluded from this arrangement.

(d) Parental leave

Line managers are encouraged to grant staff special leave without pay to either parent to help them to care for their children whilst enabling them to pursue their careers.

(e) Flexible working hours

(f) Part-time working

(g) Job sharing

(j) Term-time contracts

Customs and Excise uses flexible working hours, part-time work, job sharing and term-time contracts. Applications are considered on their merits by local management, taking into account all individual circumstances and the business needs of the department.

(h) Leave to care for sick children

Parents of children who are ill can apply to their line manager for special leave. Alternatively parents can take annual leave, flexi-leave etc. Managers are encouraged to treat these applications sympathetically as they are applications for parental leave under (d) above.

(i) Home-working

At present the department acknowledges a difference between staff who work from home and those who are home workers. Working from home is an informal arrangement, typically for staff who are VAT visiting officers.

A small number of staff are officially designated as home-workers with the department providing telephones, fax machines etc., based in the officers' homes and paying a portion of their utility bills etc. The department will, this financial year, be undertaking a review of the arrangements for officers who use their homes as a base for their work.

(k) Annual hours contracts

Managers in certain operational areas of the Department have discretion to introduce an annual hours working scheme where there is a need for additional hours, weekend or shift working. The scheme is a management tool however rather than a voluntary arrangement for which individuals can state a preference.

(l) Workplace nurseries

Customs and Excise has five workplace nurseries accommodating 155 children. The department also buys places in 20 other Crown and privately owned nurseries nationwide accommodating a further 120 children. Nursery places are available subject to a satisfactory staff needs analysis and value for money business case. All members of staff are eligible to use the nurseries.

(m) Child care allowances

If the normal working pattern is temporarily disrupted, and additional child care costs are incurred, staff can claim help with those expenses. From 1 April 1996, this concession was extended to cover additional adult care costs for dependent relatives, in exceptional circumstances, and where the officer is the primary carer. The purpose of the concession is to help staff with short-term additional costs when the normal working pattern is temporarily disrupted.

Claims are limited to no more than three weeks on a continuous basis or a total of no more than five weeks per year.

(n) Carers' leave

Line managers can agree to special leave with or without pay for a variety of reasons including in order to care for sick relatives. Special leave is discretionary, but managers are encouraged to treat applications sympathetically. Staff who may have long-term caring responsibilities can apply for a career break.

(o) Career break schemes

The career break scheme is a form of special leave without pay aimed at staff who want a long break from work—up to five years, or longer if necessary—yet be able to return to their career again. It can be granted for a variety of reasons such as child care, full-time study or caring for sick relatives etc. The scheme is open to all staff who have completed their probation and who have a satisfactory performance and conduct record.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

British Academy of Sport

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many of the responses which the Sports Council received in his consultation process on the British academy of sport supported (1) core funding of the academy by commercial interests; and how many did not; [27260]

(2) the idea that the academy should have a role in setting and assuring standards for facilities that are currently available; and how many did not; [27256]

(3) a selection of sports it chooses to help; [27252]

(4) its location at a greenfield site; how many supported a brownfield site; and how many favoured a combination of the two; [27254]

(5) the location of national training facilities for their specific sport at the headquarters site; and how many did not; [27250]

(6) a management team involving commercial interests to run the academy; and how many did not; [27253]

(7) the provision of generic sports services at the headquarters site; and how many did not; [27251]

(8) when the Government will publish their proposals on the planned British academy of sport; [27259]

(9) how many responses the Sports Council received in its consultation process on the British academy of sport; how many of these supported its location at a single large site; how many supported an enhanced network of services throughout the United Kingdom; and how many supported a combination of the two. [27255]

Mr. Sproat: Following the publication last July of the sports policy document, "Raising the Game", which first put forward proposals for the British academy of sport and an associated network of local sports institutions, the Sports Council consulted widely on how best to carry forward the proposals. The consultations have now been completed. The Government's proposals for a British academy of sport as the pinnacle of a network of regional centres of sporting excellence and sports-specific academies, was widely welcomed in the consultation. Details of the proposals will be set out in the bid prospectus, which is now being prepared with the Sports Council. The prospectus will be published shortly.

The findings of the consultation form an important part of the development of the policy and the preparation of the bid prospectus. A summary of the main conclusions will be published with the bid prospectus.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Power

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the financial position of British Energy, and on the financial and commercial position of Magnox Electric, following the restructuring of Nuclear Electric on 31 March. [29058]

Mr. Eggar: On 31 March 1996, Nuclear Electric plc and Scottish Nuclear Ltd. were restructured to form one group of companies which owns the advanced gas-cooled reactor/pressurised water reactor stations and their associated assets and liabilities—British Energy plc and its subsidiaries Nuclear Electric Ltd. and Scottish Nuclear Ltd. (British Energy)—and one company which owns the magnox stations and their associated assets and liabilities, Nuclear Electric plc, which was renamed Magnox Electric plc on 1 April 1996.

In due course, British Energy and Magnox will be publishing their financial statements for the period ended 31 March 1996. These will give details of the companies' financial results for the period and their financial positions at that date. In addition, the prospectus for the sale of British Energy will give further information on its activities.

The companies intend to use a 3 per cent. real discount rate when calculating their nuclear liabilities for inclusion in their financial statements. A rate of 2 per cent. real was used in previous years. The change is consistent with recent United Kingdom accounting proposals and has been approved by the auditors of both companies. British Energy will be taking into the private sector the liabilities associated with its assets, including—using a 3 per cent. real discount rate—nuclear liabilities of approximately £3.7 billion for past use of fuel and for decommissioning. In addition, British Energy will owe debt and has inherited a debt due from Scottish Nuclear Ltd. to the Government which will be repaid before privatisation.

Whenever financial statements are produced the directors must consider the carrying value of the company's fixed assets as recorded in the accounting records. The Companies Act 1985 requires fixed assets as recorded int he accounting records. The Companies Act 1985 requires fixed assets to be written down if there has been a permanent diminution in value. This is a technical accounting matter and is purely an entry in the books of account. No cash changes hands as a result of such a write-down. It will have no effect on the cash generated by the stations, nor will it reduce the proceeds of sale—the company is expected to be valued by investors on the basis of its dividends and cash flow.

Asset write-downs by British Energy are a matter for the board of directors and the company's auditors. The board has informed me, ahead of the publication of its annual financial statements, of its provisional decision to write down the carrying value of the fixed assets. As a result, the fixed assets will stand in the balance sheet of British Energy at approximately £5 billion. There are two main elements in the change.

First, a decision was taken not to build any new UK nuclear power stations at present and accordingly the directors of Nuclear Electric plc decided to write off, in the accounting records, the first-of-a-kind costs of about £0.8 billion, incurred in building the UK's first PWR reactor, Sizewell B. This accounting write-off has been agreed with the company's auditors.

In addition, British Energy's directors' view of the long-term economic value of the stations differs from the views adopted when the 31 March 1995 accounts were finalised: in particular, the planned reduction in levels of payments under the primary nuclear contract and the ending of the nuclear energy agreement premium following privatisation; and lower than previous expectations of future electricity pool prices. I understand that, having considered these factors, the board of British Energy has concluded, with the agreement of its auditors, that there has been a permanent diminution in the value of certain nuclear fixed assets of about £1.2 billion. It will, therefore, as required by the Companies Act 1985, reduce the carrying value of the fixed assets in its accounting records.

In return for the disposal of the assets and liabilities related to the AGR/PWR stations in England and Wales, and the assumption of assets and liabilities related to the Hunterston A magnox station in Scotland, Magnox has received a financial undertaking from the Government. No payments are to be made under the undertaking before Magnox exhausts its other sources of funding, including cash and investments currently held—£3.0 billion at 31 March 1996—income from electricity generation, and outstanding fossil fuel levy income that is due. In recent years the nuclear generators have made significant improvements in their understanding and control of decommissioning costs and other nuclear liabilities; and the active management of Magnox Electric's costs and integration with BNFL should allow it to reduce its liabilities even further. Payments will be made under the undertaking only to the extent they are needed to enable Magnox to meet its financial obligations, including reprocessing, waste management and decommissioning costs, as those obligations fall due. The face value of the undertaking is initially capped at £3.8 billion at 31 March 1996. I have placed a copy of the undertaking in the Library of each House. Assurances on financial obligations given to Nuclear Electric plc in March 1990 by the then Secretary of State for Energy will remain in force for Magnox.

The Government are keen to secure the advantages of integrating Magnox into BNFL and will proceed with the process of integration after the privatisation of British Energy. Consultation with the Health and Safety Executive, Environment agencies, and others over the integration will begin in due course. In addition, the Government plan to free Magnox from some of the restrictions on contracting originally placed on Nuclear Electric plc—in particular, the requirement to offer electricity sale contracts by open tender. The Government intend that Magnox should be required to act in a commercial manner, and that it should be a full competitor in the electricity market.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which companies are now responsible for the nuclear power stations which were owned by Nuclear Electric and Scottish Nuclear before the restructuring of the nuclear industry. [29059]

Mr. Eggar: The nuclear power stations formerly owned by Nuclear Electric plc and Scottish Nuclear Ltd. are now owned by Magnox Electric plc and by British Energy plc's operating subsidiaries, Nuclear Electric Ltd. and Scottish Nuclear Ltd. The details are as follows:

Station	Type	Company
Stations formerly owned by Nuclear Electric plc
Berkeley (decommissioning)	magnox	Magnox Electric plc
Bradwell	magnox	Magnox Electric plc
Dungeness A	magnox	Magnox Electric plc

Oldbury	magnox	Magnox Electric plc
Sizewell A	magnox	Magnox Electric plc
Trawsfynydd (decommissioning)	magnox	Magnox Electric plc

Hunterston A (decommissioning)	magnox	Magnox Electric plc
Hunterston B	AGR	Scottish Nuclear Ltd.
Torness	AGR	Scottish Nuclear Ltd.

In addition, the hydro-electric plant at Maentwrog is now owned by Magnox Electric plc.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress has been made on the issuing of licences and consents to British Energy and Magnox Electric. [29060]

Mr. Eggar: On 31 March 1996 new nuclear site licences came into force for each of the nuclear power stations owned by the British Energy group. These licences were granted by the Health and Safety Executive. On the same date, new discharge authorisations for Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate came into effect for British Energy plc's operating subsidiaries, Nuclear Electric Ltd. and Scottish Nuclear Ltd. respectively. The Director General of Electricity Supply has granted an electricity generation licence to Nuclear Electric Ltd. and is in the process of consulting on a modified electricity generation licence for Scottish Nuclear Ltd. Nuclear Electric Ltd. has also been granted with a second tier supply licence for England, Wales and Scotland.

Cuba

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the recent US legislation on Cuba. [29304]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I made a speech to a seminar hosted by the Caribbean trade advisory group on 2 May setting out Her Majesty's Government policy in respect of this legislation and how the interests of United Kingdom business could be protected if threatened by its provisions. A copy of this speech has been placed in the Library of the House.

As I Indicated in that speech, we are still seeking to clarify certain areas of deep concern about this potentially damaging piece of legislation. Our objection is to its attempts to interfere with the legitimate trade of UK companies outside US. In this connection, my officials will be meeting US State Department officials this week to establish details on how the latter intend to implement the provisions covering the exclusion of persons from the US. We will take the opportunity to reiterate the UK's concern that the Helms/Burton legislation could disrupt normal trading relationships with the USA. We shall consider carefully how to co-ordinate our response with our EU partners.

Equitas

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. member for Bournemouth, West (Mr. Butterfill) on 29 March, Official Report, columns 762–64, what developments there have been since 29 March concerning Equitas; and if he will make a statement. [29305]

Mr. Nelson: Since I announced the authorisation of Equitas on 29 March 1996, Official Report, columns 762–63, further work has taken place on the level of liabilities which Equitas will reinsure and on the assets available to cover them. As a result, the expected opening balance sheet of Equitas will be significantly stronger than originally foreseen, while the increase in provisions for 1992 and prior liabilities required will be about £1.2 billion rather than the £1.5 billion or more previously envisaged. These developments improve the prospects that Equitas will be able to pay off its liabilities in full as they fall due.

Fossil Fuel Levy

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money was raised by the fossil fuel levy in each year from its inception to date; how much of that money was spent on renewables in each year; and how much money was retained by the Treasury in each year. [27948]

Mr. Page: The information requested is:

£ million

Year	Amount raised	Paid to renewable generators
1990–91	1,175	6
1991–92	1,324	12
1992–93	1,348	29
1993–94	1,233	68
1994–95	1,205	96
1995–96[1]	1,104	95

[1] Estimate.

The balance of levy receipts is used to finance payments to Nuclear Electric, British Nuclear Fuels plc in respect of nuclear electricity generated by its plant, and to cover certain other costs such as administration costs.

Industrial Death and Retirement Fund

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the board of Trade (1) if he will place in the Library copies of the documentation held by his Department relating to the industrial death and retirement fund; [28888]

(2) if he will make it his policy that where British Coal intends to destroy documents relating to the industrial death and retirement fund a minimum of 42 days notice is given to the National Association of Colliery Overmen, Deputies and Shotfirers and to his own Department. [28887]

Mr. Page: These are matters for the British Coal Corporation, which is subject to the Public Records Act 1958.

Ostrich Farming

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has for compensation measures for ostrich breeders affected by his Department's investigation into the Ostrich Farming Corporation. [28527]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I see no reason to consider compensation payments.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the progress of his Department's investigation into the Ostrich Farming Corporation. [28528]

Mr. Taylor: Following an investigation under Companies Act powers, on 28 March 1996 the Secretary of State presented a petition to wind up the company in the public interest. On 3 April 1996, at an opposed hearing, the court granted the Secretary of State's further application for the appointment of the official receiver as provisional liquidator pending the hearing of the petition. On 8 May the company stated its intention to oppose the petition and the court allowed a further five weeks for the filing of evidence and indicated that the petition should be heard as soon as possible thereafter which it is expected, on present information will be before the end of July 1996.

Business Links

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the forecast cost of the current Government-sponsored national advertising campaign for business links. [28536]

Mr. Page: The forecast cost of the 1996–97 business links national publicity campaign is £4 million, of which the budget for the national advertising campaign is £2.5 million.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the cost to date of (a) setting up business links and (b) the services provided by business links; and if he will make a statement. [28522]

Mr. Page: DTI's contribution to date towards establishing the network is £53.6 million over the period 1993–94 to 1995–96. Over the same period DTI has provided £112.9 million for business support services. DTI only contributes part of the costs, with business links receiving other revenue from partner contributions in cash or in kind and from income generation activities including charges for services.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what steps are being taken to monitor the use of funds provided to business links by his Department; [28535]

(2) what measures he has taken to prevent the misuse of departmental funds by a business link. [28538]

Mr. Page: All funding provided by DTI to business links is channelled through training and enterprise councils and is subject to a set of contactual requirements agreed by the relevant TEC.

In addition to the statutory requirements for business links companies and TECs to prepare financial statements, the following arrangements are in place to prevent the misuse of DTI funds provided to business links:

TECs are required by Government to have an effective system for the financial appraisal and monitoring of their providers, including business links.

Government office accountants teams visit each TEC at least once a year to check that funds are being claimed in accordance with the contractual requirements. In addition, for business links pump-priming funding:

before any grant is paid, a report is required from an independent accountant confirming that the TEC and business links accounting systems are sufficiently sound to enable the accountant to report on subsequent grant claims; the final claim in each operational year must be accompanied by a report from the independent accountant confirming that claims for payment have been made in accordance with the relevant contractual requirements.

Business links pump-priming projects and services funding are monitored on a regular basis by Government office staff, who check that the project to establish the business links and the services are being delivered in accordance with the relevant contractual requirements.

In order to achieve accreditation Business Links must have documented systems in place to ensure effective management and financial accountability and a strategy for achieving and maintaining long-term financial viability.

Companies (Financial Assistance)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which office of his Department is responsible for the granting of each form of financial assistance to businesses; what are the implications of the level of assistance for the division of responsibility between offices; and if he will make a statement. [27736]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 2 May 1996]: A business wanting assistance from my Department should normally contact its local business link in the first instance. Procedures for final decisions on whether to offer assistance in particular cases vary depending on the scheme and on the level of assistance proposed.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations his Department has received since 1988 from hon. Members about financial assistance from his Department to (i) Ivens Electronics Ltd., (ii) Ridgewood Industries Ltd., (iii) Ridgewood Engineering Ltd., (iv) Ridgewood Electronics Ltd., (v) Ridgewood Holdings Ltd., (vi) Avocet Ltd. and (vii) MGC Technical Services Ltd. [21185]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 18 March 1996]: We have been unable to trace records of representations from any hon. Member about financial assistance to these companies.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations his Department has received since 1985 from hon. Members about financial assistance from his Department to (i) Pendennis Shipyard Ltd., Falmouth, (ii) ModernTask Ltd., Redruth, (iii) Pan Atlantia (UK) plc, Birmingham, (iv) Cornish Stairways Ltd., Penryn, (v) Thimbles Ltd., Redruth and (vi) Queensbury International Ltd., Portsmouth. [21184]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 18 March 1996]: We have been able to trace records of only one representation, from my hon. Friend the Member for Falmouth and Camborne (Mr. Coe) on behalf of a constituent concerning the implications of financial assistance to Pendennis Shipyard Ltd.

Joint Industry Board

Mr. McAllion: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what requests he has received for the trade unions certification officer to take the Joint Industry Board to court for contravention of the Trade Union Act 1984 during the period when it was registered as a trade union; and if he will make a statement. [28213]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The certification officer is an independent authority appointed by statute. Requests for the certification officer to investigate complaints are made directly to him and not to Ministers.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what funds were allocated to research into Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease and its possible relationship with bovine spongiform encephalopathy over the period (a) 1986 to 1990, (b) 1990–91 to 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97. [28518]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The information is not all available in the form requested.

The Department of Health and the Medical Research Council's expenditure on research into Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease and its possible relationship with BSE is as follows:

£ million

	1986–87 to 1987–88	1988–89 to 1989–90	1990–91 to 1995–96	1996–97 (estimated spend)
Department of Health	Nil	Nil	1.7	2.3
MRC	n/a	0.6	[1]3.6	n/a

[1] This figure includes an estimated spend of £700,000 for 1995–96, as the figure for this year has not yet been finalised.
n/a = not available

It is difficult to estimate the MRC's spend for 1996–97 because a forthcoming call for proposals in this area is likely to lead to increased spend in future years.

The Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council also supports research related to CJD, and over the period 1991–92 to 1997–98 it awarded grants to the value of £2.4 million.

WALES

Pembrokeshire NHS Trust (Auditors' Report)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to place in the Library a copy of the auditors' report by Coopers and Lybrand into the circumstances leading up to, and financial implications of, the departure of the former chief executive of the Pembrokeshire NHS trust. [28889]

Mr. Richards: A report under section 20(3) of the NHS and Community Care Act 1990 has recently been received from the trust's external auditors. I shall write to the hon. Member when it has been properly considered.

Oil Spillage (Sea Empress Incident)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what information has been requested by the Environment Agency from his Department about the Sea Empress oil spillage; when that information was requested; and if he will place a copy of his Department's reply in the Library; [28866]

(2) if he will place in the Library copies of the letters sent by the Environment Agency requesting information from Government Departments about the Sea Empress oil spillage. [28865]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There have been close contacts between the Welsh Office and the agency on a range of matters associated with the Sea Empress oil spillage. It is not my usual practice to place copies of correspondence between the Environment Agency and the Welsh Office in the Library of the House.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what investigations are being carried out by the Environment Agency into the spillage of oil from the Sea Empress. [28863]

Mr. Jones: The agency is collecting a broad range of information relating to its responsibilities for the protection of the environment.

Read Codes System

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the licence income paid by different segments of the NHS in Wales for participating in or helping to develop the Read codes system. [28936]

Mr. Hague: The value for money of licence fees charged to NHS trusts in Wales for use of Read codes is under consideration as part of the pilot project based at Pembrokeshire NHS trust.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Calf Slaughter

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about the calf slaughter scheme. [28871]

Mr. Baldry: I have received a number of representations about this scheme. They relate mainly to the requirement for processors to give three days' notice of presentation of animals for slaughter and the penalties if the number actually presented does not tally with that notified in advance. My officials are pressing the EU Commission for a relaxation of these rules so as to make the scheme more flexible.

Cattle Slaughter

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how long he estimates it will take the approved slaughterhouses to slaughter those cattle currently over the age of 30 months. [28324]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 May 1996]: It is too early to make a meaningful estimate of this kind. The slaughter programme has now started and we aim to remove the backlog of cattle as quickly as possible.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what facilities will be available in the county of Northumberland to collect cull cows and cattle of over 30 months for a slaughter; and if he will designate Acklington mart for this purpose. [28543]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 May 1996]: Several centres in Northumberland, including Acklington, and others at Hexham, Morpeth and Wooler, are included in the provisional list of markets being designated as collection centres for the slaughter of cattle over 30 months.

EC Beef Ban

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will set out the main points of the report by the Scientific Veterinary Committee that was consulted by the EC Commission with regard to beef on 22 March. [24889]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 16 April 1996]: I have placed in the Library of the House a copy of the conclusions of the Scientific Veterinary Committee's meeting of 22 March.

In the view of the committee, the data presented at the meeting on the new variant of CJD do not to date provide evidence that BSE is transmissible to man.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Drugs Misuse

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which committees, Ministers and officials within his Department are responsible for the development of a multi-agency and cross-Government Department approach on the misuse of drugs; and if he will make a statement. [28254]

Mr. Sackville: The ministerial sub-committee of the Cabinet on the misuse of drugs, chaired by my right hon. Friend the Lord President of the Council, co-ordinates the work of Departments, including the Home Office, involved in tackling drug misuse. The Lord President is supported in his co-ordinating role by the central drugs co-ordination unit. Independent advice to Government is provided by the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs.

Police and Fire Services

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional resources the Government are making available to meet increased costs from pensions, inflation and other unavoidable costs in the police and fire services; and if he will make a statement. [28245]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 9 May 1996]: For the police service in England and Wales the settlement for 1996–97 included an extra £79.9 million for pensions, £123.6 million for pay and other inflationary pressures, and a further £20 million to enable the police service to recruit 1,000 additional constables by the end of 1996–97. The Association of Chief Police Officers and the police authority associations play a valuable role in forecasting additional pressures on police authority budgets. Their views will be taken into account in the 1997–98 spending round.

For the fire service for England, the settlement for 1996–97 included an extra £14 million for pensions and £3 million for training. The total fire standard spending assessments are distributed to individual fire authorities by means of a formula. This was adjusted to take account of factors for pensions and fire safety for 1996–97 in line with recommendations by the Audit Commission. The formula is looked at each year and local authority representatives play a full part in that review.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to increase the length of service for police and firemen from 30 years to 35 years before securing a full pension; and if he will make a statement; [28250]

(2) what percentage of (a) firemen and (b) police officers retire on ill health grounds with less than 30 years service; and if he will make a statement on how these figures affect each pension scheme. [28252]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 9 May 1996]: The information about the number of retirements on ill health grounds is not available in the form requested. The details of the police and fire service pension schemes have been under review. The results will shortly be the subject of consultation with police and fire interests.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost in real terms of the police and fire service pension schemes in each of the last 10 years; what estimate he has made of these costs for each of the next 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [28251]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 9 May 1996]: The net cost of the police and fire pensions scheme between 1985–86 and 1994–95, as actual expenditure and at 1996–97 prices, is set out in the tables. Projections of costs from 1995–96 to 1999–2000 are available only in respect of police pensions as set out in the tables.

Additional provision for police pensions has been made available in the last four settlements. The rising trend in police and fire pensions costs is being monitored and assessed in the context of each spending round.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost of (a) out-of-court settlements and (b) awards made in court against the Metropolitan police in each of the last three years and the current year to date; and what were the legal costs in each such year. [28907]

Mr. Maclean: Information on the legal costs in each year could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The following is the other information requested.

Calendar year	1993 £	1994 £	1995 £	[1]1996 £

Prisons (Drugs)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have tested positive for drugs in each month of the last three years and of these how many have subsequently tested positive again; and if he will make a statement. [28237]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 8 May 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 10 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners who have tested positive for drugs in the last three years and how many have tested positive more than once.

Mandatory drug testing (MDT) has been introduced as a phased programme since February 1995. No drug test results are available before that date. A table setting out the number of prisons in which MDT has been implemented and the number of confirmed positive random test results each month is attached. Results for other forms of mandatory drug testing are not yet centrally collated.

The data available to Prison Service headquarters is supplied by the drug testing laboratory. To protect confidentiality, the laboratory is only able to identify the sample and not the prisoner who provided it. Because of this, data on prisoners who have tested positive more than once could only be supplied at a disproportionate cost by reviewing every establishment's records.

Mandatory drug testing random testing programme: numbers testing positive February 1995 to February 1996

Month	Number of prisons testing at end of month	Number positive 1995
February	6	78
March	7	122
April	8	127
May	8	84
June	8	113
July	8	138
August	8	57
September	15	171
October	23	195
November	43	429
December	68	601
1996
January	97	663
February	121	920

[1] Until October 1995 the statistics reflected all positive test results. For example, a prisoner who tested positive for both cannabis and cocaine was counted as two positive tests. Hence, the numbers of tests positive between February to September 1995 are distorted slightly upwards. Since October such multiple positives have been factored out of the statistics.

Checking of statistical returns for January and February 1996 has revealed a number of errors. Error checking continues and this data must be regarded as provisional.

Young Offenders

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the offending rate for 15, 16 and 17-year-old (a) boys and (b) girls in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and what information he has collated on the number convicted or cautioned for previous offences. [28174]

Mr. Maclean: Information on the offending rate for males and females aged 15 to 17 years is given in the table.

Information collated on the numbers convicted for previous offences appears in the annual Command Paper, "Criminal statistics, England and Wales", which is available in the Library. Figures for 1991 and 1993 appeared in chapter 9 of the 1993 and 1994 issues respectively. There is no information collated on the number cautioned for previous offences.

1993	1,995	1,849	1,813

[1] Offending rate is the number per 100,000 population found guilty or cautioned.

Special Constables

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current average cost of recruiting, training and equipping a special constable. [28205]

Mr. Maclean: It is not, so far, common practice for force finance departments to maintain separate records of expenditure for special constabulary activities. In general, these costs are absorbed into the operating costs of the regular force and borne by the police fund. Therefore, it is not possible to give accurate average costs.

Costs will also vary according to the type of equipment favoured by each force, and the different combinations of regular officers, civilian staff and special constables involved in recruitment, training and administration.

As a rough guide, it has been estimated that a special constable will cost his or her force some £1,500 in the first year to recruit, train and equip: thereafter, the annual cost is about £500.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the name of the special constabulary. [28203]

Mr. Maclean: There are no plans to do so. The special constabulary is a generic name for the 43 special constabularies of England and Wales.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letters sent to him on 22 January, 23 February and 27 March from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Stephen Hall, an inmate of Littlehay Prison.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 7 May 1996]: My right hon. and learned Friend replied on 3 May.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter to the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Leeds, North-East (Mr. Kirkhope), of 3 April—Home Office reference PO4618/96—about his constituent. [28547]

Mr. Kirkhope: I have written to the hon. Gentleman today.

Parole Board

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to revise his directions to the Parole Board. [29306]

Miss Widdecombe: We have revised our directions to the Parole Board on the release and recall of determinate sentence prisoners, originally issued in 1992 under section 32(6) of the Criminal Justice Act 1991, in order to tighten and clarify the framework within which parole decisions are made. We have asked Lord Belstead, chairman of the Parole Board, to implement these directions as soon as possible. Copies of the new directions have been placed in the Library.

The main changes to the directions on release are as follows:

- there is a more explicit statement about the need to protect the safety of the public being a paramount factor;
- it is made clear that the board can take into account the nature and circumstances of the original offence when assessing risk;
- it is made clear that previous post-release behaviour must be considered; and
- emphasis is placed on the need to take into account, in the case of a violent or sexual offender, any previous convictions for violence or for sexual offences.

The directions on recall have been recast in such a way as to preserve consistency with the revised directions on release.

Firearms

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all firearms which do not currently require a licence; and if he will make a statement. [28253]

Mr. Maclean: The only weapons which meet the definition of a firearm in the Firearms Acts but do not require a firearm certificate are low powered air weapons and antique firearms kept as curiosities or ornaments. In addition there are several exemptions under the Firearms Acts to the general requirement to have a certificate issued by the police, but these are dependent on the user, or the proposed use of the weapon, rather than the firearm itself.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) firearm certificates and (b) shotgun certificates have been issued in (i) 1980, (ii) 1985, (iii) 1992, (iv) 1993, (v) 1994 and (vi) 1995; [28258]

(2) how many registered firearms dealers there were in the United Kingdom in (a) 1980, (b) 1985, (c) 1992, (d) 1993, (e) 1994 and (f) 1995; [28266]

(3) how many firearm certificates and shotgun certificates have been revoked in accordance with section 30 of the Firearms Act 1968 in (a) 1980, (b) 1985, (c) 1992, (d) 1993, (e) 1994 and (f) 1995. [28257]

Mr. Maclean: The available information for 1985, 1992, 1993 and 1994 is published in Home Office statistical bulletin "Firearm Certificate Statistics, England and Wales", copies of which can be found in the Library.

Figures for 1980 and for the number of registered firearms dealers and the number of firearm and shotgun certificates revoked in 1985 are not available centrally.

Provisional figures for 1995 show that 49,000 firearm and 220,700 shotgun certificates were issued in England and Wales and 2,470 firearms dealers were registered at 31 December. A total of 206 firearm and 685 shotgun certificates were revoked.

Figures for Scotland are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and figures for Northern Ireland are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Service

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will restore the planned reductions in the Prison Service budget. [27859]

Miss Widdecombe: The Government have made additional funding available to the Prison Service for security improvements, combating drug abuse and to cater for expected increases in the prison population, but they believe that efficiency savings can be achieved and that the privately managed prisons have shown that lower costs are possible without putting security and control at risk. The savings being required of the Prison Service over the next three years are broadly consistent with those expected of the public services generally. There are no plans to reduce the requirement.

Doncaster Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answers to the hon. Member for Tooting (Mr. Cox) of 16 April, Official Report, columns 362–63, and 13 March, Official Report, column 631, why Doncaster prison was omitted from the list of prisons which carried out dye stamping of visitors. [27643]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about dye stamping of visitors to prisons.

I regret that the reply to Mr. Cox's Question was not comprehensive. Records of prisons using dye stamping are not routinely kept, as it is a matter for the governor's discretion whether to use the system. The information on which the reply was based had been collected for another purpose, and did not reveal that Doncaster used dye stamping.

The Director General's reply to your Question of 13 March was separately researched and unfortunately the result was not included in the reply to the later Question. Investigation of this error has revealed that Bedford prison was also missing from the list.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on current staff morale within the Prison Service. [28172]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 13 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the current level of staff morale within the Prison Service.

Prison Service staff perform a difficult job within a considerable degree of dedication. The Service is facing a number of pressures, including the increase in the prison population and, in common with other public services, the need to make efficiency savings. But the Service, is approaching the task professionally, in consultation with unions and staff and with a firm determination to maintain the balance between essential security and control measures, constructive and effective regimes for prisoners and providing support for staff.

Prison Population

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer to the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) of 29 April, Official Report, column 399, on the prison population, if he will list the number of prisoners held (a) in prison and (b) in police cells, on the last day of each of the last 24 months. [28347]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Serivces, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. George Howarth, dated 13 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking pursuant to the Answer to the honourable Member for Montgomery of 29 April on the prison population, if he will list the number of prisoners held (a) in prison and (b) in police cells, on the last day of each of the last day of each of the last 24 months.

[1] Provisional figures.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer given to the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 29 April, Official Report, column 399, on the prison population, when he expects to receive the Home Office feasibility study on the super-max prison; when he expects its publication; and when a decision will be announced on whether to commission such a prison. [28349]

Miss Widdecombe: The Prison Service submitted to Ministers its report examining the feasibility, costs and benefits of building a maximum security prison to house the most dangerous prisoners in the system and a control prison to hold the most unruly and disruptive prisoners, on 30 April. No decisions have yet been made on publications, timing or whether, and if so how, this project should proceed.

Prison Staff (Overtime)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average number of hours of overtime worked by prison staff for which time off in lieu is outstanding for each financial year since 1991–92 for each prison establishment; [28346]

(2) how many hours of overtime were worked by prison staff for which time off in lieu is outstanding for each prison establishment. [28319]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. George Howarth, dated 13 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about overtime worked by prison staff and time off in lieu.

Prison officers have not worked overtime since the current (Fresh Start) working arrangements were introduced in 1987, when the average amount of overtime worked was 16 hours per week.

The Fresh Start agreement allowed for fluctuations in staffing levels to be met by the movement of officers' shifts or the anticipation of hours to be repaid by time off in lieu. The balance of additional hours/time off in lieu fluctuates throughout the year and from prison to prison.

The figures you request are not currently collected centrally and could be produced only at disproportionate cost. We are, however, able to provide you with information, for the period between April 1993 and July 1995, which was collected for a particular exercise and is given in the attached tables.

I have arranged for a copy of these tables to be placed in the Library.

Prisons (Directors' Emergencies)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of directors' emergencies which were called, and the reasons for calling them during each financial year since 1991–92 for each prison establishment. [28320]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. George Howarth, dated 13 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about 'directors' emergencies'.

The term 'directors' emergencies' is not in common usage in the Prison Service but there are occasions when, for operational reasons, the normal provisions of our Industrial Relations Procedural Agreement are overridden—for example when a failure to agree has been registered by a branch of the Prison Officers' Association about plans for a prison to take additional prisoners, when this has been necessary to avoid holding prisoners in police cells. Such occasions are infrequent and no central record is kept of them.

Parole

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in England and Wales were paroled during 1995. [28601]

Miss Widdecombe: Provisional figures show that around 1,600 prisoners were recommended for parole during 1995.

Art Theft

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what use the police are making of private enterprise firms with computerised databases and specialised knowledge of art theft. [27851]

Mr. Maclean: The police work closely with the art loss register, which has a database of around 70,000 items. The Government consider this is an excellent example of partnership between the police and private enterprise.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of recent trends in the theft of art and antiques in the United Kingdom. [27852]

Mr. Maclean: None. The recorded crime figures do not separately identify theft of art and antiques. However, the National Criminal Intelligence Service is aware of the problem of art thefts. Many local police forces have specialist computer systems which enable them to exchange information with each other.

Buckley Hall Prison

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 24 April, Official Report, column 170, relating to Buckley Hall prison, what were the reasons for determining that a new Prison Service establishment should not be inspected until it had been operational for at least two years; and what was the previous policy for the time taken before a prison faced an inspection under Her Majesty's Inspectorate annual programme of inspections. [28879]

Miss Widdecombe: The decision not to inspect new establishments until they have been operational for two years was taken in 1993 by the then chief inspector, who considered that that amount of time was necessary for new establishments to consolidate those aspects of their work which would be under scrutiny by his staff. Before 1993, the decision when to inspect new establishments was taken on the basis of such information as was known about each individual prison.

Agecroft (Prison Site)

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what alternative sites to the Agecroft site in Salford were investigated by the Prison Service for the siting of a new prison; and what were the reasons the Agecroft site was preferred against each of such alternatives. [29077]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. David Sumberg, dated 13 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reapply to your recent Question about sites which were considered as alternatives to the Agecroft site in Salford.

Information about alternative sites considered and rejected by the Prison Service is provided in the attached table.

The Agecroft site, in comparison with the other locations considered:

made strategic sense in terms of other Prison Service establishments and courts in Greater Manchester; was suitable in terms of topography and ground conditions;

was in the urban area, but was in a wedge of land largely isolated from its surroundings by a river and a canal. It was also at a considerable distance from large housing developments; was not allocated to any alternative use in the local planning control documents or policies; was available for sale (the owners of several other sites indicated that they would not sell) and at a price which the Prison Service could afford.

Adoption

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date the Home Office received an application on behalf of the child whose name has been passed to him to allow that child indefinite leave to remain here for the purposes of adoption; on what date the Home Office notified the parties concerned of its decision to allow that child to remain in the United Kingdom; and for what reasons there was a delay in processing this application. [29189]

Mr. Kirkhope: We have no trace of such an application.

Fire Service

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money in real terms (a) overall and (b) specifically for mileage reimbursement has been allocated to local government for the fire service in each area of England and Wales in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [28246]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 9 May 1996]: The amount allocated for mileage reimbursement from within budgets is a matter for each fire authority. Details are not held centrally. Information of the overall financial provision for individual brigades is not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the revenue budget for each fire service authority is used to meet pension costs; and if he will make a statement. [28249]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 9 May 1996]: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 10 June to Friday 14 June 1996.

TREASURY

Taxation

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total amount of taxation that will be paid by the average family during 1996–97; and how much this would have been if 1992–93 rates of taxation now applied. [28519]

Mr. Jack: The available information is contained in the table.

Tax paid by a one-earner couple on male average earnings with two children[1]

£ per week in 1996–97

	Actual tax system	[2]1992–93 tax system
Income tax	50.21	55.12

[2] 1992–93 tax rates and allowances.

Tax Office, Salisbury

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will review the decision to close the tax office at Salisbury; and if he will make a statement; [28994]

(2) if he will place in the Library the background papers which formed the basis for the decision to close the Salisbury tax office; and if he will make a statement on the costs and benefits of the proposed closure; [28995]

(3) what market research was commissioned by his Department prior to the closure of the Salisbury tax office to assess the effects on local businesses and individuals; [28996]

(4) what estimate has been made of the increase in levels of tax evasion and uncollected tax which will result from the closure of the Salisbury tax office; and if he will make a statement. [28997]

Mr. Jack: No decision has been taken to close the tax office at Salisbury.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of visits made to the Salisbury tax office by local residents in the latest year for which information is available. [28998]

Mr. Jack: During the year to March 1996, 10,126 visits were made by members of the public to Salisbury tax office and tax inquiry centre. Although it is not possible to estimate the number of visits made by local residents, it is likely that the majority of these visits were made by individuals who either live or work in the Salisbury area.

ENVIRONMENT

County Hall

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what applications have been received by his Department in respect of the operation of an aquarium by Shirayana Shokusan in the county hall, London SE1. [28926]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department has received no applications for either listed building consent or planning permission relating to the operation of the proposed aquarium at county hall.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current location of the chairman of the GLC's chair. [28920]

Sir Paul Beresford: That is a matter for the owners of the riverside building of county hall.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much remains to be paid by Shirayana Shokusan to the London residuary body for the purchase of county hall; and when he expects to be paid this sum. [28924]

Sir Paul Beresford: The contract for the sale of county hall provided for a deferred sum of £10 million to be paid to the London residuary body from April 1997, subject to the full sum being paid by 2012. Following the winding up of the London residuary body on 29 March of this year, the London borough of Bromley inherited the remaining rights and liabilities in respect of county hall including those in relation to the payment of this sum.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what payments have been made to the London residuary body by Whitbread plc in respect of the that company's involvement in the development of county hall. [28925]

Sir Paul Beresford: Prior to the winding up of the London residuary body on 29 March 1996, Whitbread plc had not been required to make any payments to the residuary body in respect of the development of county hall.

Direct Labour Organisations

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he proposes to take against those local authorities whose direct labour organisations failed to meet their statutory financial obligations in 1994–95. [29186]

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he proposes to take against those local authorities whose direct labour and direct service organisations failed to meet their statutory financial objectives in 1994–95. [29281]

Sir Paul Beresford: On 13 February this year, 19 statutory notices were served on eight local authorities concerning the failure of their direct labour and service organisations to meet the required financial objectives in 1994–95. My right hon. Friend has now considered the responses to those notices, and has decided to take action against six local authorities.

Each of the six local authorities which are the subject of today's announcement recorded losses in 1994–95 in excess of £500,000 on work they carried out. The action we have taken today will ensure that, where authorities are failing to put their houses in order, they will have to subject the work to a fresh competition.

In some cases, the in-house team will be barred from competing if it has been a consistently poor performer in recent years. The end result will be either better-run in-house teams or the use of private contractors. This will ultimately be for the benefit of local taxpayers.

The directions take the following five forms:

preventing the following authority from carrying out the work after a specified date: Hereford and Worcester (building maintenance).

restricting the work carried out by the DSO and preventing the authority from carrying out the remainder of the work if it fails to meet the financial objective in 1996–97 or 1997–98: Burnley borough council (building maintenance).

requiring the authority to retender the work and to seek the consent of the Secretary of State if proposing to award the work in-house: Burnley borough council (highways and sewers).

preventing an authority from carrying out the work if it fails to meet the financial objective in 1996–97 or 1997–98: the London borough of Southwark (building maintenance).

requiring authorities to retender the work if they fail to meet the financial objective in a specified year or years, and to seek the Secretary of State's consent where the work has to be retendered and where the authority subsequently wishes to award work in-house:

1995–96 and 1996–97: Hereford and Worcester county council (highways and sewers), Kingston-Upon-Hull city council (building cleaning, building maintenance and grounds maintenance), and Salford city council (grounds maintenance).

1996–97: St. Helens MBC (highways and sewers).

1996–97 and 1997–98: Burnley borough council (other catering).

The Secretary of State has also decided to take no further statutory action in respect of financial failure in 1993–94 by:

New Forest district council (highways and sewers) and Salford city council (highways and sewers and schools and welfare catering).

He is still considering the response from Liverpool city council (schools and welfare catering, vehicle maintenance, building cleaning, grounds maintenance and highways and sewers).

In addition to the 19 notices served on 13 February, a further 26 were served on 22 local authorities on 2 April. Responses to these notices are currently being considered, and our decisions will be announced in June. Further notices for financial failure will be issued later in the year, and we expect to have announced all of our decisions by the end of October.

The Secretary of State has also decided to revoke a direction given on 22 August 1995 to Hereford and Worcester county council for schools and welfare catering work, following financial failure in 1993–94.

Environment Agency

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department has taken to inform parish councils of the role and responsibilities of the new Environment Agency. [28646]

Mr. Clappsion [holding answer 10 May 1996]: None. The Environment Agency has contacted local organisations to inform them of the agency's role and responsibilities.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contact his Department has had with district and parish councils in Lancashire over the role and responsibilities of the Environment Agency in Lancashire. [28647]

Mr. Clappsion [holding answer 10 May 1996]: The Department consulted the local authority associations on its proposals for the Environment Agency, its scope and responsibilities.

HEALTH

Residual Trust Property (Manchester)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the value of the North West regional health authority residual trust property which is being transferred to Manchester health authority; and where it is located. [28099]

Mr. Horam: No trust fund property is to be transferred to Manchester health authority.

Grant Aid Funding

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 500, if he will list (a) the non-London organisations which have received section 64 grant aid funding for the provision of service to HIV clients and (b) the organisations receiving first time grants under section 64 grant aid funding for the provision of services to HIV clients, for the financial year 1996–97. [28465]

Mr. Horam: The non-London organisations which are currently receiving section 64 grant aid funding for the provision of services to HIV clients for the financial year 1996–97 are as follows:

National Network of Body Positive Groups;

Body Positive North East.

The organisations receiving first-time grants under section 64 grant aid funding for provision of services to HIV clients, for the financial year 1996–97 are as follows:

Positive Care Link;

National Network of Body Positive Groups;

UK Coalition of People Living with HIV and Aids;

Body Positive North East.

A new grant was also awarded to the National AIDS Trust, although this was not a first-time grant for the organisation.

Milk (Nutritional Value)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated regarding the nutritional value of milk consumed by children between the ages of 11 and 16 years; and if he will make a statement. [28530]

Mr. Horam: (a) The Department, together with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, has commissioned, through the national diet and nutrition survey programme, a survey designed to assess the habitual diet of school children aged four to 18 years. The results of this survey will give information about the amount and nutritional value of milk consumed by children between the ages of 11 and 16 years.

(b) None.

Dental Services (General Anaesthetics)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library the guidelines currently in place for dentists who give general anaesthetics in their dental surgeries. [28620]

Mr. Malone: The Department has issued no guidelines for dentists who give general anaesthetics in their surgeries, as this is a professional matter for the relevant professional bodies. The General Dental Council, in May 1993, published "Professional Conduct and Fitness to Practise", copies of which are available in the Library; paragraphs 17 to 28 are guidelines on general anaesthesia, sedation and resuscitation.

BSE

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department received advice from the Committee on the Safety of Medicines concerning the sourcing of materials from cattle under six months from BSE—free herds; what steps were subsequently taken as a result of this advice; and when. [27980]

Mr. Horam: In February 1989, at the request of the Licensing Authority, the Committee on the Safety of Medicines, the Committee on Dental and Surgical Materials and the Veterinary Products Committee, convened an expert group to formulate guidelines on the sourcing of bovine materials for the use in the manufacture of medicinal products. These guidelines were considered and agreed by the CSM at its February 1989 meeting. The guidelines recommended that source animals should be calves up to six months of age. A letter containing these joint CSM-VPC Guidelines was sent to the pharmaceutical industry. The industry was asked to provide information on the source and type of material of animal origin used in the manufacture of medicines. Subsequently, the bovine spongiform encephalopathy working party was established jointly by the CSM and VPC. This group considered the replies from companies at its October 1989 and subsequent meetings. Companies changed their source of bovine materials to non-UK sources for parenteral, ocular and topical products applied to broken skin. All products licensed since the 1989 CSM-VPC guidelines were issued, and the subsequent European Committee on Proprietary Medicinal Products 1992 guidelines, which replaced them, have been assessed in accordance with the guidelines for the acceptability of the bovine materials used.

Private Hospitals

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many private hospitals there were (i) by region (ii) nationally in each of the last five years; [29192]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of private hospital beds (i) by region and (ii) nationally in each of the last five years. [29191]

Mr. Malone: Information relating solely to private hospitals is not available centrally. Information on private hospitals, homes and clinics as a group is available and published annually in "Private hospitals, homes and clinics registered under section 23 of the Registered Homes Act 1984", copies of which are available in the Library. For the last two years, information is presented separately for private hospitals and clinics and for private nursing homes. Additional information on private hospitals can be found in the annual survey of "Acute Hospitals in the Independent Sector with Psychiatric Hospitals Supplement" by the Independent Healthcare Association.

Elective Surgery

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the levels of elective surgery performed in the private sector (a) by region and (b) nationally in each of the last five years; [29184]

(2) what was the amount of elective surgery performed in the private sector privately as a percentage of NHS elective surgery (a) by region and (b) nationally in each of the last 10 years. [29185]

Mr. Malone: Information on elective surgery performed in the private sector is not collected centrally. Information on the volume of elective and emergency admissions in NHS hospitals is contained in the annual publication "Hospitals Episode Statistics", copies of which are available in the Library.

Cost Rent Schemes

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cost rent schemes have been agreed (a) in London and (b) outside London in each of the last 10 years. [29187]

Mr. Malone: Information is available for only 1994–95 and relates to cost rent projects agreed in principle by health authorities. Details will be placed in the Library.

Human Embyros

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many embryos have been frozen under the provisions of licences issued by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority since its establishment; and in how many of those cases storage facilities are no longer able to trace the parents of that embryo. [28999]

Mr. Horam: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave her on 25 March, columns 421-22. Statistics about contacts between licensed centres and patients are not available centrally.

Private Finance (General Practitioner Premises)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about private finance in respect of general practitioner premises. [29188]

Ms Horam: The primary care sector of the national health service has always used private capital to fund the development of general practitioner premises.

Health Authority Expenditure

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the per capita expenditure by each health authority area in each of the last three years for which information is available. [29070]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Minister for Health gave the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 26 May 1994, column 305 and the reply my right hon. Friend the then Secretary for Health gave the hon. Member for Darlington on 12 December 1994, column 465, for per capita spend for each district health authority in 1992–93 and 1993–94.

Per capita spend for each district health authority in 1994–95 will be placed in the Library.

Comparisons of these per capita spend figures need to be treated with caution. First, not all the expenditure covered arises from population-related activities. Secondly, crude populations do not reflect differences in age structure or relative health care need. These differences feature in the formulae used to inform the main allocations to the former district health authorities.

Adoption Rules (Foreign Children)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the rules governing transfer of consent by the natural parents on cases of adoption of foreign national children; and what assessment he has made of the compliance of the procedures in the case about which he has been informed with those rules. [29190]

Mr. Bowis: Where an adoption application has been made to a court in England and Wales in accordance with the Adoption Act 1976, the court may not make an adoption order unless it is satisfied that the child is free for adoption and that agreement of the parent or guardian to the adoption has been obtained. Before making an adoption order, section 16 of the 1976 Act requires the court to satisfy itself that such consent has been given freely and with full understanding of what is involved and that each parent has agreed unconditionally to the making of the adoption order.

Rules of court require that a guardian ad litem be appointed by the court in any case where consent is not given or there are special circumstances. In cases of consent, a reporting officer will be appointed. If he has any doubt about the validity of the consent, the court will consider whether to appoint a guardian. In the High Court, this is the official solicitor unless he declines to act or one of the parties objects. It is the duty of the guardian ad litem to investigate the application and prepare a report for the court.

Parental agreement to the making of an adoption order may be dispensed with by the court in certain prescribed circumstances. These provisions apply to all adoption applications irrespective of the country of origin of the child concerned. Similar provisions apply in Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Read Codes System

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 608, if he will list each hospital participating in the development of the Read codes project; which aspects of its application each hospital was deemed to be piloting; and when each pilot project was due to start and finish. [28935]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 10 May 1996]: The hospitals concerned have requested that their details are not divulged until the project has been completed.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Know-how Fund

33. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new proposals he has to extend the work of the know-how fund in the Baltic states. [27700]

Mr. Hanley: We are starting a regional project covering all three Baltic states in public administration development. Through this and other initiatives, the know-how fund will continue to provide rapid and flexible assistance to the reform process in the Baltic states. The countries concerned very much welcome our support.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what occasion and in relation to which contracts, contracts sponsored under the know-how fund in Moscow in the last five years were allocated and subsequently extended without being the subject of tendering or re-tendering procedures. [29237]

Mr. Hanley: Of the 1,574 contracts the know-how fund has issued over the last five years, 1,256 contracts were awarded without a requirement to tender. This includes contracts issued to nominated individuals, low-value contracts where the costs of a competition would outweigh potential savings, and cost-sharing contracts.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list the United Kingdom contractors and consultants who have been engaged on know-how fund sponsored food distribution projects and training projects in Moscow during the last five years; [29235]

(2) on what occasions and in relation to which contracts United Kingdom contractors and consultants who have been engaged on know-how fund sponsored contracts in the last five years were given such contracts without a requirement to tender; [29236]

(3) if he will list the projects funded during the last five years by the know-how fund relating to (a) food distribution in Moscow and (b) training in Moscow. [29234]

Mr. Hanley: The answers could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Nigeria

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date the British high commissioner returned to Nigeria; what steps he is taking to encourage the restoration of democracy in that country; and on what date he expects the Nigerian high commissioner to return to London. [29010]

Mr. Hanley: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Stretford (Mr. Lloyd) on 19 February, column 22. The Nigerian authorities have given us no indication of a date for the return of the Nigerian high commissioner to London.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had, and with whom, on the current regime in Nigeria. [28600]

Mr. Hanley: We continue to consult closely with Commonwealth, European Union and other partners on all aspects of our policy towards Nigeria.

Human Rights Monitors (Africa)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the number of British sponsored and financed human rights monitors in Africa; and if he will list the countries in which they are working. [28599]

Mr. Hanley: UN human rights monitors are deployed in Rwanda and Burundi.

Rwanda has 101 human rights monitors in the field. The UK is the largest bilateral donor and has contributed £3 million since 1995 towards the cost of the operation. The UK also contributes through the European Union, which is funding 11 of the UN monitors, rising to 27 at the end of May.

In Burundi the first four UN monitors, funded by the European Union, were deployed in April 1996.

Land Mines

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance is being provided to (a) agencies involved in demining and (b) the victims of land mines; and if he will make a statement. [27697]

Mr. Hanley: Since April 1993, the ODA has funded mine clearing operations totalling nearly £17 million, including the UK share of European Community-funded projects. Details of these commitments have been placed in the Library of the House.

We recognise the need for both post-trauma and longer-term assistance to land mine victims. We support medical care and rehabilitation through contributions to the International Committee of the Red Cross and non-governmental organisations. Longer-term needs to promote self-help and economic independence are addressed through country development programmes.

Vector-borne Diseases (Iraq)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of vector-borne diseases in Iraq with particular reference to (a) malaria and (b) visceral leishmaniasis. [27764]

Mr. Hanley: We have not been invited to undertake an assessment of either malaria or visceral leishmaniasis in Iraq. An intensive spraying programme in northern Iraq, funded by the European Community, led to a dramatic decrease in malaria, from 65,000 cases in 1994 to 38,000 in 1995. No deaths have been reported. We understand that there are sufficient stocks of insecticide for 1996. Available information suggests that there was a decrease in leishmaniasis between 1992 and 1994—the last year for which we have information.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Coal Stocks

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what tonnages of stockpiled coal are presently held by (a) Powergen, (b) National Power, (c) Scottish Power, (d) British Steel and (e) private mine owners. [27301]

Mr. Page: Latest available data are for the end of February 1996 when stocks of coal held by electricity generators totalled 7,413,000 tonnes, stocks at coke ovens totalled 1,155,000 tonnes, and stocks at collieries and opencast sites totalled 5,984,000 tonnes. Figures for individual companies are commercially sensitive and cannot be disclosed.

Fireworks

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to change existing legislation regarding the sale of aerial shell fireworks to the public. [27299]

Mr. John M. Taylor: On 28 March, I announced that my Department would be undertaking a comprehensive review of the voluntary and legislative measures dealing with the availability of fireworks to the public. The review will consider, among other issues, the current classification system of fireworks including the treatment of aerial shells. My Department will seek views from a wide range of interested organisations during the summer and I will then consider possible was in which the current measures might be improved.

Industrial Death and Retirement Fund

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade,if he will place in the Library copies of the documentation held by his Department relating to the industrial death and retirement fund. [28888]

Mr. Page: British Coal remains liable to meet all entitlements under the industrial death and retirement scheme—which closed in January 1995. I understand that the chairman has written to the hon. Member previously explaining British Coal's disclosure practice and, given the essentially commercial nature of the arrangements, it would not be appropriate to make these papers more generally available.

Telecommunications Industry (Intellectual Property)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the letter of 19 February from the Under-Secretary of State for Science and Technology, what action he is taking in European Telecommunications Standards Institute for the publication of the de facto standards in relation to intellectual property in the telecommunications industry; and if he will make a statement. [27933]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The European Telecommunications Standards Institute is the main body in Europe producing telecommunications standards. It has a membership of some 30 Governments and 370 private and public telecommunications companies.

DTI officials have held various elected positions in the institute and in this capacity have been pursuing the idea that ETSI should be ready to publish not only its own standards but those that are drafted elsewhere, including de facto standards. This concept was agreed last year and incorporated in ETSI's new rules of procedure on 19 April this year.

Such publication should ensure that essential intellectual property is available on fair and non-discriminatory terms. The publication of a particular de facto standard depends though on the willingness of the originator to submit it for publication in this way and it is too early to say whether this will, in fact, be widely accepted.

Energy Council

Mr. Day: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the outcome of the EC Energy Council held on 7 May. [28845]

Mr. Eggar: The Council considered several issues and received reports on matters of interest. I represented the UK.

The Council made some limited progress on electricity market liberalisation. Ministers agreed the broad framework for opening up electricity markets to competition and undertook to continue discussions on the extent and pace of market opening. I hope that we can make further progress in the coming weeks with a view to reaching a final decision at at an extraordinary Council meeting before the end of the Italian Presidency.

The Council also reached political agreement on the key elements of the Commission's proposal for a second programme, aimed at encouraging best use of energy efficiency technology which will help reduce CO_2 emissions. A five-year programme with a budget of 45 mecu was agreed.

The Council reached agreement on a resolution on the European energy policy White Paper. Broadly, this invites the Commission to continue its existing activities in the energy field; to organise co-operation on energy policy objectives and energy studies; to report on transparency measures and to present proposals from the indicative work programme on the basis of existing treaties and competences.

Also, the Council agreed conclusions on a Commission report on gas supply and prospects. These invite the Commission to continue to examine the issues raised in the report, bring forward proposals if necessary and report back to the Council in two years' time.

Council conclusions were agreed on the energy aspects of the Barcelona Euro-Mediterranean conference which identified energy as having a pivotal role in economic co-operation especially in terms of investment and the activities of companies in extending networks. The conclusions look forward to a conference of energy ministers in Trieste on 8 to 9 June—preceded by a day involving the industry on 7 June—to discuss possible participation in the energy charter treaty, implementation of trans-european energy projects and definition of priorities for future action.

The Council held a discussion on the SYNERGY proposal which involves a multi-annual financial support programme over five years to help non-member countries in the definition, formulation and implementation of energy policy. Work on this dossier will continue.

In addition, the Council received presentations from the Commission on its reports on civil protection, tourism and energy, as requested by declaration 1 to the treaty of the European Union, and on the oil supply and refining markets as well as progress reports on the energy charter treaty and the draft directive on integrated resource planning.

Mid-Kent Holdings Plc

Dame Peggy Fenner: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will maintain the legal undertakings given by General Utilities plc to the then President of Board of Trade in March 1991 regarding its interests in Mid-Kent Holdings. [29155]

Mr. John M. Taylor: General Utilities gave undertakings to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 21 March 1991. Since then, no decision has been made to vary the undertakings or to release General Utilities from them. The undertakings therefore remain legally binding.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the effects on the Government's competition policy of the judgment of Mr. Justice Knox in the Chancery Division of the High Court in the case of Mid-Kent Holdings plc delivered on 30 April; and if he will make a statement. [29007]

Mr. Taylor: I will study carefully the judgment given by Mr. Justice Knox in the above case. It would, however, be inappropriate for me to give a view on whether and to what extent the Government's competition policy affected this judgment.

Business Links

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list (a) the names, (b) the dates of report and (c) the dates of publication of each departmental study of business links; and if he will make a statement. [28534]

Mr. Page: The main departmental studies on business links that have been carried out so far are:

DTI: Evaluation of Business Link; Report by KPMG Peat Marwick; published in April 1994

Evaluation of Business Links; Report by Ernst and Young; published in February 1996

The Government have an on-going programme of assessing business links. This includes gathering quarterly monitoring information, measuring the awareness perceptions and use of business links by businesses through bi-annual surveys and assessing the quality of information and services received by business through a mystery shopper exercise. In addition, we plan to carry out further evaluation studies of businesses links later this year and in 1997.

Biotechnological Inventions (Legal Protection)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the EU draft directive on legal protection of biotechnological inventions. [29002]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Commission's proposal for an EC directive on the legal protection of biotechnological inventions is the subject of explanatory memorandum 4519/96 submitted on 4 March 1996 and available in the Library of the House.

The proposal is currently under discussion before the Council. A first opinion of the European Parliament is not expected until this autumn.

AEA Technology Restructuring Fund

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total amount allocated by the Government to the AEA Technology restructuring fund up to 31 March to prepare the company for privatisation. [29000]

Mr. Eggar: Until 31 March 1996, AEA Technology was a division of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority. In respect of UKAEA restructuring, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the President of Board of Trade, on 6 February 1996, Official Report, columns 144–45, which provides the most recent information on funding. Restructuring of UKAEA has been going on since the late 1980s and reflects the changing role of the authority and changes in its external business environment.

Global Free Trade

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action he is proposing to pursue the goal of global free trade. [28913]

Mr. Nelson: The Government envisage three main stages in the pursuit of global free trade. First, the ministerial meeting of the World Trade Organisation in Singapore in December 1996 should set in train a comprehensive work programme to carry forward the process of liberalisation, building on the achievements of the Uruguay round. Secondly, a new multilateral negotiating round should be launched in the WTO before the end of the decade, to be concluded and implemented early in the next century. Thirdly, the WTO should set itself a firm date for achieving the ultimate goal of global free trade by 2020. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade set out his views on these issues in a speech given to the British American Chamber of Commerce on 30 April, a copy of which I have arranged to be placed in the Library of the House.

Business Link Network Ltd.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is (a) the DTI's involvement with and (b) the status of the Business Link Network Ltd. [28746]

Mr. Page: The Business Link Network Ltd. has recently been established by the business links national partners, including the TEC National Council, British chambers of commerce, the National Federation of Enterprise Agencies and local authority associations, to provide a range of practical support services to help business links to deliver a better service to the business community. Plans include the bulk purchase of insurance and other common services, dissemination of good practice and the development of a national business link presence on the Internet.

The DTI is in discussion with the Business Link Network Ltd. about possible areas for collaboration.

Scottish and Newcastle Breweries

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on how many occasions in the last two years he has received communications from hon. Members relating to the interests of Scottish and Newcastle Breweries. [29233]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade and ministerial colleagues have answered 23 separate letters or parliamentary questions, all of which relate to the acquisition by Scottish and Newcastle of Courage and the new company formed after the merger, Scottish Courage. In addition, three early-day motions were tabled and an Adjournment debate was held in January 1996.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Mature Students

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people aged 65 years or over were engaged in full or part-time education in (a) 1990 and (b) the latest year for which information is available; and what percentage each represents of the relevant age group. [28127]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 7 May 1996]: The figures are given in the tables.

Students aged 65 and over, 1990–91 and 1994–95, England

	1990–91	1994–95
Higher education	8,127	11,782
Open University	n/a	2,441
Further education	165,000	122,000

Participation rate: percentage of population aged 65 and over

	1990–91	1994–95
Higher education	0.1	0.2
Open University	n/a	0.0
Further education	2.2	1.6
Total	2.3	1.8

A considerable number of people aged 65 and over attend adult education centres; no estimate is available. The decrease in numbers in further education since 1990–91 is due mainly to fewer students taking non-examinable courses; the number enrolled for examinable courses has increased sharply.
n/a not available.

Assisted Places Scheme

Sir Alan Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will extend the assisted places scheme to schools catering exclusively for children with special educational needs. [28350]

Mrs. Gillan: We have no present plans to do so, but are keeping the matter under review.

Statemented Pupils

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list by local education authority (a) the total number and (b) the percentage of pupils who are currently statmented. [28523]

Mrs. Gillan: The latest available information is shown in the table:

[1] Pupils with a statement of special education needs expressed as a percentage of the school population.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list by local education authority the number and percentage of currently statemented pupils statemented at (a) key stage 1 and (b) key stage 2. [28525]

Mrs. Gillan: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list by local education authority the amount per special educational needs pupils spent on special needs education in 1995–96. [28524]

Mrs. Gillan: The data collected centrally identify expenditure on statemented pupils and on special schools, but do not identify separately expenditure on other forms of provision for special educational needs.

Mr. Havey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list by local education authority the percentage of currently statemented pupils who are statemented for (a) physical disability and (b) severe learning difficulties. [28526]

Mrs. Gillan: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Teacher Training

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was (a) the target for 1996 and (b) the actual intake for primary teacher training in 1995. [28587]

Mr. Robin Squire: The primary target for England for 1996–97 is 11,500. The actual intake to primary teacher training in 1995–96 was 13,601.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what amended orders she proposes to lay arising from the recommendations contained in the 15th report of the Joint Committee on Statutory Instruments (HC 34-xv, HL 60 of Session 1995–96); and what is her timetable for laying these orders. [28628]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 10 May 1996]: The 15th report of the Joint Committee on Statutory Instruments refers to two sets of regulations made by the Department, the Education (Grants for Nursery Education) (England) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/353, and the Education (Grants for Education Support and Training: Nursery Education) (England) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/235.

In the case of SI 1996/353, the Committee, after calling for two memorandums from the Department, determined not to draw the special attention of both Houses to the regulations. In the case of SI 1996/235, the Committee drew the special attention of both Houses to the regulations on the ground that they included two provisions which referred to provisions in another instrument rather than setting the provisions out in full. Since the instrument is unambiguous and contains no error, it does not call for amendment. The Department therefore does not propose to lay any amending regulations arising from this report but will bear in mind the Joint Committee's views on drafting in future.

Expulsion

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance she has issued on the grounds which are justifiable for the expulsion of a child from school; and if she will make a statement. [28977]

Mr. Robin Squire: Guidance was issued by the Department in May 1994 to heads, governing bodies and local education authorities on the proper use of exclusion. It indicated that exclusion should be used sparingly—as a last resort—in response to serious breaches of school policy or law.

Competitiveness and Deregulation Policy

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the implications of her competitiveness and deregulation policy for job prospects in the United Kingdom in relation to those in other EU countries. [27678]

Mr. Forth: International evidence shows that keeping regulation to a necessary minimum allows employers to create a diverse pattern of jobs, giving workers greater choice in when and how to work. This leads to more people in employment. The latest available figures indicate that, in 1994, the UK had a higher proportion of its population of working age in employment than any other major EU member state.

Interview Expenses

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what assessment has been made by her Department of the impact of lengthening the qualifying period for the payment of expenses for attending job interviews; and what assessment has been made of the benefits of the scheme; [29003]

(2) how much her Department has spent in each of the last three years in meeting the expenses incurred by unemployed people in attending job interviews; and how much her Department expects to save as a result of recent changes in the unemployment qualifying period for the payments of travelling expenses for attending job interviews. [29004]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked for him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 13 May 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions to her about the payment of expenses for attending job interviews. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

The ES provides financial assistance to unemployed people attending job interviews beyond their normal daily travelling distance through the Travel to Interview Scheme (TIS).

The performance of TIS is assessed on a regular basis to provide information which will improve the effectiveness of the scheme in helping unemployed people back into work. Management information is collected quarterly to monitor the operation of the programme and latest figures show that in 1995–96 the scheme helped 46,810 people with travel costs.

A full evaluation of TIS has also been carried out. This examined, in more detail, various aspects of the operation and impact of the programme. The evaluation was not designed to assess the impact of lengthening the qualifying period for payment. However, the report does contain some information about the impact of TIS on people with different unemployment durations. If you would like to see the full detail of this study, copies can be obtained through the House of Commons library.

Over the last three financial years the cost of meeting the expenses incurred by unemployed clients to attend job interviews have been.

1993–94 £1.79 million enabling 50,373 interviews

1994–95 £1.8 million enabling 51,140 interviews

1995–96 £1.7 million enabling 46,810 interviews

As the figures show, the demand for TIS has fallen over the last 12 months. However, we will not be able to compare savings made through the introduction of the 13 week measures until we have collected statistics at the end of June and compared them with the corresponding quarter last year. I will write to you again in August when that comparison has been carried out.

I hope this is helpful.

Objective 4 Status

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the amount of money which would be available to British firms (a) in total, (b) with fewer than 100 employees, (c) with fewer than 50 employees and (d) with fewer than 10 employees, from the European Union if Britain had applied for objective 4 status.[28748]

Mr. Forth: The amount of support available under any objectives depends on the terms of the programme, which is agreed with the Commission in respect of that objective. Since the Government have not negotiated such an agreement in relation to objective 4, it is impossible to estimate which firms would be eligible.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the number of British firms (a) in total, (b) with fewer than 100 employees, (c) with fewer than 50 employees and (d) with fewer than 10 employees, which would be eligible for European Union aid under objective 4.[28749]

Mr. Forth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave earlier.

Education Council

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the outcome of the Council of EC Education Ministers held on 6 May. [29513]

Mr. Forth: On 6 May, the Council of EC Education Ministers adopted conclusions on the European Commission White Paper "Teaching and Learning: Towards the Learning Society" and held a public debate on this topic. The Council also adopted conclusions on the synergies between academic recognition and professional recognition of qualifications within the community and a resolution on multimedia educational software.

Ministers received information from the European Commission on the assessment of quality of higher and non-higher education; the European Year of Lifelong learning; co-operation with third countries; the progress of work on the forthcoming Commission green paper on obstacles to mobility; and the Commission publication "Key Data on Education in the European Union 1995". Ministers received a communication from the Greek delegation about the proposed European centre classical literature and were briefed by the presidency on the outcome of the conference on "Cultural Diversity and Social Integration" held in Turin on 11 to 13 April 1996.

A copy of the official minutes of the Council will be placed in the Library when they become available.

School Security

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she will publish the report of the working group on school security. [29514]

Mr. Robin Squire: The report will be published tomorrow morning, and I shall place copies in the Library.

Footballers' Work Permits

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the outcome of her recent discussions with the football authorities in respect of the issue of work permits to footballers from other countries (a) entering the United Kingdom to play for a British Club and (b) being transferred between British Clubs; and if she will make a statement. [22383]

Mrs. Gillan: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Bassetlaw (Mr. Ashton) on 18 March 1996, Official Report, column 37.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Archdeacons

37. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, how many (a) male and (b) female archdeacons are currently paid by the Church Commissioners; at what stipend and emoluments; and if he will make a statement. [27704]

Mr. Alison: Most archdeacons receive their stipend from money raised by their diocese which is paid through the commissioners' payroll. At the end of April 1996, there were 104 male archdeacons and one female archdeacon on the payroll. The stipend recommended by the Church Commissioners, as Central Stipends Authority, is £20,860 per annum.

Investment Income and Expenditure

39. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, if he will make a statement on the Church Commissioners' investment income and expenditure in 1995. [27706]

Mr. Alison: The commissioners' investment income in 1995 was £137 million, a yield of 6.1 per cent. compared with 6.2 per cent. in 1994 based on the WM All Funds' independent assessment of our performance. This reduction is a consequence of rebalancing the portfolio by reducing property and gilts and increasing equities. Total return—that is, income plus capital growth—was 19.5 per cent. compared to the WM All Funds' benchmark of 19.1 per cent.

Expenditure was £143 million. The two main items of expenditure were £77 million for clergy pensions, which are currently paid in full by the commissioners, and £42 million for clergy stipends.

TRANSPORT

Sea Empress Incident

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the report on the damage suffered by the Sea Empress to be made available to the marine accident investigation branch; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [28903]

Mr. Norris: The marine accident investigation branch will be conducting its own assessment of the damage to the Sea Empress. The vessel has only just become available for inspection following the cleaning operation in dry dock in Belfast and MAIB's findings will form part of its report into the accident and salvage operation. The MAIB report will be published and copies will be placed in the Library.

Heavy Goods Vehicle Licences

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provisions apply to people suffering from insulin dependent diabetes in respect of holding HGV licences; and if he will make a statement. [28596]

Mr. Norris: People with diabetes subject to insulin treatment are prohibited from holding a large goods vehicle driver's licence, with the exception of certain drivers who already held such a licence on 1 April 1991.

Foamix

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the application of R. J. Maxwell Ltd. for accreditation of its product Foamix to be formally approved by the Highways Authorities and Utilities Committee. [28953]

Mr. Watts: This matter is due to be discussed at the next meeting of the full committee on 16 May. I shall write to my hon. Friend advising him of the outcome.

WALES

Milford Haven

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he received a request from the Countryside Council for Wales to issue a holding direction on the application by Milford Haven port authority to construct a jetty to import orimulsion and limestone for Pembroke power station; and if he will make a statement. [29196]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The request was received on 15 April and is being considered, along with requests that the application be called in.

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the European regional development fund projects approved under the Rural Wales 5b programme in 1995–96, indicating in each case their total eligible costs, the grant originally allocated to each project, the date each sponsor was informed of the actual grant available and how much grant was spent by 31 March. [28950]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Under the objective 5(b) rural Wales single programming document 1994–1999, 250 projects had been approved to receive European regional development fund grant assistance by 31 March 1996. The lists of selected projects and estimated individual grant amounts were published in Welsh Office press notices dated 24 August 1995, 5 February 1996 and 18 March 1996 and copies are available in the Library of the House. ERDF grant totalling around £36.7 million had been committed on projects with estimated eligible costs of £131.6 million, of which £5.8 million grant has been paid on expenditure up to 31 January 1996. The dates on which approval letters were issued will vary in each individual case.

European Funding

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the European regional development fund projects approved under the Leader II programme in 1995–96, indicating in each case their total eligible costs, the grant originally allocated to each project, the date each sponsor was informed of the actual grant available and how much grant was spent by 31 March; [28948]

(2) if he will list the total grant aid available for European regional development fund projects under Leader II and Rural Wales 5b programmes and European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund projects under Leader II and Rural Wales 5b programmes in 1995–96 from the Welsh Development Agency; if he will indicate the budget for these programmes from the Welsh Development Agency in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement; [28952]

(3) if he will list the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund projects approved under the Leader II programme in 1995–96, indicating in each case their total eligible costs, the grant originally allocated to each project, the date each sponsor was informed of the actual grant available and how much grant was spent by 31 March. [28951]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund projects approved under the rural Wales programme in 1995–96, indicating in each case their total eligible costs, the grant originally allocated to each project, the date each sponsor was informed of the actual grant available and how much grant was spent by 31 March. [28947]

Mr. Jones: Under the objective 5(b) rural Wales single programming document 1994–1999, 52 projects had been approved to receive European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund grant assistance by March 1996. The lists of selected projects and estimated individual grant amounts were published in Welsh Office press notices dated 24 August 1995 and 5 February 1996 and copies are available in the Library of the House. EAGGF grant totalling around £6.09 million had been committed on projects with estimated eligible costs of £14.4 million, of which £1.07 million grant has been paid on expenditure up to 31 January 1996. The dates on which approval letters were issued will vary in each individual case.

Weather Data

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will place a copy of the weather data from the Countryside Council for Wales meteorological station at Deer park, Marloes, Pembrokeshire, for February in the Library; [29171]

(2) if he will place a copy of the weather data from the Countryside Council of Wales wave rider buoy in St. Bride's bay, for February in the Library. [29172]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I will arrange for copies to be placed in the Library of the House as soon as possible.

Rural Wales Projects

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the total grant in aid available from the Welsh Development Agency to projects in rural Wales in 1995–96 and the budget allocated for similar projects in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [28949]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Development Agency's programmes support economic development throughout the whole of the agency's area; with the exception of the specific rural development programme expenditure in rural and non-rural areas is not identified separately. The agency's specific rural development programme budget for 1995–96 was £6.8 million with a forecast outturn of £6.0 million; the budget for 1996–97 is £2.5 million but, in addition, there is significant expenditure in rural areas through the main property and environmental capital programmes and support for the encouragement of businesses.

Rate Relief Scheme

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his proposals for a new rate relief scheme targeted on general stores and post offices in villages, as announced in the White Paper, "A Working Countryside for Wales". [29511]

Mr. Hague: The consultation paper I have published today sets out the proposals I promised in the White Paper "A Working Countryside for Wales" to help sustain village shops and post offices.

These proposals will provide significant help to the small general stores and post offices which are a feature of village life and which provide an invaluable service to local people. Many small general stores and post offices will in future be entitled to at least 50 per cent. relief on their business rates. Local authorities will have discretion to top this up to 100 per cent. Local authorities will also have wide discretion to reduce the rates bills of other rural businesses, thereby helping to safeguard rural communities and preserve the fabric of village life.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

EU Documents

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Lord President of the Council at which public libraries explanatory memorandums relating to documents considered by the Council of the European Community are regularly deposited; and by what other means members of the public are currently advised of the publication of such memorandums. [27118]

Mr. Newton: Explanatory memorandums are regularly deposited with four depository libraries in the United Kingdom. These are the lending and reference divisions of the British Library in Wetherby and London, the City of Westminster central reference library, and the Liverpool and District scientific, industrial and research library. Explanatory memorandums can also be obtained direct from Government Departments. Members of the public may obtain advice and information about European Union matters, including where to obtain copies of explanatory memorandums, through the national network of public information relays established throughout the United Kingdom by the European Commission. This includes European information centres, European documentation centres, European reference centres, public library authorities as well as a number of national organisations including the Local Government Information Bureau, the Confederation of British Industry, the Trades Union Congress and citizens' advice bureaux.

Drugs Strategy

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Lord President of the Council what progress has been made in implementing the Government's "Tackling Drugs Together" strategy; and if he will make a statement. [28989]

Mr. Newton: The Government's drugs strategy for England for the period 1995–98, "Tackling Drugs Together", was published on 10 May 1995. While fully maintaining the emphasis on law enforcement and reducing supply, the strategy recognises the need for stronger action on reducing the demand for illegal drugs. Separate action is under way in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, consistent with the strategy for England, but tailored to the particular circumstances in those countries.

Some 49 tasks were set for Government Departments and statutory agencies in implementing the strategy during 1995–96. All have been undertaken and, where appropriate, completed. In particular:

- all police forces are publishing drugs strategies which combine law enforcement, demand reduction and partnership measures;
- research into the nature and incidence of drug-related crime is underway;
- HM Customs and Excise has reviewed its anti-drugs effort, and resources allocated to its investigation and intelligence work has been increased;
- the National Criminal Intelligence Service has reviewed its operations and is working more closely with the police and Customs;
- co-operation between the police and Customs has been enhanced, with performance indicators set for 1996–97 covering the full range of drugs law enforcement—and, for the first time, a joint press conference announced collective results in 1995;
- each probation service is developing a drugs strategy in line with guidance from the Home Office and Association of Chief Officers of Probation;
- all prison establishments have developed local drugs strategies—focusing on supply control, demand reduction and treatment—in line with the national strategy, using trained multi-disciplinary teams of staff;
- mandatory drug testing has been successfully implemented in all prison establishments;
- a first phase of drug treatment pilot schemes, involving 22 prisons, has been introduced;
- practical guidelines for local criminal justice drug prevention programmes have been issued for consultation—six collaborative projects are putting the guidelines into practice;
- funding of £5.9 million has delivered 16 innovative drug education projects and enhanced teacher training;
- guidance on managing drug-related incidents and drug education has been sent to all schools, with local policies being developed accordingly;
- information about drug education teaching materials and resources has been made available to schools;
- the Office for Standards in Education is monitoring the response by schools and others, including specific studies of drugs education and the contribution of the youth service to drugs prevention;
- consultations with further and higher education bodies have been undertaken to encourage effective prevention, counselling and support services;
- a three year national publicity campaign targeted at young people and parents run by the Health Education Authority, costing £5 million a year, has been launched;
- an increasing number of private companies have become involved in working nationally and locally on drugs prevention;
- £1.1 million has been used on 40 projects for early intervention services for young people at risk of drug misuse;
- a review of substance misuse services for young people has been published by the Health Advisory Service;

the consultation phase on improving the health and safety of young people at clubs and other venues is nearing completion;

a four-year work programme has been agreed for the drugs prevention initiative; the 24-hour free national drugs helpline service has answered 192,755 calls in its first year;

a national drugs information strategy is being developed, in consultation with the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs and other bodies;

the effectiveness review on effective and appropriate treatments reported to Ministers and has now been published, with work in hand to provide guidance to purchasers in the light of the review and other recent findings; shared care arrangements for drug misusers between primary and secondary health care providers have been reviewed by all health authorities; contacts have been made with medical and nursing professional and statutory bodies to improve staff training and education.

At regional and local level, the main action has been the establishment of 105 drug action teams across England, and their local community networks—drug reference groups. All teams were established by 30 September 1995, and I agreed all their action plans for 1996–97 and 1997–98 by the beginning of April. Every team comprises senior professionals from the relevant health and local authorities, and police, probation, and (where appropriate) prison services. Some teams also include voluntary sector, business and Customs representatives. All are seeking to encourage these and other groups to engage in practical work to tackle drug misuse on the ground. A digest of examples, drawn from the first action plans, has been published to help on this.

To assist in assessing the effectiveness of the strategy as it develops, baseline information on the key performance indicators set out in "Tackling Drugs Together" is now being collected. The significance of these indicators—and others locally—will be their trends over time. The immense commitment to tackling drug misuse which has been shown across the country—especially among drug action teams—is already very encouraging. The Government will continue to support this work as a high priority, both through the central drugs co-ordination unit and in other ways.

Ulster University

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many new students were enrolled in Ulster university in the present academic year; how many of these students came from the Republic of Ireland; if the enrolment of new students was within the agreed numerical limit; and what assessment he has made of the consequences of this year's enrolment rates for enrolment of new students in the next academic year. [28048]

Mr. Ancram: The number of new full-time under-graduate students enrolled at the university of Ulster in the present academic year was 4,801 of whom 854 were domiciled in the Republic of Ireland.

The limit—maximum aggregate student number MASN—which the university is required to observe is on its total enrolment of award-holding students. There is no specific control on the enrolment of new students. In 1995–96, the MASN was exceeded by 558 students. For the university to remain within its MASN in the next academic year, it will have to make an adjustment to its intakes commensurate with last year's excess.

Carryduff Primary School

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the enrolment in each of the past five years at Carryduff primary school; what is the expected enrolment at the school in each of the next five years; what proposals there are to provide additional accommodation and teaching staff at the school; how many places in primary one will be available in the next academic year; how many applicants there are for places in primary one at the school for the next academic year; and if he will make a statement. [28080]

Mr. Ancram: The enrolment in each of the past five years are in the table.

Year	Number of pupils enrolled
1991–92	293 (at January 1991)
1992–93	280 (at October 1992)
1993–94	279 (at October 1993)
1994–95	281 (at October 1994)
1995–96	293 (at October 1995)

It is not possible to project accurately an enrolment figure for each of the next five years. The Department has approved an enrolment number of 333 for the 1996–97 school year.

Accommodation issues at the school are a matter for the South-Eastern education and library board and there are no proposals to provide additional accommodation. The provision of additional teaching staff is a matter for the board of governors of the school.

My Department has approved a temporary variation to the school's admissions number to 55 for the 1996–97 school year. The school has received 55 applications.

Civil Evidence Act 1995

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when section 10 of the Civil Evidence Act 1995 will be brought into effect in Northern Ireland. [28437]

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave the hon. Member for North Antrim (Rev. Ian Paisley) on 20 March 1996, Official Report, column 199.

European Union Flag

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to fly the European Union flag in Northern Ireland on European day; and if he will make a statement. [28458]

Sir John Wheeler: The Government have no formal plans to fly the European flag in Northern Ireland on 8 May.

SCOTLAND

Sludge, Garrock Head

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what results have been obtained by the marine laboratory in Aberdeen from its survey of sludge dumped at Garrock Head; what evidence of the effect of polychlorinated biphenyls, DDT or Dieldrin in the food chain has been evaluated; what action he has taken or will take to deal with the problems arising; and if he will make a statement. [28100]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department's marine laboratory in Aberdeen regularly monitors contaminant levels at Garroch Head. All results of this monitoring programme are published or are available for public inspection. Fish analyses show that detected levels of contamination are well below internationally agreed limits. The marine laboratory's monitoring programme will continue up to and beyond 1998, when sewage sludge dumping in UK waters will cease.

Ayrshire Child Abuse Case

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the judgment of Sheriff Miller made at Ayr sheriff court on 25 April on the reduction requested by the Scottish Legal Aid Board in the fees charged by lawyers in the Ayrshire child abuse case, insofar as it relates to public money involved. [28296]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Proceedings on 25 April were held in private and details of the decision by Sheriff Miller were made available only to the parties to the action. I understand that the chief executive of SLAB will make the decision available to the hon. Member very shortly.

Physiotherapy

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many people qualified as physiotherapists in each year since 1990; [28206]

(2) which regions no longer provide funding for clinical education placements for physiotherapists. [28207]

(3) how many placements were available for physiotherapy students for each year since 1990. [28208]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not held centrally.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many physiotherapists there were in (a) general practices and (b) hospitals, in each health board area, in each of the last two years. [28210]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information available centrally is shown in the tables.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Up-to-date information as requested is not yet available centrally. Information on vacancy levels at 31 March 1996 is being sought from NHS trusts in Scotland.

Speech and Language Therapists

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of speech and language therapists at each grade for spine points 23 to 27 in each of the past five years. [28444]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not available centrally.

Strathclyde Police

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 29 April, Official Report, column 376, relating to Strathclyde police (1) if he will list those individuals in the criminal justice system involved in the investigation outwith Strathclyde police; [29012]

(2) how many witnesses in relation to the allegations have been interviewed by Strathclyde police; and how many (a) cautions and (b) charges resulted; [29014]

(3) what instructions have been issued by Crown counsel regarding the conduct of the inquiry; [29011]

(4) on what date the decision was made by Strathclyde police and the regional prosecutor that the inquiry would be internal. [29013]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate has confirmed that it would be wholly inappropriate to give details of those individuals involved in this investigation or of the instructions given by Crown counsel. As I stated in my reply to a question from the hon. Member on 29 April, column 376, it would also be inappropriate to disclose details of the investigation. The Lord Advocate has confirmed, however, that no charges have been brought against any person. The regional procurator fiscal decided on 2 June 1995 that an investigation should be conducted by Strathclyde police. Crown counsel was aware of this decision, which has been kept under review.

Commercial Premises Valuation Appeals

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was in each (a) former regional and island council and (b) unitary council area in Scotland the total number of appeals lodged against valuation of commercial premises, the number and percentage of appeals which so far have been dealt with, the number and percentage of appeals which so far have been (i) successful and (ii) unsuccessful, and the average amount of time taken to deal with a valuation appeal for each council area. [28630]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 10 May 1996]: From 31 March 1996, detailed quarterly information on the progress of appeals against valuation is being collected from assessors for each valuation area, or valuation joint board area. The available information, on the progress of appeals up to 31 March 1996, is given in table 1. This shows numbers and progress of appeals in relation to the 1995 revaluation, and also of inter-revaluation appeals.

Information is also being collected from assessors on the number and progress of appeals in relation to the 1995 revaluation for properties in each unitary council area. The available information, on the progress of appeals up to 31 March 1996, is given in table 2.

Detailed information is not collected on the time taken to process each appeal. Overall, almost 9 per cent. of appeals and complaints lodged with assessors against the 1995 revaluation were dealt with by 31 March 1996, which is within 15 weeks of 15 December 1995, the date by which such appeals had to be lodged. All appeals arising from the 1996 revaluation have to be dealt with by 31 March 1998 under the terms of the Valuation Timetable (Scotland) Order 1995.

DEFENCE

Louise Jensen (Killing)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Her Majesty's Government will pay the defence costs of the appeals by the three British military personnel against sentence and conviction for the manslaughter of a Danish tour guide in Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [28598]

Mr. Soames: The Army legal aid scheme will continue to pay the legal expenses of the three British service men convicted of the manslaughter of Miss Louise Jensen until all legal processes have been exhausted.

Refit Contracts

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those refit contracts that have been undertaken at (a) Rosyth and (b) Devonport as part of their core allocated programmes since 1994; and what has been the average cost per man hour to public funds for each contract. [29057]

Mr. Arbuthhnot: The following core refits have been completed since 1 April 1994:

at Rosyth: HM ships Berkeley, Leeds Castle, Gloucester, Ledbury, Orkney, York, Shetland, Edinburgh, Dumbarton Castle and Cattistock; and at Devonport: HM ships Illustrious, Battleaxe, London, Bulldog, Trafalgar and Herald.

Information relating to labour costs is commercially confidential.

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list for (a) Rosyth and (b) Devonport dockyards, the refit contracts that have been provisionally allocated as part of their core allocated programmes and the projected starting date for each contract; [28058]

(2) if he will list those Royal Navy ships and submarines that will require refits before the year 2002 and be the subject of competitive tendering; and what is the estimated time period and cost of each contract. [28059]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The refit programme continues to be governed by the principles announced by my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Edinburgh, Pentlands (Mr. Rifkind) on 24 June 1993, Official Report, columns 447–50 in an oral statement. It is not our practice to release information relating to the future movements of vessels, including their refit start dates. Individual refits will continue to be announced either at the time their allocation is confirmed, for those in the core programme, or at the outset of competition for those in the unallocated programme.

United States Air Force

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will release the correspondence between Her Majesty's Government and the United States Administration under which facilities in the United Kingdom are made available to the United States air force; and if he will make a statement. [29072]

Mr. Soames: Facilities are made available for use by United States forces in accordance with the NATO status of forces agreement of 1951 and confidential arrangements between the Governments of the United Kingdom and of the United States of America. It is not our practice to disclose the details of such arrangements.

RAF Menwith Hill

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what legal process was involved in designating RAF Menwith Hill; on what date this change of name took effect; how many RAF personnel are stationed at RAF Menwith Hill; what is the role and function at the base of the senior RAF officer; who is the base commander; who is accountable to the senior RAF officer; to whom he is accountable; and if he will make a statement. [29073]

Mr. Soames: Menwith Hill is a Crown freehold site belonging to the Ministry of Defence. The designation RAF Menwith Hill came into effect on 19 February 1996. This was simply an administrative change to bring the base into line with other RAF sites made available by the Ministry of Defence to the United States Government.

The senior RAF representative at the base is the RAF commander whose role is to provide advice to the base commander, who is the senior US officer on the site, on a range of UK policy and protocol matters. He is also responsible for liaising with the local community.

The RAF commander has the status, disciplinary powers and responsibilities of a commanding officer in respect of all RAF personnel and in respect of civilians—except the Ministry of Defence police—employed by the MOD at the site. However, it is not our policy to give details of personnel assignment. As a serving RAF officer, the RAF commander is responsible to the higher command of the Royal Air Force, which in this instance is exercised through the air officer commanding directly administered units at HQ strike command, High Wycombe.

Territorial Army

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if members of the Territorial Army called up for service in Bosnia were required to send home their civilian clothes and travelling bags from Bosnia at the start of their service. [27653]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 2 May 1996]: No policy instructions have been issued from the UK or in theatre which require personnel to send home their civilian clothing. I understand, however, that a few members of the Territorial Army have arrived in theatre with inappropriate civilian clothing. Storage space for personal effects is limited in Bosnia and in such circumstances the individual may well have been instructed to return unnecessary clothing to the UK. The guidance on civilian clothing given to the reservists about to deploy to Bosnia has been made more specific, so that the problem should not recur.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Israel-Lebanon Peace Settlement

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans Her Majesty's Government have to use their good offices to raise the issue of reparation payments for damage to property and infrastructure inflicted during the recent Israeli-Lebanese conflict as part of a peace settlement. [28562]

Mr. Hanley: Details of a peace settlement between Israel and Lebanon would be a matter for the two countries concerned. We are concerned by the scale of damage in Lebanon and are discussing Lebanese requests for reconstruction assistance with our EU partners.

Armed Conflict

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he intends to put forward at the Council of Foreign Ministers on 13 May to make the European Union more effective in preventing armed conflict (a) between and (b) within states. [28451]

Mr. David Davis: I shall not be putting forward any proposals about the EU's role in conflict prevention at the 13 May Foreign Affairs Council. The EU's role in conflict prevention in Africa was considered at the 25 March Foreign Affairs Council. Officials are currently examining detailed proposals. The UK plays a leading role in conflict prevention—through national action, through the EU's common foreign and security policy, and through other international organisations, in particular the UN.

Mr. Lashkar Singh Dhami

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contacts have been made with the Indian high commission in London, and the authorities in India, to establish the facts of the disappearance of Mr. Lashkar Singh Dhami since his arrival in Bombay on 7 May 1992, on British Airways flight No. 139. [28719]

Mr. Hanley: Our high commission in New Delhi and our deputy high commission in Bombay have made extensive inquiries of the Indian authorities in an attempt to trace Mr. Dhami. The latest contact was with the missing persons bureau of the Bombay criminal investigation department in January 1996. It is extremely disappointing that, as yet, there has been no trace of Mr. Dhami.

Our posts will continue to press the Indian authorities for the news of Mr. Dhami. However, they have no investigative role in cases of this nature. The proper channel is through Interpol. There has been no contact with the Indian high commission in London.

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the whereabouts of Mr. Lashkar Singh Dhami, who arrived in Bombay, India, on 7 May 1992, on British Airways flight No. 139. [28720]

Mr. Hanley: Despite extensive inquiries by our high commission in New Delhi and our deputy high commission in Bombay, there has been no trace of Mr. Dhami since his arrival in Bombay on 7 May 1992.

War Crimes Tribunal (The Hague)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the United Kingdom's contribution to the work of the war crimes tribunal in The Hague; and if he will make a statement. [28856]

Mr. Hanley: We have consistently demonstrated our support for the international criminal tribunal for the former Yugoslavia.

To date, we have donated £950,000 in assessed contributions to the tribunal. We have also given almost £500,000 in voluntary contributions to help fund the secondment of staff and to provide equipment.

European Court

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Her Majesty's Government will table proposals at the intergovernmental conference to limit the power of the European Court of Justice. [28916]

Mr. David Davis: I refer my right hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Colchester, South and Maldon (Mr. Whittingdale), on 3 April, Official Report, column 382.

North Atlantic Common Market

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has yet tabled proposals in (a) Brussels and (b) Washington to develop a common market of the north Atlantic. [28914]

Mr. Hanley: We have been at the forefront of European states pressing for the further liberalisation of trade with north America—in both Brussels and Washington. One of the priority elements of the EU/US action plan, which closely reflects the UK's ideas, is a joint study which will look at ways of reducing transatlantic barriers to trade and investment.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if it remains his policy to create a north Atlantic free trade area. [28931]

Mr. David Davis: As was made clear in the Queen's Speech of 15 November 1995, this Government "will continue to pursue the objective of transatlantic free trade in the context of world trade liberalisation".

Lebanon

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support the findings of the United Nations report on the shelling of the UN base at Qana. [28704]

Mr. Hanley: We welcome the publication of the UN's thorough report into the Qana bombing and the fact that it has been discussed in the Security Council. We have expressed in the Security Council and elsewhere our concern at the report's findings. We look to the Israelis to respond fully to it.

Taiwan (Environmental Damage)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has received concerning environmental degradation and pollution in Taiwan; and if he will make a statement. [28642]

Mr. Hanley: None. The environmental problems of Taiwan are primarily the responsibility of the authorities in Taiwan. Taiwan gross national product per capita in 1994 was US$ 11,604, which suggests Taiwan has the financial resources necessary to deal with its problems. Total reserves excluding gold at February 1996 stand at US$ 90.1 billion. British companies stand ready to supply the relevant expertise and equipment on a commercial basis.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action is being taken by the United Kingdom to help Taiwan tackle its environmental problems; and if he will make a statement. [28645]

Mr. Hanley: The environmental problems of Taiwan are primarily the responsibility of the authorities in Taiwan. Taiwan gross national product per capita in 1994 was US$ 11,604, which suggests Taiwan has the financial resources necessary to deal with its problems. Total reserves excluding gold at February 1996 stand at US$90.1 billion. British companies stand ready to supply the relevant expertise and equipment on a commercial basis.

British Council Budget

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Government have to help the British Council to cover the costs involved in restructuring following reductions in its budget. [28722]

Mr. Hanley: The possibility of the Government helping the British Council with some of its restructuring costs is being looked at the context of the studies currently being carried out with the aim of avoiding overseas post closures.

Sudan

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the recent elections in Sudan. [28884]

Mr. Hanley: Regrettably, the elections did not offer the Sudanese people a full choice. The opposition, whose parties remain banned, refused to take part. Government candidates were thus given a clear run. Observers also reported a number of flaws in the election organisation and procedures.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current state of relations between the United Kingdom and Sudan. [28883]

Mr. Hanley: Relations with Sudan remain cool. We are concerned at the Government of Sudan's prosecution of the civil war in Sudan, their appalling human rights record, their support to terrorist groups and their obstruction of the UN's Operation Lifeline Sudan relief operation. The UK voted for, and will implement, UN Security Council resolution 1054, which imposes diplomatic and visa sanctions on the Government of Sudan for their failure to hand over three suspects implicated in last year's assassination attempt on President Mubarak of Egypt and their support for terrorist groups.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the human rights situation in Sudan. [28885]

Mr. Hanley: We remain extremely concerned about human rights in Sudan. The continuing civil war in Sudan is a source of many serious abuses of human rights. We have received disturbing reports of slavery and genocide. The Sudanese authorities continue to detain activists without trial.

We welcome the Government of Sudan's agreement to resume co-operation with the UN special rapporteur, Gaspar Biro, and hope that they will facilitate his early visit to Sudan.

West Bank and Gaza Strip

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action his Department has taken to raise with the Israeli authorities the issue of access by international non-governmental organisation workers to the west bank and Gaza strip. [28721]

Mr. Hanley: We raised the specific cases of British non-governmental organisation workers with the Israeli authorities through our embassy in Tel Aviv. We also have pressed the Israeli Government at a senior level to relax the closure on the west bank and Gaza.

British Military Cemetery (Baghdad)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has had from the keeper of the British military cemetery in Baghdad about his need to grow vegetables to sustain his family within the cemetery grounds; and when the cemetery keeper was last paid by Her Majesty's Government. [27762]

Mr. Hanley: None. The Commonwealth War Graves Commission is responsible for the British military cemetery in Baghdad and for paying staff who work there.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the condition of the grave in the British military cemetery in Baghdad of the late Lieutenant-General Sir Stanley Maude, commander of the metropolitan expeditionary force. [27766]

Mr. Hanley: The Commonwealth War Graves Commission is responsible for the British military cemetery in Baghdad.

Food and Agriculture Organisation Report (Iraq)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evaluation he has made of the FAO report of 1995 on Iraq in relation to cereals, meat, fish and baby milk. [27763]

Mr. Hanley: We remain very concerned about the suffering of the Iraqi people. Our aid programme has a high priority, and we are working for implementation of UN Security Council resolution 986. We believe, though, that the 1995 report by the Food and Agriculture Organisation and the World Food Programme gave a seriously misleading picture of the situation in Iraq. The report did not take account of the misallocation of resources by the Iraqi regime. Further, the research methods were flawed—the statistics in the report were based in part on Iraqi data, which could not be independently confirmed. We have taken this up with the FAO and the WFP.

Sanctions (Iraq)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on UK policy to United Nations joint council resolution 986. [27765]

Mr. Hanley: We co-sponsored Security Council resolution 986 in April 1995 as a way of alleviating the suffering of the Iraqi people. The regime has since refused to co-operate. We hope that current discussions in New York will at last result in Iraq implementing the resolution. Meanwhile, UN sanctions must remain for as long as Saddam refuses to comply with Iraq's international obligations.

"Hundan Al Belgrano"

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received from (a) his Department's officials in Argentina, (b) other sources in Argentina and (c) Sir Sandy Woodward about the showing of the film "Hundan Al Belgrano"; and what responses he has sent. [27809]

Mr. Hanley: I have received only one report, from our embassy in Buenos Aires, to the effect that the film is now showing in one cinema in Buenos Aires.

Salman Rushdie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the work of the European Union delegation which visited Iran to discuss terrorism and the fatwa against Salman Rushdie. [27849]

Mr. Hanley: A European Union troika delegation visited Iran on 2 to 3 April 1996 to deliver a clear message on terrorism and the middle east peace process, as mandated by EU Foreign Ministers at their meeting in Palermo on 9 to 10 March 1996. The delegation received assurances that Iran would not interfere with, or sabotage, the peace process. Iran also reaffirmed its commitment to the "critical dialogue" with the EU.

Hafey Dulkamoni

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the German Government about the impending release of Hafey Dulkamoni, a Syrian citizen. [27850]

Mr. Hanley: None. Any question of release is solely a matter for the German authorities.

German Trade (Iran)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the German Government to abandon trade relations with Iran. [27853]

Mr. David Davis: None.

Ali Fallahian

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the German Government about the guided tour given by the German intelligence chief, Bernd Schmidbauer, of the German intelligence headquarters at Wiesbaden, to Ali Fallahian, head of Iranian intelligence. [27854]

Mr. Hanley: The Iranian Intelligence Minister, Ali Fallahian, visited Germany as a guest of the German Government from 6 to 7 October 1993. The arrangements for the visit were a matter for the German Government. The right hon. Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd), then the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, expressed his concern to Foreign Minister Kinkel about the visit and about Iran's activities.

Russian Nuclear Submarines

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what protests Her Majesty's Government have made to the Russian Government about an operation to dump 20 elderly nuclear submarines at sea. [27855]

Mr. Hanley: No protest has been made. Media reports of such an operation have not been substantiated. At the Moscow nuclear safety and security summit on 20 April, President Yeltsin stated that Russia would formally accept in 1996 the 1993 amendment to the London convention 1972 banning the dumping at sea of all radioactive waste.

Clothing Costs (Royal Family)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what costs were met by his Department for clothes worn by the Princess of Wales when she participated in the tour of Oman, Qatar, Bahrain and Saudi Arabia in 1986. [28923]

Mr. Rifkind: It is not possible to specify individual expenditure items for this visit, since detailed records for 1986 have been destroyed in line with Government accounting practice.

Mr Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much his Department has paid for clothes for members of the royal family undertaking official duties abroad in each of the last 10 years; and if he will identify the recipient in each case. [28922]

Mr. Rifkind: The information requested is no longer available in full, and could not be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Overseas Visits (Royal Family)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much his Department has paid towards the cost of visits abroad by members of the royal family in each of the last 10 years. [28921]

Mr. Rifkind: Expenditure by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on official visits overseas by members of the royal family in each of the last 10 years is as follows:

1986–87: £382,500
1987–88: £386,600
1988–89: £396,400
1989–90: £424,000
1990–91: £464,000
1991–92: £620,800
1992–93: £455,695
1993–94: £491,845
1994–95: £558,268
1995–96: £405,342 (bills presented to date).

Diplomats (Expulsions)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many United Kingdom diplomats officially accredited to missions in foreign countries have been expelled from (a) Libya, (b) the former Soviet Union, (c) the former Czechoslovakia, (d) Bulgaria, (e) Cuba, (f) Vietnam, (g) Iran, (h) South Africa and (i) Sudan, since 3 March 1995; and on what dates and for what stated reasons. [29006]

Mr. Hanley: One. The head of the British interest section at Tripoli was expelled on 24 December 1995. The stated reason was that he was "engaging in activities which were incompatible with his diplomatic status".

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many diplomats officially accredited to missions in London have been expelled since his answer of 18 January 1995, Official Report, column 580, and if he will indicate their nationalities. [29009]

Mr. Hanley: Two diplomats have been expelled; one from Libya, one from Iraq.

Hong Kong

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of China concerning the protection of existing business interests in Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement. [28944]

Mr. Hanley: We have on many occasions explained to the Chinese, through the Sino-British joint liaison group and other official channels, the importance of maintaining Hong Kong's economic and social systems, in particular an environment in which business can prosper and flourish. These priorities were enshrined in the Sino-British joint declaration on the question of Hong Kong and the Hong Kong basic law—a Chinese law which will be Hong Kong's constitution after 30 June 1997—which contains important provisions designed to ensure that Hong Kong businesses can continue to operate in a free and open environment. It provides for the economic and social systems in Hong Kong to remain unchanged, for Hong Kong to retain its status as an international financial centre, and for private property, ownership of enterprises, legitimate right of inheritance and foreign investment to be protected by law. The common law ill continue to apply in Hong Kong.

Telecommunications Industry (Hong Kong)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have been held with the Chinese Government in the last three years about the future of the telecommunications industry in Hong Kong. [28946]

Mr. Hanley: The regulations and development of the telecommunications industry in Hong Kong is a matter for the Hong Kong Government. However, the British side keeps the Chinese side informed, in the Sino-British joint liaison group, of significant developments in the industry. We also consult the Chinese side on the award of renewal of major contracts, including telecommunication franchises, that will straddle the transition.

State Recognition

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the states Her Majesty's Government do not officially recognise. [29076]

Mr. Hanley: Those entities which some claim to be states, but which are not recognised as such by the UK are:

Palestine
Taiwan
The Saharan Arab Democratic Republic
The Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus.

Chemical Weapons Convention

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made towards United Kingdom ratification of the chemical weapons convention. [29512]

Mr. David Davis: The UK's instrument of ratification was signed on 1 May. The instrument has been sent to New York and will be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations today.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was spent on official hospitality by his Department and all associated agencies in the financial year 1995–96. [28569]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 1 February, Official Report, columns 857–58 which included a projection of £8,213,136 for expenditure in 1995–96 on hospitality and entertainment by the FCO, diplomatic wing; its Wilton Park agency; the Overseas Development Administration; and the Natural Resources Institute, which was then the ODA's agency, but is now in the private sector.

Provisional outturn expenditure figures for 1995–96 are expected to be available soon.

PRIME MINISTER

Ministers (Unlawful Actions)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the occasions on which Government Ministers have had their actions declared unlawful since 1973 in (a) United Kingdom courts, (b) the European Court of Human Rights and (c) the European Court of Justice. [28980]

The Attorney-General: I have been asked to reply.

As regards cases in the United Kingdom and in the European Court of Justice, the information requested by the hon. Member is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. In any event, most actions in the European Court of Justice are either references from national courts, in which the European Court of Justice does not declare actions to be unlawful, or infraction proceedings commenced by the Commission, where the case is against the United Kingdom and in practice it rarely, if ever, happens that action taken by a particular Government Minister is in issue. As regards the European Court on Human Rights, proceedings are against the United Kingdom, rather than individual Government Ministers. In practice, it is difficult to say that a breach of the convention has arisen solely because of action taken by a particular Government Minister.

Healthcare Group plc

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 1 April, Official Report, column 74 (1) what procedure was used by his Department prior to its entering into its contract with the General Healthcare Group plc; what other private companies or organisations were approached with a view to tendering for the contract now held by Healthcare Group plc; how many companies or organisations tendered for this contract; and what adjustments have been made to the terms of this contract since it was entered into; [28621]

(2) how many audiology tests were carried out under his Department's contract with the General Healthcare Group plc in each financial year since 1993–94; and what was the cost of this contract in each of these years. [28622]

Mr. Burt: These are matters for Mr. Kevin Caldwell, the chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Kevin Caldwell to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 10 May 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the contract held with General Healthcare group plc and the process leading up to the award.

The tender exercise leading to the award of contract began with an advertisement in the national press on 30 November 1992. This invited any organisation who wished to do so to express an interest in participating in the exercise with a view to inclusion on the tender list.

Questionnaires were then issued to thirty eight organisational who had expressed interest, requesting information on such areas as financial stability, capacity and capability, management infrastructure and commitment together with experience in the audiology field. Evaluation of these responses identified six companies who appeared suitable for shortlisting to the next stage, which consisted of site reference visits and further exploration of potential capability to provide the service. Of these six, four were considered suitable for inclusion on the tender list.

In fact sealed tenders were received from three companies: Nuffield Audiological Services, Minerva Health Management and General Healthcare Group PLC. They were opened in line with usual Departmental guidelines and evaluated by a panel comprising representatives from medical, operational and contractual backgrounds.

Following its analysis, the tender evaluation panel produced a report recommending award of a national contract to General Healthcare Group plc, trading as BMI Healthcare Audiology Services. This recommendation was endorsed by an independent Tender Board comprising senior managers within the Department.

Several adjustments have been made since the commencement of full service in 1993. These are all of an operational or administrative nature designed to modify operational aspects of the service in order to ensure maximum efficiency in the prevailing circumstances. The Terms and Conditions of the original contract remain unchanged.

The volume of tests by category together with the relevant costs in each financial year since award of contract is as follows:

	Volume of tests
14 June 1993[1] 31 March 1994
Standard Tests	61,822
Standard Tests (Domiciliary Visit)	1,661

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total number of cases dealt with by the Child Support Agency since it was established, within (a) the Newbury parliamentary constituency, (b) the area of Newbury district council and (c) the area of Berkshire county council. [28906]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. David Rendel, dated 10 May 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency cases.

Information in the form you have requested is not routinely kept, nor is it readily available.

Every case the Agency deals with involves at least two clients who may live in very different parts of the country. Our cases are allocated to an office on the basis of the location of the home of the parent with care. The Agency's work is dealt with by six Child Support Agency Centres (CSACs), each supported by Divisional and Field offices, dealing with particular geographical locations. Plymouth CSAC covers the Southwest and Central Southern regions. It has a Field office in Newbury, but the boundaries of this office do not correspond to any or all of the three areas you mention.

When the Agency was established, the Field offices dealt only with cases requiring local contact. The majority of work was dealt with by the CSAC. Since June 1995, Newbury Field office has dealt with pre maintenance assessment work in its area and has kept figures on the number of cases it has dealt with since then. Such figures, however, only relate to the area covered by the office and not the areas specified in your question.

National Insurance

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many employers make national insurance contributions; and what would be the yield from removing the present cap on employers' contributions. [28311]

Mr. Heald: There is no upper earnings limit on the payment of national insurance contributions by employers: the limit applies only to employees. It is estimated that in any one week in the year 1996–97 some 18.6 million employees will pay contributions and that of those 3.2 million will have earnings above the upper earnings limit.

If the upper earnings limit on employees' contributions were removed, it is estimated that an extra £3.25 billion would be collected in a full year.[1]

Note:

[1]Assumes that the current 10 per cent. contribution rate would apply to earnings above the upper earnings limit.

Maternity Pay

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much has been paid by employers of (a) under 100 employees, (b) under 50 employees and (c) under 10 employees, since the withdrawal of reimbursement of statutory maternity pay. [28750]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested.

Small businesses which pay annual national insurance contributions of £20,000 or less are still able to obtain full reimbursement of their statutory maternity pay costs. For employers paying more than £20,000, the reimbursement rate was reduced to 92 per cent. from 4 September 1994 to meet the cost of improving maternity pay for employees as a result of the Government's implementation of the EC pregnant workers directive. The first full year following the change has just ended and any information about employers's payments will not be available until end-of-year-returns have been submitted and assessed.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to amend the small employers' relief scheme for statutory maternity pay. [28751]

Mr. Heald: None.

Benefits (Reductions)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on how many occasions since 1979 a benefit has been reduced in cash terms. [28632]

Mr. Burt: A comparison of the main benefit rates payable in 1978 and 1996, is made in the 1995–96 departmental report (HMSO, CM3213, March 1996), a copy of which is in the Library. The table (Fig. 20) shows no reduction in the main benefits in cash terms over that period.

State Earnings-related Pension Scheme

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners are currently in receipt of SERPS pensions; what is the average weekly payment; and what was the equivalent figure in (a) 1985 and (b) 1990. [28892]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table.

Pensioners in receipt of additional pension

	Number of pensioners	Net average weekly payment
September 1995	4,584,700	£9.33
September 1990	3,066,050	£4.88
September 1985	1,443,650	£1.89

Notes:

1. Figures are for all countries. The sample size for 1985 and 1990 was 10 per cent. The sample size for 1995 was 5 per cent.
2. The net payment is the amount of additional pension paid after the deduction of a contracted out deduction (COD). A COD is deducted when a person has been contracted out of SERPS into a contracted-out pension scheme or an appropriate personal pension used in place of SERPS.

Retirement Pensions Statistics.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the percentage of pension income of newly retired pensioners, excluding the basic state pension, which was represented by SERPS payments, in the most recent year; and what were the equivalent figures in (a) 1985 and (b) 1990. [28894]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested.

The source of data for estimates of pensioners' incomes is the pensioners' income series. This is based on the family expenditure survey, which contains information only on total state retirement pension and cannot differentiate between basic and additional pension.

The table gives an estimate of the percentage of pensioner income of newly retired pensioners which is total state retirement pension.

State retirement pension as a proportion of pension income

Per cent.

Recently retired pensioner units	1981	1987	1990	1993
Pensioner couples	57	50	53	52
Single pensioners	58	59	61	65
All pensioner units	58	53	55	55

Notes:

1. Recently retired pensioner units are defined as being single women aged 60–64, single men aged 65–69 and couples in which the husband is aged 65–69.
2. Pension income has been defined for this purpose as being the sum of total State Retirement Pension receipt and occupational pension payments.
3. Figures are rounded to the nearest whole per cent.
4. No information is available for 1985 as the Pensioners' Income Series was not compiled for this year.
5. Estimates drawn from the PI 1993 are subject to a large degree of statistical variability, particularly in relation to recently retired pensioners because of the limited sample size, and co comparisons of estimates from different years may not give reliable results.

Sources:

Pensioners' Income Series—1981, 1987, 1990, 1993.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average weekly SERPS pension paid to those who retired in the most recent year; and what was the equivalent figure in (a) 1985 and (b) 1990. [28893]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Figures are not available for 1990 as the movement tables were not produced due to the change from the existing pensions computer system to the pensions strategy computer system which took place during the period 1989 to 1992.

The number of new retirement pension awards and the average weekly additional pension paid for 1985 and 1995 are given in the table.

Year ending	Number of pensioners	Net average weekly payment (£)
31 March 1995	322,890	11.92
31 March 1985	251,510	2.35

Notes:

1. Figures are for all countries and the numbers of pensioners relate to the number of awards of retirement pension in the period.
2. The net payment is the amount of additional pension paid after the deduction of a contracted out deduction (COD). A COD is deducted when a person has been contracted out of SERPS into a contracted-out pension scheme or an appropriate personal pension used in place of SERPS.
3. The figures for 1985 were collected on a yearly basis ending March. The movement tables are now issued every six months. To enable a comparison to be made with the earlier figures, the 6 monthly figures of September '94 and March '95 have been added together, with the average payment being recalculated accordingly.

Child Support Act 1991

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide a progress report on the research work being undertaken by the centre for research in social policy at the university of Loughborough into the effects of the Child Support Act; and if he will make a statement. [28738]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: No research into the effects of the Child Support Act has been commissioned from the university of Loughborough.

Income Support

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioner claimants of income support have savings of less than £3,000. [28896]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. The number of income support pensioner claimants who were recorded as having capital of up to and including £3,000 was 464,000 in May 1995, the latest date for which figures are available.

Source:

Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry: May 1995

Notes:

1. Pensioner claimants are defined as those in the pensioner statistical groups ie. where either the claimant or partner is aged 60 or over.
2. The figure has been rounded to the nearest thousand.
3. Some claimants with savings of less than £3,000 may not be recorded as these amounts do not affect the assessment of benefits.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the cost of administering income support for pensioners; and what this figure is expressed as a percentage of income support paid to pensioners. [28897]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much has been paid in statutory sick pay to employees by employers of (a) under 100 employees, (b) under 50 employees and (c) under 10 employees since the withdrawal of the small employers relief scheme for statutory sick pay in April 1995. [28743]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available.

The first full year following replacement of the small employers relief scheme has just ended. Any information about employers' payments will not be available until end-of-year-returns have been submitted and assessed.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many firms (a) in total, (b) with under 100 employees, (c) with under 50 employees and (d) with under 10 employees reclaimed statutory sick pay under the small employers' relief fund in each of the 10 years preceding the end of the scheme in April 1995; [28744]

(2) how much was reclaimed in statutory sick pay under the small employers' relief fund in each of the 10 years preceding the end of the scheme in April 1995 by (a) all firms, (b) firms with under 100 employees, (c) firms with under 50 employees and (d) firms with under 10 employees. [28745]

Mr. Heald: Information is not available in the format requested.

The statutory sick pay small employees relief scheme was introduced from 6 April 1991. For the years 1991–92 to 1993–94, employers were not required to distinguish in their end-of-year returns between reimbursement under SER and the 80 per cent. reimbursement of employers' SSP costs available to all employers. For 1994–95, following abolition of 80 per cent. reimbursement from 6 April 1994, the total amount reclaimed under SER was £25 million.

Pensioners (Savings)

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioner recipients of (a) social fund loans and (b) social fund grants, have savings in excess of (i) £500, (ii) £1,000 and (iii) £3,000. [28895]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Industrial Tribunals

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases of unfair treatment have been taken to industrial tribunals by employees of the Department of Social Security in each year since 1988; and in how many of these the industrial tribunal found in favour of the employee. [28660]

Mr. Burt: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Citizens Charter

4. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment has he made of the effectiveness of the citizens charter. [27667]

Mr. Willetts: The key criterion for evaluating the effectiveness of the citizens charter is improvement in the standards and responsiveness of public services. A full account of this is set out in last year's charter White Paper "The Citizen's Charter: The Facts and Figures".

Delegated Legislation

5. Mr. Steen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many statutory instruments were introduced in the 1994–95 Session; and what is their estimated total annual cost to business and to public funds. [27668]

Mr. Freeman: Numbers of statutory instruments are recorded by calendar year. The number of new statutory instruments in 1995 was 3,345, of which fewer than 12 per cent. placed compliance costs on business. The costs of individual instruments are specified in compliance cost assessments, but these include transfers between sectors and other factors which prevent the type of aggregation requested by my hon. Friend.

Contracting Out (in Service Pensions)

12. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has received regarding the Contracting Out (Administration of the in Service Pension Scheme) Order 1996. [27676]

Mr. Willetts: Various representations that had been made were taken fully into account in the decision to open up to competition administration of the principal civil service pension scheme and associated schemes. Competition will ensure value for money, and the focus on performance outputs will help improve further the quality of service to scheme members.

Ministerial Visit (Plymouth)

19. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he next intends to visit Plymouth to discuss inward investment. [27684]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have no such plans at present, but would be very glad to consider an invitation.

Widdecombe Report

20. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the implementation of the Widdecombe report on the conduct of local government. [27685]

The Deputy Prime Minister: None. This is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Regional Offices

21. Ms Quin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the relationship between his Department and the Government's regional offices. [27686]

Mr. Freeman: My Department is in regular contact with the 10 Government regional offices on those matters relevant to this Department—competitiveness and deregulation.

Departmental Initiatives

24. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what initiatives his Department is taking to disseminate abroad its work in co-ordinating Government policies. [27689]

Mr. Willetts: My Department has responded positively to interest expressed by other countries in the action we take to co-ordinate and present Government policy.

European Legislation

25. Mr. Hain: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department has made of the impact of European regulations and directives. [27690]

Mr. Freeman: Revised guidance requiring Departments to produce a compliance cost assessment for each EC legislative proposal was published in January. These assessments are a vital tool for helping to minimise any costs to business arising from new legislation.

Deregulation

26. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Deputy Prime Minster what discussions he has had with trade unions in respect of his policies on deregulation. [27691]

Mr. Freeman: We welcome the views of all interested parties to our deregulation initiative, including those from trade unions.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to alter the number of staff in his office; and if he will make a statement. [27666]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I expect to see further reductions in staff numbers in the Office of Pubic Service in the coming year.

BSE

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what is his role in disseminating information relating to BSE. [27683]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Like other senior members of the Government, I take every opportunity to explain the Government's position.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much was spent on official hospitality by his Department and all associated agencies in the financial year 1995–96. [28578]

Mr. Willetts: Expenditure on official hospitality by the Cabinet Office, including the Office of Public Service, and its executive agencies, excluding HMSO and the Buying Agency, in the financial year to 31 March 1996 is estimated to be £53,900. This figure includes total annual expenditure of £5,000 on official hospitality by the Security and Facilities Agency, responsibility for which transferred to the Office of Public Service from the Department of the Environment on 1 January 1996.

Expenditure by HMSO and the Buying Agency, both of which have a different accounting year, was 38,500 and 4,000 respectively, covering the calendar year to 31 December 1995. Responsibility for TBA transferred to the Office of Public Service from the Department of the Environment on 1 January 1996.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Young Bulls

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what intervention proposals he has for young bulls aged around 12 months; what representations he has had on this matter; and if he will make a statement. [24465]

Mrs. Browning: There have been several representations on this matter, as a result of which young bulls were, at our request, added to the list of animals the meat of which is currently eligible to be sold into intervention in the UK. To date, intervention tenders for more than 500 tonnes of UK young bull beef have been accepted for purchase into intervention.

Cattle Herds

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total number of (a) dairy and (b) beef cattle in England at the latest available date. [28144]

Mrs. Browning: The latest figures available are from the 1995 December agriculture survey—1 December:

Cattle and calves

	Thousands
Total breeding herd
Dairy herd	1,838
Beef herd	798
Total heifers in calf
Dairy herd	322
Beef herd	111
Total other cattle and calves	3,591
Total cattle and calves	6,661

Totals may not necessarily agree with the sum of their components due to rounding.

Please note that "other cattle and calves" includes bulls for service, and also cattle intended for replacements for the beef and dairy herds. Further breakdown of the figures are detailed in statistical notice 58/96/Survey of Agriculture: 1 December 1995 England—published on 9 April 1996—which is available from the MAFF press office.

Dietary Supplements

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the European Commission to publish its forthcoming consultation document on the availability of vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements; and for what period of time he expects that document to be open for consultation. [28220]

Mrs. Browning: I refer to the answer I gave the hon. Gentleman on 12 March in the Official Report, column 577.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for each other member country of the European Union the information which he has evaluated on the controls which are imposed upon the availability of vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements. [28221]

Mrs. Browning: Our understanding of the controls on the availability of vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements in other member states is based on a number of sources, including the position member states took when this matter was previously discussed at EU level in 1992.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to persuade his counterparts in other European countries to support his policies in respect of the continued availability of vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements; what steps he has taken to encourage support for that policy at recent meetings of the Agriculture Council; and if he will make a statement setting out that policy. [28219]

Mrs. Browning: My Department takes every opportunity to ensure that other member states are aware of our views on dietary supplements. However, the matter is not one which is considered by the Agricultural Council.

Former Defence Site, Rhydymwyn

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made with regard to investigations into the former MOD site at Rhydymwyn, Mold, Flintshire. [28271]

Mr. Boswell: In April 1996, the Ministry, in conjunction with Flintshire county council and the Welsh Development Agency, commissioned AEA Technology to carry out a further assessment of the site to identify chemical and mineral residues. The results of its desk study are expected by late summer. Field work and chemical analysis will then follow, if necessary.

Cormorants and Saw-billed Ducks

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many applications for a licence to shoot cormorants and saw-billed ducks were received by his Department in the year 1995–6; how many of these were refused; how many birds were licensed to be shot; and how many have been reported as having been shot. [28293]

Mrs. Browning: The information requested is set out in the table for the period 1 May 1995 to 31 March 1996:

	Applications received[1]	Applications refused	Applications granted	Number of birds licensed to be shot	Number of birds actually shot[2]
Cormorants	90	32	52	341	121
Goosanders	25	19	5	19	2
Mergansers	1	1	—	—	—

[1] Some applications are still to be determined.
[2] Provisional figures.

BSE

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many prosecutions there have been of (a) farmers, (b) cattle dealers, (c) auctioneers, (d) abattoir purchasers and (e) meat wholesalers concerning breaches of BSE regulations. [28529]

Mrs. Browning: One case has been successfully prosecuted under the Specified Bovine Offals Order 1995. The defendants were fined at total of £3,000 plus £2,000 costs for two offences under the order. There are no further cases before the court at present; a number of other cases are, however, under investigation.

Local government also plays a significant role in implementing the control measures on BSE. It is in part responsible for enforcing the Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Order 1991, as amended, and the provisions of the new Specified Bovine Materials Order 1996 in relation to SBOs in non-food premises. We are aware that local authorities have taken several BSE-related prosecutions. We do not, however, hold details of these centrally.

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on (a) the incidence of BSE, (b) the steps in place to identify cases of BSE, (c) the steps taken to remove specified bovine offal from the carcases of animals believed to be affected and (d) the method by which the carcases of animals slaughtered because their herd was infected with BSE are disposed of in respect of each of the other EU countries; and what assessment he has made of the relative effectiveness of each country's programme to protect the public from BSE-related diseases. [28544]

Mrs. Browning: Up until 3 May 1996, 160,032 suspect cases of BSE have been reported in Great Britain. All suspect cases of BSE must, by law, be notified to the Ministry. The Ministry's veterinary officers visit all suspect animals to make a clinical diagnosis. Animals subsequently confirmed by the Ministry's veterinary officer as being suspected of suffering from BSE will be slaughtered on farm and their carcase disposed of by incineration. Specified bovine material is not removed from these animals as the whole carcase goes for disposal.

We do not have details of the preferred method of disposal of BSE suspect cases in other EU member states. Details of SBO controls in other EU member states were given in my response to my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury, (Mr. Key) on 29 April, Official Report, column, 413–14.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all recommendations made since 1986 by the scientific committees advising the Government on spongiform encephalopathies, which have not been fully implemented. [23199]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: There have been four reports published by the various advisory committees on transmissible spongiform encephalopathies since 1989.

Recommendations were made in both the "Report of the Working Party on Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (Southwood Report)" dated February 1989 and the "Interim Report (Tyrrell Report)" dated June 1989. The only recommendation made to Government which has not been implemented is a low-priority research recommendation for the survey of brains of cattle routinely sent for slaughter to monitor incidence of unrecognised infection, which was contained in the Tyrrell report. This recommendation was of course superseded by regulations which protected human health by the exclusion of specified bovine offals from the food chain.

The two later reports produced by the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee "Interim report on Research" dated April 1992 and the "Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies—A Summary of present Knowledge and Research" dated September 1994 contained no recommendations to Government. The interim report on research did, however, state that detailed examination of the relevant studies indicated that, in the Committee's view, there were no inappropriate overlaps; that all high-priority studies had been started, and that satisfactory progress had been made in implementing the recommendations of the interim report (Tyrrell report) (paragraph 4.1).

The committee has made a number of recommendations to Government on transmissible spongiform encephalopathies since the last set of published recommendations contained in the Tyrrell report were put to Government. The Government have acted swiftly to ensure that these recommendations were put in place with the minimum of delay.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many BSE cases have been confirmed in animals aged less than 30 months old since 1988. [27978]

Mrs. Browning: Since 1986 and up to 3 May 1996, the number of BSE cases confirmed in animals less than 30 months in Great Britain is 80.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has evaluated on the distribution and timing of BSE infectivity in cattle before the final brain disease under farming conditions. [27979]

Mrs. Browning: All details on BSE infectivity have been published in the latest progress report. So far, from confirmed field cases, the BSE agent has been detected only in brain, cervical spinal cord, terminal spinal cord and retina. Under experimental conditions, infectivity has also been detected in the distal ileum of calves 18 months after challenge, but in no other tissues. Assays of tissues collected at later stages of that experiment are still in progress.

In the same study, CNS lesions were detected no more than three to four months before onset of clinical disease.

Feline Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of cats suffering from spongiform encephalopathies have been reported to his Department in each of the last five years; and what research his Department has evaluated relating to future trends in the incidence of such diseases. [28590]

Mrs. Browning: The following table shows the numbers of cases of feline spongiform encephalopathy recorded in the United Kingdom until 8 May 1996:

	Number of cases
1990	13
1991	12
1992	10
1993	11
1994	16
1995	8
1996	1

Epidemiological studies are in progress but are incomplete. With the exception of one cat thought to be born in October 1990, none of the cases of feline spongiform encephalopathy confirmed in the United Kingdom are believed to have been born after the ban, in September 1990, on the use of specified bovine offals in animal feed.

These investigations are complicated by the difficulty in obtaining lifetime feeding and breeding histories for cats. This makes predicting the future trends difficult, although, at present, the shape of the epidemic appears to be similar to that of BSE.

Plympton Market

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will reopen the Plympton market as a collecting centre for the culling scheme. [29071]

Mr. Baldry: I understand that an application for approval of Plympton market under the scheme is being considered by the intervention board at the moment.

Fishing Grants

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the average length of time taken to process applications for grants awarded in England and Wales under the provisions of the fishing vessels (safety improvements) (grants) scheme each year from 1990 to 1995. [29153]

Mr. Baldry: The Sea Fish Industry Authority administers the fishing vessels (safety improvements) (grants) scheme on behalf of the Government. It does not keep detailed historic records of the time taken to deal with individual applications, but I understand that the average time taken to deal with an application, from receipt to formal approval, is estimated at four weeks.

Tanning Industry

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what financial support will be provided to the tanning industry in the financial year 1996–97. [25135]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 16 April 1996]: It is not the Government's intention that financial assistance should be specifically targeted at the tanning industry in this financial year.

Beef Heads

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what financial support will be provided to plants licensed to process beef heads in the financial year 1996–97. [25134]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 16 April 1996]: The Government sympathise with the cattle and head deboners whose traditional business has disappeared as a result of measures introduced on 29 March. However, as Ministers have made clear on a number of occasions, the purpose of the financial assistance which has been made available to the slaughtering sector is to provide market support to keep the essential links in the beef supply chain operating while companies adjust to the changed market circumstances. It is not our policy to use public funds to compensate businesses for losses incurred. Against this background, we have concluded that no financial assistance can be offered to plants licensed to process beef heads, except the support available to all licensed slaughterhouses and licensed cutting premises in respect of unsold beef stocks.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to improve the welfare of animals; and if he will make a statement. [27571]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 9 May 1996]: We have action in hand across a wide range of animal welfare issues. For example, we are now developing our plans to implement the important new EU rules on the welfare of animals in transit which were secured by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury in June 1995; we are pressing hard, in the EU negotiations on the welfare of calves which we ourselves got brought forward, for an end to the veal crate throughout Europe; and we shall be pressing at the intergovernmental conference for a protocol to be added to the treaty, placing a legal obligation on the Community institutions to pay full regard to animal welfare when exercising their powers in relation to agriculture, transport, research and the single market.

Sea Empress Incident

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information has been requested by the Environment Agency from his Department about the Sea Empress oil spillage; when that information was requested; and if he will place a copy of his Department's reply in the Library. [28864]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 10 May 1996]: Primary responsibility for fisheries matters in relation to the Sea Empress oil spillage rests with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. I refer the hon. Member to his reply of 10 May 1996, Official Report, column 301–02.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what procedures are taken to ensure that an animal rejected by a local veterinary inspector as unfit to travel on an export journey is not transported in Great Britain in a way which may cause it unnecessary suffering. [28627]

Mrs Browning [holding answer 10 May 1996]: There is a considerable variety of circumstances in which local veterinary inspectors may reject an animal as unfit for an export journey, and there is no basis for specifying a follow-up procedure which would be applicable in all cases. However, if an animal is unfit to travel, anyone who transported it, except in accordance with the Welfare of Animals during Transport Order 1994, would be committing an offence.

Mr Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many bovines were exported during 1994 and 1995 to (a) Northern Ireland, (b) the Republic of Ireland, (c) France, (d) Spain, (e) Italy, (f) Belgium, (g) Netherlands and (h) Greece. [28625]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 10 May 1996]: Exports of bovine animals from the United Kingdom for 1994 and 1995 as recorded in the overseas trade statistics are as follows:

Number of head	1994[1]	1995[1]
Irish Republic	1,313	668
France	238,080	234,013
Spain	Nil	Nil
Italy	Nil	119
Belgium-Luxembourg	79,372	56,385
Netherlands	160,803	138,257
Greece	Nil	Nil

[1] Data provisional.

These overseas trade statistics record exports from the United Kingdom but not trade between Great Britain and Northern Ireland. However, figures collated from the computerised animal movement—ANIMO—database, which records animals certified for export, show that 18,340 and 25,044 bovines were exported from Great Britain to Northern Ireland in 1994 and 1995 respectively. These figures remain provisional, and subject to amendment.

Animal Feed

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ensure there is an obligation on manufacturers of animal feed to declare a full list of ingredients. [28872]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 10 May 1996]: Ingredients of compound animal feed must be declared either in full or by category. The Government are currently exploring whether the relevant EC directive should be changed.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police (Housing Allowance)

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to ensure consistent application of regulations relating to police officers' previous housing allowance where career breaks were taken prior to 1994. [28912]

Mr. Maclean: The application of the police regulations is a matter for police forces and police authorities. The regulations are clear about preserved entitlements to housing allowance for police officers who were appointed before 1 September 1994, including those who had been granted leave of absence for a career break. It would be for the Police Negotiating Board to consider in the first instance whether further amendment to the regulations was desirable and to make whatever recommendations to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department it considered appropriate.

Gardian Family (Llandudno)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received on behalf of the Gardian family of Llandudno, North Wales; and if he will make a statement. [28901]

Mr. Kirkhope: We have received representations on behalf of the Gardian family from 12 hon. Members, two noble Lords and numerous members of the public. I have considered the relevant factors in this case and have decided that in the light of all the particular circumstances deportation action is not appropriate.

Forensic Explosives Laboratory

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the work of the forensic explosives laboratory. [29688]

Mr. Howard: On 14 March, explosives contamination was found in a centrifuge at the forensic explosives laboratory which is a part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. The laboratory carried out a preliminary investigation and laid all the information before the Government in a formal report. A copy of that report has today been placed in the Library.

The forensic explosives laboratory's primary role is to provide scientific support to the police service and to provide expert witnesses for the Crown Prosecution Service in cases involving the criminal use of explosives. One of the services that it provides involves the laboratory analysis of swab samples taken to determine the presence of explosives and the type involved. This "trace" analysis involves a range of procedures, including the use in many cases of a centrifuge.

The explosives contamination involved a small amount, not more than 30 micrograms or 30 millionths of a gram, of the explosive RDX, one of the main components of the explosive Semtex. It was detected in a part of a laboratory centrifuge which was probably already contaminated on its arrival at the forensic explosives laboratory in 1989. By normal standards, the amount of explosive detected was tiny; nevertheless, it should not have been there.

The centrifuge involved was immediately taken out of operational action on discovery of this contamination and the trace laboratory thoroughly cleaned. No incidences of contamination from the centrifuge could, therefore, occur from that point on.

There is a small theoretical possibility that any casework sample showing RDX traces may have been affected by the centrifuge contamination. Regular quality assurance tests undertaken by the laboratory have not revealed RDX traces at a level which would suggest that casework samples are likely to have been contaminated but this cannot be ruled out completely. This may call into question evidence submitted by the FEL in criminal cases involving RDX.

On present information there may be around a dozen such cases which resulted in convictions, but the identification of all relevant cases and assessment of the possible risk of contamination are matters on which I want independent advice. I have therefore decided that an immediate independent review of the casework and procedures at the forensic explosives laboratory must take place. The terms of reference will require the reviewer:

(1) to report on the general likelihood of contamination being spread from the centrifuge to samples in the laboratory;

(2) to examine FEL papers on all cases in which RDX traces were found and a criminal conviction resulted and assess the likelihood of contamination;

(3) to examine FEL procedures in the trace laboratory and make recommendations.

Professor Brian Caddy, professor of forensic science at Strathclyde university, has agreed to undertake this review and will begin work shortly. He will report to me in the first instance, but the results and recommendations of his review will be made public.

As soon as it is clear which cases involved an RDX trace and resulted in a conviction, we will notify the representatives of those concerned.

Once the report has been completed, I will decide what further action should be taken, particularly with regard to any concerns raised about the possible contamination of casework samples which subsequently resulted in criminal convictions. If appropriate, I will consider whether particular cases should be referred to the Court of Appeal.

From the information currently available to me, it would appear that the risk of contamination is small, but in a matter of this sensitivity I am determined to act only on the basis of the most rigorous and independent scientific assessments. I will keep the House fully informed of the outcome of that scrutiny and the measures which flow from it.

Metropolitan Police (Inspector's Report)

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement as police authority for the Metropolitan police on the recent report by Her Majesty's chief inspector of constabulary on Metropolitan police area 1. [29689]

Mr. Maclean: Yes. We have today placed in the Library a note of the recommendations from the report, together with the Commissioner's responses and the police authority responses, which takes into account the advice that my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary and I have received from the Metropolitan police committee.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

British Council

Mr. Litherland: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs from what source the redundancy payments for the employees of the British Council who lose their jobs will be funded. [28970]

Mr. Hanley: Redundancy payments and other compensation arrangements will be made by the British Council. The possibility of the Government helping the British Council with some of these restructuring costs is currently being considered in the context of the studies being carried out with the aim of avoiding overseas post closures.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent attack on the Governor of St. Helena; and what assessment he has made of the cause of the incident. [29263]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: On 19 April a demonstration outside the castle in Jamestown was organised to press demands for increased social security benefits. A number—about 60 to 70—of those demonstrators forced their way into the Governor's office. They were eventually persuaded to leave: there was no damage to property or harm to the Government servants involved.

The ODA had sent an expert adviser on social security to St. Helena in March. He has recommended changes to the social security system on the island, which are being studied by the St. Helena Government.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 81, if the review is considering the rights of civil servants on temporary contracts to maternity leave; and when he expects the reviews to be (a) completed and (b) published. [29264]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The review of the unestablished work force in respect of maternity leave is now complete. A new order is in the process of being drafted for inclusion in the public service orders to make provision for unestablished females to be granted maternity leave. The order will be published by 1 June 1996.

MI6 (Pensions)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to submit the administration of civil service pensions for employees of MI6 to (a) market testing and (b) privatisation. [29287]

Mr. Rifkind: There are no plans to do so.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Wembley Stadium (Disabled People)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what information her Department evaluated on access to Wembley stadium for disabled people; how it compared with such access to other major sporting venues; and if she will make a statement. [28658]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 13 May 1996]: My Department has made no evaluation of Wembley stadium or compared it with other sporting venues. The provision of disabled facilities in existing stadiums is the responsibility of the management of the ground in question. The Government strongly support improvements in facilities for disabled spectators at sports grounds, and the Sports Council takes into account disabled access when distributing lottery funds for grounds and facilities. Also, the Disability Discrimination Act creates new rights of access for disabled people. The Act places a duty on service providers to make adjustments to the premises, where reasonable, in order to make them more accessible. My hon. Friend the Minister for the Disabled is currently analysing the results of a consultation on the timetable for implementing the rights of access.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Wasted Costs Orders

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Attorney-General what considerations led to the omission of wasted costs orders from the annual reports of the Crown Prosecution Service. [28307]

The Attorney-General: Information on costs awarded against the prosecution is published in the departmental report of the Lord Chancellor's and Law Officers' Department, Cm. 3209, March 1996.

Mr. Anderson: To ask the Attorney-General how many wasted costs orders have been made by courts against the Crown Prosecution Service in the last accounting year, with the breakdown of each Crown Prosecution Service area and the total sums for such areas and further broken down by the Crown courts and the magistrates courts. [28306]

The Attorney-General: Wasted costs orders are usually so described—that is, orders against the legal or other representatives personally, pursuant to section 19A of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985, are extremely rare in relation to representatives of the Crown Prosecution Service.

I have taken the hon. Member's question to refer to orders made under section 19(1) of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 and regulation 3 of the Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, being orders based on an unnecessary or improper act or omission for which the prosecution is held responsible, which can arise for a variety of reasons. The numbers of such orders recorded against the Crown Prosecution Service, broken down by each Crown Prosecution Service area, and further broken down by Crown court and magistrates courts, are set out in the table. The final column of the table shows the amounts actually paid out by the Crown Prosecution Service in the last accounting year. This information cannot be separated between sums paid in respect of orders made by magistrates courts and those made in the Crown court.

Costs awarded against the Crown Prosecution Service 1995–96

Area	Number of costs awards against CPS		Amount paid £
	Crown courts	Magistrates' courts
North	2	19	3,102
Yorkshire	11	160	8,215
Mersey/Lancashire	11	6	3,259
Humber	9	6	22,827
North-west	5	14	9,363
East Midlands	20	39	18,347
Wales	10	4	5,108
Midlands	9	7	7,503
Anglia	6	16	12,637
Severn/Thames	16	16	16,798
South-west	4	4	2,227
London	111	95	63,804
South-east	13	26	19,528
Central casework	Not available	Not available	52,003
Total	227	412	244,721

1. Information is not available to establish the enactment under which the orders were made and awards of costs made otherwise than in accordance with the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 may be included.

2. The information in relation to the number of awards is limited to Crown court and magistrates court cases. It does not include cost awards made in the higher court.

3. The number of awards relates to all cases dealt with by the CPS areas, but does not include any orders made in respect of the specialised work handled by central casework.

4. Information about the amounts actually paid includes payments in respect of orders made in the higher courts and those in respect of the specialised work handled by central casework, but the amounts paid cannot be broken down by type of court.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Police Training (ODA Funding)

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the projects or schemes under which the Overseas Development Agency has given funding to countries to finance training of their police officers (a) in the UK or (b) in their home countries. [29041]

Mr. Hanley: Assistance for police training under the aid programme is financed through the ODA's country aid programmes, whether the training takes place in the UK or in the trainee's home country.

Countries who received aid for in-country training from ODA under country aid programmes in 1994 and 1995 were:

1994

Albania
Anguilla
Bangladesh
Barbados
British Virgin Islands
Bulgaria
Cayman Islands
Czech Republic
Gambia
Hungary
India
Indonesia
Jamaica
Lesotho
Maldives
Montserrat
Namibia
Nepal
Nigeria
Pakistan
Poland
Romania
Russia
St. Helena
Sierra Leone
Slovak Republic
South Africa
Sri Lanka
Swaziland
Turks and Caicos Islands
Uganda

1995

Estonia
Latvia
Lithuania
Bangladesh
Botswana
Bulgaria
Cayman Islands
Czech Republic
Hungary
India
Jamaica
Kenya
Lesotho
Malawi
Namibia
Nepal
Nigeria
Pakistan
Palestinian Authority
Poland
Romania
Russia

St. Helena
St. Kitts and Nevis
Slovak Republic
South Africa
Sri Lanka
Swaziland
Uganda

Countries receiving police training in the UK in 1994 and 1995 under country aid programmes were listed in the answer given to the hon. Member on 28 February, Official Report, column 546.

It would involve a disproportionate cost to collect this information for earlier years or by projects.

Nigeria

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the Nigerian Government's political programme for the creation of a democracy in Nigeria; if he will list, with proposed dates, the main elements of that political programme; if he will indicate in the case of each of those dates which have passed whether the stated goal had been achieved, with particular reference to local government elections; and if he will list those targets within the programme which gave rise to the concerns about a lack of progress expressed by the Minister of State in his oral answer on 3 April, Official Report, column 373. [29079]

Mr. Hanley: A copy of the transition programme, as announced by the General Abacha on 1 October 1995, has been placed in the Library of the house.

We are not satisfied that the non-party elections held in March were free or fair. We are concerned by the introduction of new decrees which further extend the powers of the regime to control political activity and by the continued detention of opposition figures.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Probate Service

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when his Department will be announcing its response to the recommendation of the report on the structure of the probate service of September 1994. [28395]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Paul Boateng, dated 14 May 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your Question about the progress of the response to the Report on the Structure of the Probate Service.

The Principal Registry of the Family Division forwarded a submission to Court Service Headquarters on 9 May. The submission will shortly be forwarded to the Lord Chancellor for his consideration. The Lord Chancellor will make a decision on the proposals in due course.

TREASURY

Personal Alcohol Imports

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what restrictions apply to the importation of large quantities of alcohol from other EU countries in cases where the person importing the alcohol declares it to be for personal use; and what tests are applied to establish whether the alcohol is intended for personal use. [28690]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Customs apply no restrictions to private importations of alcohol purchased duty paid in another EU country by travellers for their own use. The definition of "own use" and the conditions applying to relief of excise duty on personal importations are contained in the Excise Duty (Personal Reliefs) Order 1992. The main criteria applied by Customs to identify goods being imported for commercial purposes under the personal reliefs provisions are defined in paragraph 5 of the order.

Educational Trusts

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the School Fees Insurance Association concerning the taxation of educational trusts; and if he will make a statement. [28321]

Mr. Jack: Following the Charity Commissioners' recent decision that certain educational trusts are not truly charitable, I met representatives of the trusts concerned, including the SFIA, on 9 May, when I learned of the discussions they have been having with the Charity Commission and the Inland Revenue about ways of addressing current issues.

Income Tax

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what would be the yield of a 50 per cent. rate of tax starting at £50,000 and a 60 per cent. rate starting at £100,000; and how many taxpayers would be involved; [28314]

(2) what would be the yield of a 50 per cent. rate of tax starting at £50,000; and how many taxpayers would be involved; [28312]

(3) what would be the yield of 50 per cent. rate of tax starting at £100,000; and how many taxpayers would be involved. [28313]

Mr. Jack: Estimated full-year yields, 1996–97 income levels, are given in the table. The estimates of income tax yields do not take account of any behavioural effects which might result from the introduction of the increases in tax rates.

Lower limit of taxable income for the 50 per cent. rate £	Full-year revenue yield[1] at 1996–97 income levels £ billion	Number of taxpayers affected Thousands
50,000	2.3	450
100,000	1.1	110
50,000 (and with 60 per cent. rate above 100,000)	3.4	450

[1] including the consequential effects on the yield of capital gains tax after allowing for likely changes in the volume of disposals.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update his answer to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths) of 31 October 1995, Official Report, columns 151–52, on gross income and income tax liability by income band for 1996–97. [28581]

Mr. Jack: Available estimates are given in the table. It is not possible to provide reliable estimates for the specified bands of income above £100,000, nor is it possible to incorporate the detailed effect of mortgage interest relief which, in total, reduces income tax liability by £1.2 billion for taxpayers included in the table.

1996–97	Gross income[1] £ millions	Income tax liability[2] £ millions	Number of taxpayers (thousands)

Tobacco Products

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures are being proposed by Her Majesty's Government to create greater tax harmonisation on tobacco products within the European Union. [29163]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Government will continue to take every opportunity to press the case for higher minimum rates of excise duty on tobacco products.

Welsh Language Birth Certificates

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to make available birth certificates in the Welsh language for babies of Welsh parentage born in England; and if he will make a statement. [28902]

Mrs. Angela Knight: There are no immediate plans to make available birth certificates in the Welsh language for Welsh babies born in England.

The White Paper "Registration: proposals for change", Cm 939, published in 1990, recommended that such events be registered in a bilingual—Welsh and English—register held by the Registrar General from which certificates could be issued when required. The Government remain committed to implementing the White Paper proposals when parliamentary time permits.

Inland Revenue (National Insurance Charts)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many complaints the Inland Revenue has received regarding late delivery to small firms of charts for calculating national insurance contributions of employees. [28747]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 13 May 1996]: The Inland Revenue head office, which had responsibility for monitoring the west midlands combined pack trial, received one complaint about the late arrival of material.

PRIME MINISTER

Isle of Skye (Visit)

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Prime Minister if he has any plans to pay an official visit to the Isle of Skye. [28020]

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 14 May. [28291]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Roger Evans: The number of unemployed claimants in Great Britain on 10 August 1995 who had their unemployment benefit reduced under section 30 of the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992 was 17,000. Of these, 8,000 had their unemployment benefit fully abated.

Suspension of Benefits

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many awards of benefit he has suspended under regulation 37 of the Social Security (Claims and Payments) Regulations 1987 in each year since 1990. [29383]

Mr. Roger Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South (Mr. Donohoe) on 10 May, Official Report, columns 277–78.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Independent Schools

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many independent schools there are in the United Kingdom; and how many are registered as having charitable status. [29068]

Mrs. Gillan: There are currently 2,275 independent schools in England registered with this Department. Of those, 1,323 have informed us that they have charitable status. Questions regarding independent schools elsewhere in the United Kingdom should be addressed to my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, and for Wales and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Drugs (School Inspectors)

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what provision is made to ensure that schools inspectors are able properly to assess the efficiency of a school's drugs policy and drugs education performance. [29307]

Mr. Robin Squire: This is a matter for Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to my hon. Friend.

Hurworth School

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the total cost of the inquiry into allegations of misinformation concerning the ballot on grant-maintained status at Hurworth school; and if she will publish the evidence collected during the course of this inquiry. [29178]

Mrs. Gillan: Costs to the Department of the investigation are part of normal running costs and cannot readily be calculated as they involve a range of staff who also have other responsibilities. The evidence collected during the course of investigations into ballots for grant-maintained status is not published. Those who provide evidence may prefer their comments not to be made public. In the case of the investigation concerning Hurworth school, some respondents specifically asked that their evidence be treated in confidence.

University Funding

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has had on the need to restore the capital allowance for university equipment and minor works and on the need for stability in the level of funding received per student; what replies have been sent; what action she is taking; and if she will make a statement. [28662]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has received a large number of representations about higher education funding. The UK HE sector is currently receiving £7 billion in public funding, 20 per cent. of the funding for education as a whole. That is a large sum, and a substantial share of available resources. We are working with the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals and other HE bodies to collate evidence about the effects of levels of public funding on universities, and to consider the private finance initiative in HE.

Job Clubs

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many professional and executive job clubs have been closed in the last two years; and in which areas. [28900]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Michael Meacher, dated 14 May 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about Jobclubs. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

The Employment Service currently maintains a network of 1,338 Jobclubs throughout the country. This will provide places for around 204,000 unemployed people during 1996/97. This includes a number of specialist Jobclubs for particular groups of people including a number catering for the needs of unemployed executive and professional job seekers.

Decisions about the type and location of Jobclubs are made by my 154 District managers who are responsible for the delivery of the full range of Employment Service programmes within their Districts. Wherever possible they will seek to maintain a network of Jobclubs which will be accessible to the vast majority of our clients and take into account the circumstances of the local labour market. In many locations this may mean that a standard Jobclub is provided which is able to cater for a broad range of clients, including professional and executive job seekers. You may be interested to know that research has shown that 16% of the people who leave all Jobclubs to start work, take up professional and managerial positions.

Information about the number and location of executive Jobclub closures is not collected routinely. However, regional totals of the number and type of Jobclub are collected at the end of each quarter. I have therefore attached a table showing the total number of executive Jobclubs in each region on the quarter ending dates between March 1994 and March 1996.

You will note that the number of executive Jobclubs has fluctuated during the period, reflecting changing labour markets and client needs in different locations. In addition the fluctuation in the numbers will be due to different patterns of contract tendering in each region during the operational years.

You will note that there are currently around 128 executive Jobclubs which represents some 10% of the total network.

Jobclubs remain successful and in 1995/96 helped over 95,000 unemployed people find jobs.

I hope this is helpful.

Grant-maintained Special Schools

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many grant-maintained special schools have admitted pupils who do not have a statement of special educational needs. [29204]

Mrs. Gillan: Most special schools, whether local education authority-maintained or grant-maintained, may admit pupils without statements of special educational need in certain circumstances. The latest available data on the number of pupils and statements relate to January 1995, when there were two grant-maintained special schools. Both had admitted pupils without statements.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many grant-maintained special schools have admitted pupils who have statements which do not name that grant-maintained school. [29205]

Mrs. Gillan: The Department does not collect this information. Admissions to grant-maintained special schools are the responsibility of the governors, subject to admissions arrangements approved by the Secretary of State.

Primary Teacher Training

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what percentage of entrants to primary teacher training have had qualifications above GCSE or O-level in English in each of the last five years; [29206]

(2) what percentage of entrants to primary teacher training have had qualifications above GCSE or O-level in science in each of the last five years; [29207]

(3) what percentage of entrants to primary teacher training have had qualifications above GCSE or O-level in mathematics in each of the last five years. [29208]

Mr. Robin Squire: This information is not collected centrally.

Office Space

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the square footage and cost of office space rented by her Department and its agencies and the number of her Department or agencies' buildings partly, or fully unoccupied together with the square footage of that unoccupied office space and its estimated rental value where available in each of the past five financial years. [27734]

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Rossendale and Darwen (Ms Anderson) of 30 April, Official Report, column 444 on revenue spending under the private finance initiative, if he will reconcile the figures in that answer with those for spending on design, build, finance and operate road schemes in his Department's transport report 1996, Cm. 3206; and if he will provide a breakdown of these figures for each year for 1995–96 to 1997–98. [29220]

Mr. Watts: The figures given in my answer of 30 April to the hon. Member for Rossendale and Darwen (Ms Anderson) were current estimates of the revenue spend by my Department on all private finance initiative projects, not design, build, finance and operate road schemes alone.

Air Traffic Control

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the regulations on the award of contracts for local air traffic control in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement on the criteria upon which the contracts tendered this year for Glasgow airport and Edinburgh airport will be awarded. [29341]

Mr. Norris: Provision of air traffic control services in the UK must be in line with approvals granted by the Civil Aviation Authority under article 77 of the Air Navigation (No. 2) Order 1995. Before it grants such approvals, the authority must satisfy itself that the applicant is competent to provide a safe service, having regard to organisation, staffing, equipment, maintenance and other matters. Any air traffic controllers employed by the applicant must also obtain a licence from the authority under the terms of article 81 of the order.

The criteria for awarding the ATC supply contracts for Glasgow and Edinburgh airports are a matter for BAA plc, the owner of both airports.

Railways (Disabled Access)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on which rail lines wheelchair users are required to travel in the guard's van; and if he will make a statement. [23187]

Mr. Watts: The necessity for wheelchair users to travel in the guard's van is becoming increasingly rare. The extent to which train operating companies operate accessible trains in which wheelchair users are carried in the passenger saloon is as follows:

Anglia Railway Train Services Ltd. All trains used are accessible.

Cardiff Railway Co. Ltd. The company hires one inaccessible loco-hauled train from a private company. It is used to make one journey and back from the valleys to Cardiff on Mondays to Fridays at peak times. Otherwise the company operates an entirely accessible fleet of diesel Sprinters and Pacers.

Central Trains Ltd. Central Trains mostly operates accessible modern electric trains and Sprinters. They have a few inaccessible electric multiple unit trains used on CENTRO, West Midland Passenger Transport Executive, services in and around Birmingham and on a few services between Birmingham and Liverpool.

CrossCounty Trains Ltd. All trains used are accessible.

Some suburban trains in and around Greater Manchester are formed of older inaccessible DMUs and EMUs.

Modern accessible EMUs are used on a local service between Doncaster and Leeds. Local trains between Leeds/Bradford and Ilkley/Skipton are operated on behalf of the West Yorkshire Passenger Transport Executive using older inaccessible EMUs.

Some inaccessible older DMUs and EMUs are used on suburban services in and around Edinburgh and Glasgow; in the latter on behalf of Strathclyde Passenger Transport Executive. Last summer, ScotRail also hired one inaccessible loco-hauled train from a private company that was used for one round trip each day between Inverness and Edinburgh.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance he has given to the franchise director in respect of train operating companies guaranteeing disabled access to train. [25503]

Mr. Watts [pursuant to his answer, 23 April 1996, c. 76]: None. The Rail Regulator is responsible for protecting the interests of disabled rail passengers. All train and station operators are required to submit for the regulator's approval, a disabled people's protection policy, as a condition of being granted a licence to operate. Details of the accessibility of rolling stock were set out in my answer to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms Short) today.

"Rail Travel for Disabled Passengers"

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects that a new edition of the pamphlet, "Rail Travel for Disabled Passengers", covering the period after 1 June 1996 will be published. [29061]

Mr. Watts: The new edition of "Rail Travel for Disabled Passengers", covering the period from 2 June to 31 December 1996, will be published shortly and made available by 2 June.

DEFENCE

GEC Defence Projects

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were (a) the out-turn prices and (b) the estimated prices at the time of Ministry of Defence approval, (c) the actual time and (d) the estimated time of completion in respect of each defence project valued at over £50 million undertaken for the Ministry of Defence since 1979 by GEC, where (i) GEC was the prime contractor and (ii) GEC was a member of a consortium with joint and several liability. [28639]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Cadet Forces

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral answer of 7 May, Official Report, columns 10–11, what were, in each of the last five years, the number of air training corps cadets, the resources made available for ATC cadet training and the flying time per cadet; and if he will make a statement as to the current planned provision of flying instruction. [28904]

Mr. Soames: The number of enrolled air training corps cadets and the resources made available for ATC training in the last five years is as follows:

	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Number of enrolled air cadets	34,606	35,296	35,551	35,488	[1]34,861
ATC budget (cash costs) £ million	16.2	18.4	19.0	19.8	21.0

[1] Averaged over three quarters.

The average cadet flying sortie in the last five years was some 29 minutes. Not all air cadets fly on an annual basis, while others take more than one flight. Under current planned provision for flying instruction, each air cadet will continue to have the opportunity to fly once a year.

Low Flying

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many confirmed breaches of low flying regulations occurred at Caerlaverock in Dumfries and Galloway, in each of the last three years; how many of such breaches led to formal disciplinary proceedings; and what is being done to reduce the number of breaches in that area. [28714]

Mr. Soames: The numbers of breaches of the Wildfowl and Wetlands Trust avoidance area at Caerlaverock confirmed by RAF police investigations in each of the last three years are as follows. One alleged breach in 1995 is still under investigation.

1993: 12

1994: 22

1995: 15.

In four of the incidents in 1994, the aircraft concerned were also found to have breached regulations by flying in low flying area 16 of the United Kingdom low flying system without proper authorisation.

Formal disciplinary action under the service discipline Acts has not, to date, been taken as a result of any of the breaches listed.

Measures have been taken to reduce the number of breaches of the avoidance area. The site has been granted permanent avoidance status, thereby ensuring that it is marked on navigation charts and aircraft moving map displays, and instructions have also been issued at senior level reminding air crew of the need to ensure observance of all avoidance areas, including Caerlaverock, and the possible consequences of not doing so.

Tornado and Hercules Contracts

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to make a statement about the final cost to his Department of the contracts awarded to Airwork for the Tornado F3 and Hercules. [29225]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In respect of the work performed on Tornado F3 aircraft, my Department is continuing to pursue the claim which it has lodged against Bricom Group Ltd., the then owners of Airwork, to recover the costs of repairing damaged aircraft and the Departments' other consequential costs. It is not yet possible to say when a settlement will be reached.

The damage which occurred to Hercules aircraft during work undertaken by Airwork was rectified by Shorts—the new owners of Airwork—at their own expense. All the affected aircraft have been returned to RAF service.

Manufacturing Projects

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the military defence manufacturing projects now taking place between member states of the Western European Union, indicating the value to the United Kingdom of each project. [28973]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Member to table 10 on page 66 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1996", which includes details of collaborative projects between the United Kingdom and other member states of the Western European Union. Apart from the projects that are in development and production, manufacturing work is still continuing to produce spares for equipment that is currently in service; the value to the United Kingdom of these projects could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, the total costs of many of these projects are included in the "Major Projects Report 1994," a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Consultants

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total cost to date of the employment of consultants for his Department's married housing quarters sell-off. [29342]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Further to my answer of 19 December 1995, Official Report, columns 114–15, the total cost to date of the employment of consultants since we began to develop the proposal to transfer the married quarters estate to the private sector announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 30 November 1995, Official Report, columns 810–11, amounts to some £3.5 million, exclusive of VAT, on the basis of invoices received by the end of April.

Chemical and Defence Establishment

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what work has been carried out at the chemical and defence establishment, Porton Down, to assess whether and how LSD could be used in interrogations; what were the conclusions of this work; and if he will make a statement. [29344]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive, DERA, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. David Clarke, dated 14 May 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the possible use of LSD in interrogations at the Chemical and Biological Establishment (CBDE) as Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) which now includes the former CBDE in one of its divisions.

The Chemical and Biological Defence Sector (CBD) of what is now known as the Protection and Life Sciences Division (PLSD) at Porton Down has no record of any work being carried out to assess whether and how LSD could be used in interrogations. The work which was undertaken at Porton Down was aimed at ascertaining the effects of LSD on service personnel in operational circumstances.

I hope this is helpful.

Army Training (Video)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the release of video footage of Army training by the Northern Ireland training advisory team. [29343]

Mr. Soames: Video tapes used to debrief soldiers during pre-Northern Ireland training were passed by the BBC to the Ministry of Defence on 8 May; they had apparently been bought by a third party in Coventry. Urgent steps are being taken to prevent any recurrence of this incidence, and a full assessment of any implications for current military operations in Northern Ireland is being made.

As a police investigation is now in hand it would be inappropriate to comment further.

The continued safety of our troops in Northern Ireland is of paramount importance.

Baltic Peacekeeping Battalion

Sir Peter Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance the United Kingdom will continue to give to support the development of the Baltic peacekeeping battalion. [29528]

Mr. Soames: The UK, together with other NATO allies—Denmark, France, Germany, the Netherlands, Norway and the USA—and Sweden and Finland, has been involved in the training and development of the Baltic peacekeeping battalion since 1994. This programme, which includes English language training and training by the Royal Marines in basic infantry skills, will continue until late 1997. In addition to training provision, the UK—as part of an international equipment package—has provided 38 Carl Gusav anti-tank weapons to the peacekeeping battalion. These weapons are surplus to UK requirements and are non-offensive weapons suited for defensive purposes in a peacekeeping environment. These will be delivered today.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fish Quotas

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Government will table proposals in Brussels (a) to stop quota hopping and (b) to increase British quotas for the United Kingdom fishing industry. [28915]

Mr. Baldry: I refer my right hon. Friend to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Minister in the House on 5 March Official Report, column 130. The Government intend to table proposals to address the problem of quota hopping at an appropriate stage in the intergovernmental conference.

Feedstuff Ingredients

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the categories of (a) feedstuffs and (b) additives permitted for sale for feeding to (i) cattle, (ii) sheep, (iii) pigs and (iv) poultry, indicating the regulations applying to each category; [28712]

(2) if he will list the categories of (a) foodstuffs and (b) additives permitted for sale for feeding to fish for human consumption, indicating which regulations apply to each category. [29067]

Mrs Browning: There is no list of permitted food ingredients for animals, including fish. However, the Feeding Stuffs Regulations 1995, S.I. 1412, contain detailed provisions on the composition and labelling of feedingstuffs and a list of permitted feed additives. A copy of the regulations is in the Library of the House.

Specified Bovine Materials (Handling)

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what were the results of the state veterinary service's visits to abattoirs to monitor the handling of specified bovine materials in the period January to April 1996; and if he will make a statement. [29687]

Mr Douglas Hogg: The State Veterinary Service is continuing its programme of unannounced visits to all plants handling specified bovine material. In the first four months of 1996, 1,196 visits to abattoirs have been recorded. Of these, 1,148 or 96 per cent. found the handling of SBM to be fully satisfactory. Of the four per cent. of cases where deficiencies were reported, not all—for instance, poor record keeping—presented a risk to public or animal health. There were only four incidents recorded where pieces of spinal cord had not been completely removed from the spinal canal. No such incidents have been reported since 20 March, some seven weeks ago.

I will ensure that a note is placed in the Library of the House regularly to update these figures.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Skills Audit

Mr. Byers: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister on what dates he has received written representations from the Secretary of State for Education and Employment about the skills audit. [28954]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The Secretary of State and I have worked together closely on the audit since it was announced in the last competitiveness White Paper.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 7 May, Official Report, column 113, which department is responsible for conducting the skills audit; with which countries the United Kingdom's skills level and performance will be compared; if it will include consideration of the performance of the Untied Kingdom schools system; and if he will make a statement. [28943]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The skills audit has been conducted by an ad hoc interdepartmental group under the chairmanship of the Cabinet Office, with the support of a Department for Education and Employment chaired working group. The remit of the audit was to examine the UK's performance at the level of basic qualifications for employment and to compare it with those of our leading competitors. It will be published in the summer in parallel with the third competitiveness White Paper.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Colliery Tips

Mr. Batiste: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the value of the colliery tips still held by British Coal; and what receipts to public funds he estimates will accrue from their disposal in (a) the current and (b) the next financial year. [28857]

Mr. Page: The valuation of British Coal's property, including colliery tips, and the likely proceeds from their disposal is a commercial matter for the corporation.

Mr. Batiste: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if British Coal is subject to the scrutiny of the Comptroller and Auditor-General in the disposal of its surplus colliery tips. [28855]

Mr. Page: The Comptroller and Auditor-General is not the external auditor of British Coal and has no statutory right of access to its records. He can, of course, look at the Department's activities in relation to its sponsorship of British Coal.

Mr. Batiste: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what mechanisms exists to ensure that British Coal obtains value for money in its disposal of colliery tips; [28853]

(2) what guidelines he issues to British Coal in respect of obtaining the best price for disposals of colliery tips. [28854]

Mr. Page: The disposal of its non-operational property, including colliery tips, is a matter for British Coal. However, British Coal must comply with its statutory duties under section 11 of the Coal Industry Act 1994.

Advanced Gas-cooled Reactors

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what liability for (i) the management of spent fuel following AGR station closure, and for reprocessing of the final core, (ii) stage 1 AGR decommissioning payments, (iii) the decommissioning of British Nuclear Fuels plc, AGR-related facilities and (iv) the management and disposal of intermediate and high level AGR wastes will fall upon (a) the British Energy segregated fund and (b) other bodies; and if in each case he will list those bodies. [29229]

Mr. Eggar: British Energy will be responsible for all the fuel cycle and decommissioning liabilities associated with its nuclear power stations. The segregated fund will cover all the longer term post-closure costs of decommissioning British Energy's nuclear power stations and their sites, in accordance with decommissioning strategies agreed between the company and the regulator, the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate. It will, therefore, include the post-closure costs related to the care and maintenance and ultimate decommissioning of any on-site long-term spent fuel storage facilities if they become part of a future agreed strategy.

General Utilities and Mid Kent Holdings plc

Mr. Brazier: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what waiver he has given to General Utilities in respect of its undertaking of 21 March 1991 in respect of Mid Kent Holdings plc; and if he will make a statement. [28975]

Mr. John M. Taylor: No waiver has been given to General Utilities. The company remains bound by the undertakings given on 21 March 1991.

Company Auditors

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has received the fourth annual reports on the recognised supervisory bodies for company auditors under part II of the Companies Act 1989; and if he will make a statement. [29631]

Mr. Oppenheim: I have received the fourth annual reports of all the recognised supervisory bodies for company auditors, and have placed copies in the Library of the House. My Department will be discussing the contents of the reports with the bodies as necessary.

Company Directors

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the number of individuals disqualified from acting as company directors in each of the last 10 years. [29015]

Mr. Oppenheim: As this is a day-to-day matter dealt with by Companies House executive agency, I have asked the chief executive to reply to the hon. Gentleman in person.

Letter from John S. Holden to Mr. Derek Fatchett, dated 14 May 1996:

You recently asked the President of the Board of Trade for information about disqualified directors. As Companies House Executive Agency has the responsibility for maintaining these statistics, I have been asked to reply to you.

Company Collapses

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will investigate the circumstances leading to Homepower Retail Ltd. and Power Store Trading Ltd. reducing a £7 million trade surplus and going into administration. [29260]

Mr. Oppenheim: If the hon. Member or any other person has any information which suggests that there has been any fraud or misconduct in connection with the affairs of the companies, he should send it to my investigations and enforcement directorate at room 707, 10 Victoria street, London SW1H ONN.

The Secretary of State will await the report on the conduct of the directors which is due to be made under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 within six months of the appointment of the administrators.

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action he intends to take to assist Homepower retail customers who have paid for goods which they have not received. [29259]

Mr. Oppenheim: The administrators have identified a number of customers who have paid all or part of the cost of goods which have yet to be supplied. I am advised that on 1 May 1996 Mr. Duggins, one of the joint administrators, wrote to each of these customers advising them of the various actions they could take and asking them to complete a claim form. Prior to the appointment of administrators, the directors set up trust accounts with a view to protecting customers against loss of payments made for undelivered goods. The administrators are investigating the position and there is a possibility that customers may eventually recover some or all of their money from this source.

If any such customers have not yet heard from the administrators it is suggested that they contact Mr. Duggins at Arthur Andersen, 1 Victoria square, Birmingham B1 1BD, telephone 0121 233 2101.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 9 May 1996]: I and the Director General of Telecommunications have received a number of representations regarding engaged call charging by British Telecom. Royal Mail is committed to a policy of no change to post codes unless it becomes operationally necessary to do so. To minimise disruption to all customers, Royal Mail has a code of practice which must be followed whenever a post code is to be changed.

HEALTH

GP Fundholders (Doncaster)

13. Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the amount of underspend in the budget of GP fundholders in Doncaster for 1995–96. [27993]

Mr. Malone: The information will not be available until the accounts have been audited.

Nationally, general practitioner fundholders have consistently achieved efficiency savings of between 3 and 4 per cent. of budgets set.

Waiting Times

14. Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in reducing the time patients have to wait for hospital and out-patient treatment. [27994]

Mr. Horam: Excellent progress has been made in reducing waiting times for all aspects of national health service treatment. At 31 March 1996 fewer than 4,400 patients had been waiting more than a year for inpatient or day case treatment. This is a significant improvement on the position only a year ago when there were more than 32,000 12-month waiters. Also for the first time no 18-month in-patient waits have been reported. For out-patients the latest available figures show that 97 per cent. of patients were seen within 26 weeks of referral and 83 per cent. seen within 13 weeks.

27. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current normal waiting time for a specialist consultation for a non-urgent illness. [28007]

Mr. Horam: Waiting times for out-patient appointments vary between trusts and between specialties.

The patients charter requires that all patients should be seen for their first out-patient appointment with a consultant within 26 weeks of a written referral from a general practitioner, with nine out of 10 seen within 13 weeks.

Of the 1,904,000 patients seen during the quarter ended 31 December 1995, 83 per cent. waited under 13 weeks and 97 per cent. under 26 weeks.

South Essex Health Authority

15. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what percentage the funds provided to the Southend health authority have increased this year; and what is the relative national increase. [27995]

Mr. Horam: In 1996–97 South Essex health authority, which includes Southend has received a cash increase of 7.1 per cent. for hospital and community health services, which compares very favourably with the national increase of 3.9 per cent.

Community Psychiatric Nurses

16. Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of the supply of community psychiatric nurses. [27996]

Mr. Horam: Work force planning and decisions about the demand and supply of qualified nursing staff are most effectively taken by local employers.

The whole-time equivalent number of nurses working in this area rose from 1,880 in 1984 to 4,760 in 1994.

Care in the Community

17. Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he is taking to reform the care in the community programme. [27997]

Mr. Bowis: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State published the Government's proposals for helping people to make better provision for their long-term care needs on 7 May.

NHS Trusts (Board Members)

18. Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he collates on the outside interests of board members of NHS trusts. [27998]

Mr. Malone: None. It is the responsibility of the board of each national health service trust to ensure that information on any relevant private interests of members is collected and maintained in a register of interests, which is available for inspection by the public.

GP Fundholding

19. Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to extend GP fundholding. [27999]

Mr. Malone: Fundholding continues to grow every year. This year has seen a record number of general practitioners entering fundholding, and more are applying to join from next April.

29. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of general practitioners are fundholders. [28009]

Mr. Malone: This year has seen a record number of general practitioners entering fundholding. Since 1 April approximately 51 per cent. of GPs are fundholders, serving 52 per cent. of the population.

London Initiative Zone Scheme

20. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many projects have been funded through the London initiative zone scheme; and if he will make a statement. [28000]

Mr. Malone: The London initiative zone scheme is a five-year programme which is not yet complete. At its start in 1993–94, nearly 1,000 projects were included in LIZ health authorities' plans to develop primary care services in the capital.

East Lancashire Health Authority

21. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that NHS patients within the East Lancashire health authority area who are registered with doctors in an adjacent health area are not transferred to another doctor against their wishes. [28001]

Mr. Malone: None. General practitioners have the right, subject to certain safeguards, to remove patients from their lists without giving a reason. Similarly, patients have the right to withdraw from a doctor's list without giving reasons. In order to ensure that no patient is unable to register with a doctor, GPs are required to agree with their health authority the geographical area within which they are willing to accept patients. It is sometimes necessary, for example due to a sudden influx of patients onto their list, for GPs to re-define their practice area. Any patient who is registered with a GP but lives outside the GP's geographical area, and who is then removed from that GP's list, can expect the local health authority to find them another GP within two working days. The national health service now achieves this standard fully.

Dental Services

22. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of NHS dental provision; and what new initiatives he is taking to provide such facilities in areas at present without such a service. [28002]

Mr. Malone: We regularly monitor the provision of national health service dental services across England. Our record bears out the Government's commitment to NHS dentistry:

- At 31 December 1995 there were 15,942 NHS dentists on the lists of health authorities in England, the highest December figure ever. This is 516 more dentists than at 30 June 1992 and 3,796 more dentists than at 30 September 1979.
- At 29 February there were 26.4 million patients registered in England. This is broadly in line with the position at 30 June 1992, given operational and seasonal factors.
- In 1994–95 gross expenditure on general dental services in England was £1,279 million, an increase in real terms of nearly 60 per cent. since 1978–79.
- In 1994–95 there were 3.7 million more adult dental examinations in England compared with 1979.

Health authorities can advise patients about where to obtain NHS dental services and are able to use various measures, such as employing salaried dentists to ensure adequate availability of NHS dental services. We keep such measures under review so that they remain appropriate to current circumstances. We are also discussing with the dental profession a range of issues aimed to reform dental services. In the longer term we aim to put in place a purchaser/provider system which will be sensitive to local needs.

Private Finance Initiative

23. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been raised for the NHS through the private finance initiative. [28003]

Mr. Horam: An estimated £50 million of capital funding was made available by the private sector in 1995–96 for private finance initiative schemes in the national health service.

District General Hospital, Dartford

24. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will report progress on the proposed district general hospital in Dartford. [28004]

Mr. Horam: Dartford and Gravesham NHS trust has now shortlisted two consortia, and expects by August to be in a position to seek formal approval to award the contract for the proposed hospital.

Inadequate Housing (Effect on Health)

25. Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to address the health needs of people living in inadequate housing. [28005]

Mr. Horam: Health may be affected by a number of factors, and it is difficult to quantify the effects of any one of them. It is for clinicians to treat patients to the best of their ability, whatever the cause of their illness.

Cheviot and Wansbeck NHS Trust

26. Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions his Department has had with the Cheviot and Wansbeck NHS trust regarding the funding of its phase II development; and if he will make a statement. [28006]

Mr. Horam: The outline business case of the phase II development at Cheviot and Wansbeck NHS trust was approved by the National Health Service Executive in January 1996, following appraisal and meetings with the trust. The scheme is now being tested under the private finance initiative.

NHS Building Projects

28. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will report progress on the number of major NHS building projects (a) presently under construction and (b) planned to start imminently. [28008]

Mr. Horam: There are currently 71 major national health service building projects under construction. Information about schemes planned to start imminently is not collected centrally.

30. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he had made of the current availability of paediatric intensive care beds. [28010]

Mr. Horam: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has asked the chief executive of the National Health Service Executive to report to him on the development of paediatric intensive care. This report will be published shortly.

Operating Theatres (Dress)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring in regulations to require non-medically qualified persons viewing surgical operations (a) to conform with standard requirements concerning appropriate dress and (b) to be free of (i) jewellery (ii) make-up and (iii) other accessories. [28468]

Mr. Horam: It is for each national health service trust to ensure that it has effective local protocols, based on appropriate professional advice, for determining and maintaining safe and appropriate levels of cleanliness in operating theatres.

Asbestos (Cancer of the Larynx)

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been commissioned by his Department into links between the use of asbestos and cancer of the larynx. [28859]

Mr. Malone: None.

Suicide

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the relationship between individual anti-depressant drugs and suicide deaths; and if he will make a statement. [28692]

Mr. Bowis: We commissioned and evaluated an effectiveness bulletin, "The Treatment of Depression in Primary Care", which includes reference to 1990 data on death rates by poisoning from anti-depressant drugs. Copies of the bulletin are available in the Library.

Brain Search Facilities

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the (a) centres and (b) hospitals which provide minute brain search facilities; and if he will make a statement. [28633]

Mr. Horam: In England, national health service trusts with acute hospital facilities have access to neurological and neurosurgical services, which would include facilities for undertaking investigations of the brain.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of CJD have been identified in the United Kingdom in each of the past five years analysed by the age group of the sufferer; and if he will indicate in each case his Department's assessment of whether a genetic component contributed to the condition. [28591]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 1 April at column 46. The national Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease surveillance unit carries out genetic investigations on cases of CJD referred to it. Approximately 10 per cent. of cases occur in clusters in families with an inherited genetic disposition.

Doctors

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Sectary of State for Health how many (a) junior doctors, (b) middle range doctors and (c) consultants were employed in each health authority or family health service authority at 30 December for each of the last 20 years. [29203]

Mr. Malone: Information on the number of doctors by grade is contained in standard tables on hospital medical staff for England and Wales which are available in the Library. These provide a breakdown by regional health authority for the years 1982–94 inclusive. Information by district and for years prior to 1982 is not available.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 9 January, Official Report, column 75, if he will update the figures on vacant doctor posts. [29469]

Mr. Malone: More recent information is not yet available.

Osteosarcoma

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of osteosarcoma have been diagnosed in each of the district health authorities in the Northern and Yorkshire region since 1985. [29140]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Long-term Care

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate he has made of the cost of exempting from contributions to long-term care the value of an individual's home; [29152]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost of exempting from contributions to long-term care the value of an individual's home up to a limit of £300,000. [29151]

Mr. Bowis: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave my right hon. Friend the Member for South Norfolk (Mr. Macgregor) on 4 March at columns 82-83.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the total public cost of introducing a partnership scheme for long-term care in which the average value insurance claimable is £30,000, under (a) the option set out in paragraph 9.6 of the consultation document, "A New Partnership for Care in Old Age", and (b) the option set out in paragraph 9.7, where the number of policies purchased is (i) 10,000, (ii) 100,000 and (iii) 1,000,000; and in each case over what period of time he forecasts that the expenditure would fall. [29265]

Mr. Bowis: The cost of the scheme would depend on a number of factors, including the level of protection from means testing earned by indemnity insurance and immediate needs annuities, the number of people with partnership products who need residential care and their asset holdings.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies there are for consultants in each NHS trust. [29468]

Mr. Malone: Information on consultant vacancies in each national health service trust is not available.

Medical Locums

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 28 November 1995, Official Report, column 614, if he will provide the figures for medical locums for 1995. [29472]

Mr. Malone: Figures from the medical and dental work force census relating to 30 September 1995 are not yet available.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will itemise for each trust, by region, the level of retained surplus or deficit in 1994–95 and 1995–96. [29397]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 5 December 1995 at column 193. Information for 1995–96 will be available in December, following the publication of the national health service trust annual accounts.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what have been the costs associated with the establishment of trusts in each region in each year since 1990–91, including conveyancing costs. [29398]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 5 May 1995 at column 323.

NHS Performance

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the spending on the NHS in May 1979; how many patients were treated in the year to May 1979; and what were the equivalent figures for the last available periods. [28290]

Mr. Horam: The information is not available in the form requested. National health service total gross expenditure in England in the financial year 1979–80 was £7,755 million, compared with £31,983 million in 1994–95.

On a comparative basis that is, after converting the 1979 discharge and deaths figure to finished consultant episodes—there were 6.6 million FCEs in all hospital specialties in England in the calendar year 1979 compared with 10.5 million FCEs in 1994–95.

Hypothermia

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) incidents and (b) fatal incidents of hypothermia have occurred over the last five years in (i) London, (ii) Manchester, (iii) Cardiff, (iv) Newcastle, (v) Leicester, (vi) Derby, (vii) Nottingham, (viii) Norwich, (ix) Birmingham, (x) Plymouth, (xi) Edinburgh, (xii) Aberdeen and (xiii) Brighton. [28422]

Mr. Bowis: The information is not available in the form requested. Incidents of hypothermia in Wales and Scotland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Scotland. The available information is shown in the tables.

Diet and Behaviour (Children)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to investigate possible links between diet and disruptive behaviour and learning difficulties in children. [28933]

Mr. Horam: The Department's advisory committee—the Committee on the Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment—will be reviewing the issue of adverse reactions to food and food additives this year. The review will include assessing whether there is any firm evidence that food may affect behaviour in children.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Beef Ban (Job Losses)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated loss of jobs following the ban on Northern Ireland beef by the European Union. [28457]

Mr. Ancram: The Department of Economic Development has received notifications of 142 proposed redundancies, of which 48 have taken place. All notifications relate to the red meat sector. It is estimated that some 1,500 people have been laid off due to the bovine spongiform encephalopathy crisis.

Figures for job losses directly attributable to the export ban are not available, and a number of those affected are self-employed.

Inward Investment

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the locations of the inward investment projects promoted by the Industrial Development Board between 1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996 indicating the financial amounts in respect of each project. [29016]

Mr. Ancram: The new inward investment projects negotiated during 1995–96 by the Industrial Development Board were as follows:

WALES

Cormorants and Saw-billed Ducks

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many applications for a licence to shoot cormorants and saw-billed ducks were received by his Department in the year 1995–96; how many of these were refused; how many birds were licensed to be shot; and how many have been reported as having been shot. [28294]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Between 1 April 1995 and 31 March 1996, 15 applications for licences to shoot cormorants and goosanders were received. Two were refused. The 13 licenses issued permitted a maximum number of 37 cormorants and 38 goosanders to be shot as an aid to scaring. Reports on the number of birds shot are still to be fully completed.

Beef Producers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he proposes to assist the producers of mature beef; and if he will make a statement. [28405]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food said in his statement on 16 April, Official Report, columns 513–29, that arrangements were needed to allow back on the market meat from those breeds which often do not mature until after 30 months. Comments have now been invited from interested organisations on proposals to establish a voluntary mature beef assurance scheme. Under these proposals, those specialist beef herds where no cases of BSE have occurred would be able to sell cattle over 30 months for human consumption purposes. It is intended that they would exempt from the restriction in the Beef (Emergency Control) Order 1996.

Part-time Employment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes have taken place since 1980 as a percentage of the working population in (a) males and (b) females who have part-time jobs; and if he will make a statement. [28407]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Data on the total number of part-time jobs in Wales in 1980 is not available. Information for 1981 and 1995 is shown in the following table:

Employees in employment, part-time: Wales

	September 1981	September 1995	Change	Change as percentage of 1981 working population[1]
Males	26,100	52,200	+26,100	3
Females	158,400	230,500	+72,100	16

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is as follows:

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) deaths, (b) injuries and (c) accidents have occurred on the M4 in Wales since 1985; and if he will make a statement. [28706]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is given in the following table. The data refer to personal injury road accidents reported to the police and forwarded to the Welsh Office.

Public Bodies

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what advice has been issued to his Department by the Commissioner for Public Appointments on the need to identify political activity by persons (a) appointed and (b) re-appointed to executive non-departmental public bodies; and what guidelines his Department currently follows in this area. [28597]

Mr. Hague: Guidance on new procedures is being prepared which will take full account of the First Report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life, Cm 2850–1, and the principles and guidance published in April 1996 by the Commissioner for Public Appointments on appointments to executive non-departmental public bodies and NHS bodies. It will take effect by the target date of 1 July 1996.

Council of Agriculture Ministers

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the participation of the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones), at the Council of Agricultural Ministers on 29 to 30 April; and what formal representations were made to the council on behalf of Welsh farmers. [28617]

Mr. Hague: As a member of the UK ministerial delegation at Luxembourg, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State participated fully in developing the UK's negotiating position as events unfolded.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which towns in Wales currently have closed circuit television to assist with crime prevention; and if he will make a statement. [28652]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government have funded closed circuit television schemes in the following towns in Wales: Aberdare, Barry, Bridgend, Cardiff, Caerphilly, Colwyn Bay, Cwmbran, Haverfordwest, Holyhead, Maesteg, Merthyr Tydfil, Mountain Ash, Neath, Newport, Pontypool, Porthcawl, Rhyl, Swansea, Wrexham and Ystrad Rhondda.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his Department's policy regarding the further expansion of closed circuit television schemes in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [28698]

Mr. Jones: The Government are convinced that closed circuit television has a crucial part to play in the fight against crime, and will continue to encourage its expansion in Wales.

Independent Schools

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, by education authority area, the independent schools which have not yet received full recognition, indicating the reasons for this and the action being taken to deal with each school affected. [29288]

Mr. Richards: Independent schools are placed on the provisional register of independent schools in Wales when they are providing full-time education to five or more pupils of statutory school age and when they have provided specified information about the school, such as details about staff, to the Welsh Office. Full registration is considered by the Welsh Office in the light of advice provided by the Office of Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools who visit all provisionally registered schools at least annually. Of the 62 independent schools in Wales, eight are provisionally registered. These are as follows:

School	Local education authority
Bethany Christian School	Neath Port Talbot
Emmanuel Christian School	Caerphilly
Frontline Christian School	Bridgend
Mayflower Christian School	Torfaen
Hendre House	Pembrokeshire
Prospects Centre for Young People	Wrexham
Thaibah Muslim School	Cardiff
Welsh Centre for Conductive Education	Cardiff

The reasons why full registration has not yet been granted varies between the schools but can include concern about the breadth and balance of the curriculum, school structures and organisation or that the school has recently started and needs time to become established. In all cases, where the inspectors have identified shortcomings, the Welsh Office has written to the school concerned asking for these matters to be addressed.

If my right hon. Friend is satisfied that an independent school, whether provisionally or fully registered, is objectionable on certain grounds, including the suitability of the accommodation or instruction, the fitness of staff or the proprietor or concern about the welfare of children, he may issue a notice of complaint seeking remedies to the concerns.

SCOTLAND

Damp Housing

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of houses in Scotland suffering from (a) dampness and (b) condensation, in (i) the publicly rented, (ii) the privately rented and (iii) the owner-occupied sectors. [27557]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The available information is set out in the table. It is taken from the 1991 Scottish house condition survey. It should be noted that where a dwelling suffers from both dampness and condensation it is counted in both tables. More up-to-date information will become available when the results of the 1996 Scottish house condition survey are published in the autumn of next year.

Estimated number of dwellings in Scotland with dampness or condensation (by tenure, 1991)

Tenure	Number (thousands)
(a) Dwellings with rising or penetrating damp
Local authority, New Town, other public sector	122
Scottish Homes	6
Privately rented	35
Owner-occupied	100
Housing associations	4
All tenures	267
(b) Dwellings with condensation
Local authority, New Town, other public sector	202
Scottish Homes	15
Privately rented	33
Owner-occupied	138
Housing associations	4
All tenures	392

Approximately 110 thousand dwellings included in both the above tables had both damp and condensation.

Cockenzie Power Station

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has made an assessment of the consequences for the Scottish economy of the closure of Cockenzie power station; and if he will make a statement. [27843]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The future of Cockenzie power station is a matter for its owner, Scottish Power. I understand that the company currently plans to operate the power station until its working life expires in 2010.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current level of electricity prices to industrial and commercial customers in Scotland; what it was in 1990; and if he will make a statement. [27842]

Mr. Forsyth: Since privatisation, electricity prices charged to industrial and commercial consumers with an annual consumption of over 100 KW have been a commercial matter for the electricity supply companies and their customers. Smaller industrial and commercial customers who use less than 100 KW are normally charged under published maxium demand tariffs. Such charges have fallen by about 10 per cent. in real terms since 1989–90.

Health Service (Acute Bed Strategy)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to publish the review of the acute bed strategy; and if he will make a statement. [28173]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has received the report prepared by the review group. He will make an announcement in due course.

Crofting

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to review the level of grant and loan available under the crofter building grant and loan scheme; and if he will make it his policy that no major changes to the structure of the scheme will be introduced without full and lengthy public consultation. [28274]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: My noble Friend the Minister for Agriculture, Forestry and the Environment, had a number of discussions with crofting interests earlier in the year about a possible shift to a grant-only scheme with increased levels of grant. The views expressed were considered carefully and are reflected in the statement made by my right hon. Friend at the Scottish Grand Committee meeting on Monday 13 May.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he is taking to provide support to crofters for (a) controlling and maintaining bracken, hedges and dykes and (b) the provision or improvement of water supplies. [28195]

Mr. Robertson: Assistance for crofters is currently available through a number of schemes. The crofting counties agricultural grants scheme provides grants to crofters towards the costs of controlling and maintaining bracken, hedges and dykes, and the provision or improvement of water supplies. The agricultural business improvement scheme offers grants towards the eradication of bracken to encourage heather regeneration; the provision of dykes to exclude livestock in association with conservation management; and the provision, replacement or improvement of water supplies. The Argyll and Shetland islands environment sensitive area schemes include support for provision of dykes: the Argyll islands scheme also includes support for control of bracken in certain situations.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the budget allocation is planned to be for the crofter building grants and loans scheme in each of the next three years. [28198]

Mr. Robertson: The supply estimate provision for 1996–97 is £5.002 million. Ministers will take decisions on the level of provision for future years in the context of the forthcoming public expenditure survey.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the total payments made under the crofting agricultural grants scheme 1995–96; and if he will publish the representations he has received regarding the proposed ending of the scheme. [28275]

Mr. Robertson: The provisional outturn for payments made in 1995–96 under the crofting counties agricultural grants scheme is £3.181 million. Unless specifically requested otherwise by the consultee, responses to the consultation on proposals for a Scottish countryside premium scheme are available for public view in the Library in St. Andrew's house, Edinburgh.

Skye Bridge (Explosives)

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement into circumstances surrounding the discovery and subsequent controlled detonation of explosive material in the vicinity of the Skye bridge on 30 April; and what steps he has taken to require a full search of the bridge and its environs to ensure the removal of any other similar items. [28176]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office has recently taken receipt of a report on the incident by the Miller Group safety department following its request for an inquiry. Details of the circumstances of the incident are described in the report. I have therefore arranged to have a copy lodged in the Library.

The report concludes that the condition of the explosive material was such that its potential for causing harm was remote. It further concludes that the blasting sub-contractor had not encountered this problem before. As a consequence, the sub-contractor intends to amend his procedures to eliminate the possibility of such an incident recurring. The report will now be forwarded to the Health and Safety Executive for its attention. Both the sub-contractor and main contractor have carried out a thorough search of the area and have given their assurance that no similar items are present.

Corncrake Initiative

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Scottish countryside premium scheme will take the value of the corncrake initiative into account; and if he will make a statement. [28197]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The content of the proposed countryside premium scheme has yet to be finalised following the consultation period which ended on 30 April. Our proposals include specific measures to encourage the protection of ground nesting birds, including corncrakes.

Funding for the countryside premium scheme is separate from any support given by Scottish Natural Heritage and the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds to their corncrake initiative.

Eaglesham Bypass

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from East Renfrewshire council concerning the Eaglesham bypass; and what response he has given. [27844]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: To date no representations have been received from East Renfrewshire council on this matter.

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from the east Renfrewshire council concerning an Eaglesham bypass; and if he will make a statement. [28328]

Mr. Forsyth: No representations have been received from east Renfrewshire council on this matter. Guidance has now been issued to councils about a transport challenge fund which will operate from 1997–98. It is open to the council to submit a bid for challenge funding for the Eaglesham bypass if it wishes to do so.

Mearnskirk Hospital Site

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for the future of the Mearnskirk hospital site in Newton Mearns; and if he will make a statement. [28336]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Following full public consultation, Greater Glasgow health board will invest an estimated £4 million in a 60-bed elderly continuing care facility on the Mearnskirk hospital site. Surplus land on the site will be used for housing.

The board's plans will match local services to local needs.

Brain Search Facilities

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the (a) centres and (b) hospitals which provide minute brain search facilities; and if he will make a statement. [28635]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The majority of acute hospitals in Scotland are able to access neurological services. Neurosurgical services are provided at Aberdeen royal infirmary, Western general hospital in Edinburgh, Dundee royal infirmary and the Southern general hospital in Glasgow.

Traffic Flows (A78)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what traffic flow surveys his Department has carried out on the Ardrossan, Saltcoats and Stevenston stretch of the A78; and if he will publish the results. [28609]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Traffic flow counts have been carried out at several locations on the A78 between Ardrossan and Saltcoats over 10 and 12-hour periods on the dates shown as follows:

Date	Location	Recorded traffic flows
26 May 1994	200 metres west of Dalry Road, Saltcoats	7260 Eastbound (12 hours)
26 May 1994	As above	7480 Westbound (12 hours)
21 April 1995	Eglinton Road (At Seafield Drive), Ardrossan	4832 Southbound (12 hours)
21 April 1995	As above	4347 Northbound (12 hours)
16 November 1995	Loanhead Road, Ardrossan	5049 Westbound (10 hours)
16 November 1995	As above	5507 Eastbound (10 hours)
25 January 1996	As above	5277 Westbound (10 hours)
25 January 1996	As above	5030 Eastbound (10 hours)
29 February 199	Parkhouse Road (High Tide Bar), Ardrossan	5205 Northbound (10 hours)
29 February 1996	As above	5413 Southbound (10 hours)

There is also a census point on the route within Saltcoats which was last counted on 26 May 1994. The total two-way traffic flow recorded was 17,150 vehicle movements over a 24-hour period of which 7 per cent. were heavy goods vehicles.

In addition to this, my consulting engineers employed to plan the proposed Ardrossan, Saltcoats and Stevenston bypass have undertaken a number of traffic surveys during 1992 and 1993. This information will be contained in the environmental assessment stage 3 report which will be available for inspection by interested parties upon publication of the order.

Peter William Hurtt

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received regarding the convictions of Peter William Hurtt; on what date such representations were received; and when he expects to reach a decision. [28905]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Representations on Mr. Hurtt's behalf were sent to my right hon. Friend on 22 May 1989, on 1 September 1992, on 4 May 1993 and on 29 August 1994. The three earlier representations have already been dealt with. The most recent representations allege that new scientific evidence has come to light which casts doubt on the safety of Mr. Hurtt's conviction. My right hon. Friend hopes to reach a decision on the latest petition as soon as may be possible.

Traffic Flows (A737)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what traffic flow surveys his Department has carried out on the volume of traffic flowing along the A737 at its junction with the A738; and if he will publish the results. [28610]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No traffic surveys have been carried out at this location by the Scottish Office. However, a traffic survey was carried out about 1 mile south-east of this location on 13 June 1994 by the former Strathclyde regional council. The traffic survey produced an annual average daily flow of 10,522, of which 8 per cent. were heavy goods vehicles.

NHS Management

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 26 March, Official Report, column 581, if he will list those chief executives who were employed by one NHS employer in Scotland and who resigned to take up employment with another NHS employer in Scotland since 1 September 1994; and if he will name in each case the NHS employing organisations they (a) left and (b) took up employment with. [28604]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Mr. G. Buchanan, who resigned employment with Caithness and Sutherland NHS trust and took up employment with Moray Health Services NHS trust, is the only chief executive to resign employment from one NHS employer in Scotland and become employed by another since 1 September 1994.

Head and Deputy Head Teachers

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) staff and (b) female staff were employed at (i) head teacher, (ii) assistant head teacher and (iii) deputy head teacher levels for (1) secondary and (2) primary schools for each education authority within Scotland in September 1994. [28613]

Ambulance Base, Kyleakin

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he received in favour of the proposal to site an ambulance base at Kyleakin, Isle of Skye; and if he will make a statement. [29238]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None. However, the Scottish Ambulance Service NHS trust aims to make the most efficient and effective use of the resources at its disposal to improve the quality of service to its patients. In view of the changes brought about by the opening of the Skye bridge, the Scottish Ambulance Service has conducted a review and has concluded that the additional costs of establishing an ambulance station in Kyleakin will be justified by improved activation and response times. Highland health board, which is responsible for purchasing appropriate levels of emergency ambulance provision in the area, has supported these proposals.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will hold an inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the decision to site an ambulance base at Kyleakin, Isle of Skye, with specific reference to the prohibition upon serving personnel to discuss the issue with others; and if he will make a statement. [29239]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No. The deployment of its staff and vehicles and the siting of ambulance stations are operational matters for the Scottish Ambulance Service NHS trust to decide in agreement with the purchasing health board. The staff are fully aware of the proposals and have the opportunity to make any observations on these to senior officers of the service.

Caledonian MacBrayne

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the subsidy to be paid to Caledonian MacBrayne Ltd. for the financial year commencing 1 April 1996; what it was for the year ended 31 March; how much of the difference in the figures is attributable to the withdrawal of the Kyle of Lochalsh-Kyleakin service; and if he will make a statement. [29240]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Subject to approval of the estimates, the Government propose to make available to Caledonian MacBrayne Ltd. in 1996–97 revenue deficit grant amounting to £11.7 million. The amount of revenue deficit grant made available to Caledonian MacBrayne in 1995–96 was £8.3 million. The increased requirement for revenue deficit grant in 1996–97 reflects a number of factors, including the loss of the revenue contribution from the Kyle of Lochalsh-Kyleakin service and the cost of compliance with additional safety requirements applying to ro-ro ferries. It is not the Government's practice to disclose information about the profit or loss incurred by Caledonian MacBrayne Ltd. in providing ferry services on individual routes.

NHS Consultants

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a breakdown of the number of current vacancies for consultants in each NHS trust in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [29496]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many doctors were in higher training for consultancy positions in each year since 1990. [29498]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The latest information available centrally shows that at 30 September 1995 there were 201 consultant vacancies in the NHS in Scotland; 72 of these had been vacant for six months or more.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a breakdown, by specialist field, of the current vacancies for consultants in the NHS in Scotland. [29497]

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the revenue spending estimated by his Department in connection with the private finance initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26636]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 2 May 1996]: The estimated revenue payments which may be met from my expenditure programmes in respect of private finance initiative projects reported to the Scottish Office are, for the three years respectively (a) £12 million (b) £20 million and (c) £51 million.

Office Space

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the square footage and cost of office space rented by his Department and its agencies and the number of his Department or agencies' buildings partly, or fully unoccupied together with the square footage of that unoccupied office space and its estimated rental value where available in each of the past five financial years. [27722]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 9 May 1996]: Most of the leased office space occupied by the Scottish Office during the past five financial years formed part of the common user estate which was the responsibility of the Department of the Environment. My right hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service has provided details of rents and vacant space on the common user estate which were held centrally.

Details of payments made to Property Holdings by the Scottish Office in respect of common user estate accommodation, are shown in table 1. Information regarding offices leased directly by the Scottish Office and its agencies is given in table 2. In both cases, figures are readily available only for the last three years and information regarding vacant space during that time could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

River Pollution

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the letter of Dr. D. M. Holloway of the Scottish Environment Protection Agency eastern region of 2 April about the River Almond (a) what action he is taking to reduce ammonia concentrations elevated to levels toxic to aquatic organisms, (b) what action is available to him in respect of the deposition of sewage solids on the bed of the river, (c) what help he is giving with the construction of a trunk sewer from the Almond catchment area to Edinburgh and (d) if he will bring responsibility for abandoned minewater drainage within the control of SEPA. [27932]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 13 May 1996]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has identified the River Almond as a sensitive area under the Urban Waste Water Treatment (Scotland) Regulations 1994. This means that discharges of urban waste water from agglomerations with a population equivalent greater than 10,000 must by 31 December 1998 receive further treatment than either secondary or equivalent treatment in order that directive requirements may be fulfilled in respect of the watercourse. The Scottish Environment Protection Agency has responsibility for the regulation of discharges to controlled waters and will monitor discharges to ensure compliance with the regulations.

The East of Scotland Water Authority, however, intends that discharging into the River Almond should cease and that the proposed River Almond valley trunk sewer should take these discharges direct to Edinburgh sewage treatment works. There should then be a rapid improvement in the biological and chemical quality of the river and, in particular, a reduction in ammonia concentrations and deposition of sewage solids. The authority is at present considering using the private finance initiative to fund this project. The tendering process is likely to commence in June 1996.

Owners or operators of existing abandoned mines have a statutory defence against prosecution for permitting water from an abandoned mine to enter controlled waters. However, the Coal Authority is working closely with the Scottish Environment Protection Agency on developing a programme of projects for the treatment of minewater discharges. Discharges from mines abandoned after 31 December 1999 will be subject to regulatory control by the agency.

Fishing Safety

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total value of grant aid awarded to Scottish fishermen under the Fishing Vessels (Improvement) (Grants) scheme in each year from 1990 to 1995, and the first quarter of 1996. [29175]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 13 May 1996]: Scottish fishing vessels received a total of £4.95 million under the Fishing Vessels (Improvement) (Grants) schemes between 1990–91 and 1995–96. A breakdown of the expenditure per year is given in the table.

Year	Amount paid (£)
1990–91	611,988
1991–92	263,290
1992–93	224,951
1993–94	935,580
1994–95	1,478,303
1995–96	1,437,155

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the average length of time taken to process applications for grants awarded in Scotland under the provisions of the Fishing Vessels (Improvement) (Grants) scheme each year from 1990 to 1995. [29154]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 13 May 1996]: The Sea Fish Industry Authority administers the Fishing Vessels (Improvement) (Grants) scheme on behalf of the Government. It does not keep detailed historical records of the time taken to deal with individual applications, but I understand that the average time taken to deal with an application, from receipt to formal approval, is estimated as four weeks.

Ravenspark Hospital

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions his Department has had during the last six months with officers of Ayrshire and Arran health board and the Ayrshire and Arran community healthcare NHS trust concerning the closure of Ravenspark hospital. [29005]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 13 May 1996]: Scottish Office officials meet regularly with Ayrshire and Arran health board and the Ayrshire and Arran Community Healthcare NHS trust to discuss a wide range of issues. The health board is keeping my Department in touch with developments concerning Ravenspark hospital.

NHS (Private Contracts)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what contracts NHS trusts and health boards have entered into with private providers during the financial years (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1995–96; and if he will list the NHS bodies involved, the values of the contracts in each case, the private providers used and the nature of each of the contracts. [29074]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 13 May 1996]: Comprehensive information about the extent to which NHS trusts and health boards contract with the private sector is not available centrally.

ENVIRONMENT

Listed Structures (Demolition)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many listed buildings and other structures have been demolished since 1992. [28716]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 7 February at column 248, giving figures for the financial years 1993–94 and 1994–5. The corresponding figures for the financial year 1992–93 are:

Grade I: 0

Grade II: 0

Grade II: 68.

The Department is currently compiling figures for 1995–96. I shall write to the hon. Member once they are available.

Opencast Mining

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress is being made towards finalising the mineral planning guidance note No. 7; what representations he has received from local authorities regarding the restoration of opencast coal sites; and if he will make a statement. [29276]

Sir Paul Beresford: A draft of mineral planning guidance note No. 7 was published for public consultation in December 1995, and comments were requested by 14 February 1996. Responses were received from the local authority associations, three local authorities and the Coalfield Communities Campaign regarding the reclamation of opencast coal sites. Their comments are being carefully considered, alongside all other responses. Revised guidance will be published in due course.

Landlords (Right of Entry)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in what circumstances landlords have a right of entry to their own property without a court order. [28928]

Mr. Clappison: Landlords have a right of entry to their property where there is specific provision in the tenancy agreement or lease. They also have statutory and common law rights of entry in defined circumstances, for instance when they need to carry out repairs, or to allow them to value their interest in a property which is subject to a statutory claim by leaseholders wishing to enfranchise or acquire a new lease.

Joint Tenancies

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to issue guidance to local housing authorities on the use of joint tenancies for adults sharing a home on a long-term basis. [29580]

Mr. Curry: I have today published DOE circular 7/96, "Local Authority Joint Tenancies". Copies have been sent to all local housing authorities in England. A parallel circular has been issued in Wales. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Biodiversity Steering Group

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to respond to the report of the biodiversity steering group; and if he will make a statement. [29685]

Mr. Gummer: The UK biodiversity steering group was set up to advise the Government on the further development of the UK biodiversity action plan. The Government welcomed the group's report at its launch in December 1995. It will publish its response tomorrow under a foreword from the Prime Minister. The response will be positive and will explain how the Government, in partnership with other sectors will implement the species and habitat action plans and carry forward the other recommendations in the report. In particular it will set out a number of new initiatives it is taking to ensure that the UK maintains its leading role in the implementation of the convention on biological diversity. Copies of the response will be placed in the Library.

DEFENCE

Chemical and Biological Defence

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what chemical agents service personnel attending the defence nuclear biological and chemical centre at Winterbourne Gunner have been exposed during training courses since 1966; and what was the purpose of such exposure. [28039]

Mr. Soames: Service personnel attending courses at DNBCC have not been subjected to any chemical agents since 1980. Between 1966 and 1980, students at DNBCC were exposed to a small amount of mustard agent, equating to the size of a pinhead, on the inside of their wrists. The aim of these exercises was to prove and give confidence to the chemical agent decontamination process which students would be expected to teach to members of the service in their parent units. The practice stopped on scientific advice from the chemical and biological defence establishment because it was not compatible with emerging health and safety guidelines.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel attending the defence nuclear biological and chemical centre at Winterbourne Gunner have taken part at the same time in the service volunteers programme at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment since 1966. [28040]

Mr. Soames: No service personnel attending courses at the DNBCC at Winterbourne Gunner have participated in the service volunteers programme at CBDE Porton Down since 1988. Prior to that date, a small number of personnel may have volunteered to participate in routine short trials at CBDE, although this was not standard practice. However, while records are maintained of all volunteers attending Porton Down, DNBCC did not maintain a record of its students who may have attended trials at CBDE on an ad hoc basis. In the absence of such records, it is impossible to identify how many, if any, participants on the service volunteers programme were DNBCC students when they volunteered.

Helicopter Flying School

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress on industrial participation for the defence helicopter flying school competition. [29223]

Mr. Soames: Having reviewed our approach to industrial participation on the defence helicopter flying school competition, it has now been decided that IP proposals should be sought in accordance with MOD policy. The three bidders have been informed.

Services Airpower Doctrine

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the services doctrine on airpower was last published. [29325]

Mr. Soames: The most recent edition was published in 1993.

Redundancy Costs

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answers of 14 December 1995, Official Report, column 772 and Official Report, 21 March 1996, columns 286–87, how many redundancies there have been in each of the armed services in each financial year since 1992. [29334]

Mr. Soames: The numbers of redundancies in each of the armed services for each financial year since 1992–93 are as follows:

Year	RN	Army	RAF	Total
1992–93	400	3,338	219	3,957
1993–94	1,272	6,460	1,310	9,042
1994–95	2,440	7,015	1,639	11,094
1995–96	[1]2,400	87	2,832	5,319

[1] This RN figure covers financial years 1995–96 to 1996–97.

Nuclear Accident Exercise (Otterburn)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the scenario and aims of the nuclear weapon accident exercise due to take place between 20 and 24 May at the Otterburn ranges in Northumbria; if the guidance to civil authorities on action to be taken in the event of a nuclear weapons accident will be tested; if he will list (a) the civil authorities due to participate in the exercise and (b) the civil and military authorities from the United Kingdom and abroad invited as observers; and what is the cost of mounting the exercise. [29396]

Mr. Soames: Exercise Senator will be based on an accident during the road transportation of nuclear weapons. While the scenario and its consequences are extremely unlikely, it has been designed to fulfil the aim of testing arrangements for a full combined response by the MOD's nuclear accident response organisation and the appropriate civil agencies. It will therefore provide an opportunity to evaluate the MOD guidance which was recently issued under the title "Local Authority and Emergency Service Information on Nuclear Weapon Transport Contingency Plans". A copy of this document is in the Library of the House. There will be a wide range of civil players, including the emergency services and local authorities in the vicinity of Otterburn, and officials from appropriate government departments and other agencies at both regional and national level. Invitations to observe relevant parts of the exercise have been issued by the main participants to appropriate authorities and individuals. The costs attributable to Exercise Senator are not available centrally and this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Otterburn Ranges

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the training programmes which will be affected by the decision of Northumberland county council to delay infrastructure upgrading at Otterburn ranges; and if he will make a statement; [29159]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect on Salisbury plain training area of not proceeding with the proposed infrastructure upgrading at Otterburn ranges; and if he will make a statement. [29160]

Mr. Soames: Once developed, Otterburn will be the sole training area in the United Kingdom where multi-launch rocket system regiments can conduct live firing over land as fully integrated units. AS90 can also be fired on Salisbury plain, which is, however, the only training area that can sustain tracked vehicle manoeuvre training and exercises of armoured-mechanised battle groups, and has already reached its training and environmental capacity. Any delay to the development of the Otterburn training area would therefore have a severe impact on the Army's overall training programme, and on the operational efficiency of artillery units equipped with AS90 and MLRS.

TRANSPORT

Railway Station Operators

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make available a list of railway stations giving details of the operator responsible for each one. [29753]

Mr. Watts: Two publications giving this information have today been placed in the Library: the "Index of Britain's Stations" published by the Central Rail Users' Consultative Committee, and "A Guide to Railway Stations and Parliamentary Constituencies", produced by the British Railways Board.

Second Severn Crossing

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of the effect on the completion date of the approach roads contract to the second Severn crossing in respect of (a) opening any lanes on the approach roads and (b) opening the whole carriageway on the approach roads of (i) defects in the steel work and (ii) substandard construction materials; and if he will make a statement; [29409]

(2) what consultations he has had with the chief executive of the Highways Agency concerning the investigations by the Avon and Somerset police into the allegations of fraudulent supply of construction materials for the M4 and M5 approach roads to the second Severn crossing. [29386]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Rhodri Morgan, dated 15 May 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent questions about substandard materials and defects in steel work on the approach roads to the Second Severn Crossing.

As I said in my letter dated 2 May, defects found during inspections and problems with steel fabrication will have no impact on the opening dates for the M4 approach road.

Traffic Management will ensure that any remedial work required after the official opening will be carried out causing minimum disruption to the public.

The allegations of fraud are a matter for the Police.

Regional Airports

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent steps his Department has taken further to liberalise services to Manchester and other regional airports for airlines wishing to serve them; and if he will make a statement on the prospects for further liberalisation. [28663]

Mr. Norris: The United Kingdom already has a large number of bilateral agreements with foreign partners which allow the airlines of both sides access to regional airports in both countries. In most cases it is solely a lack of demand that inhibits the provision of services under these agreements.

Services between the USA and UK regional airports, Stansted and Luton, were liberalised last year. Since then several new services have been introduced by US and UK airlines to regional airports. Over the past 12 months, new regional rights have also been negotiated with Jordan, Mauritius, the Seychelles, the Gulf, Pakistan and South Africa. Additionally, Israel was granted a third ex gratia frequency for El Al to serve Manchester.

The Department of Transport continues to aim to liberalise its air services agreements with other countries, taking into account the interests of consumers, airlines and airports. The effect of new air services to regional airports on the regional economy is also taken into account.

Public Service Vehicle Licences

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what checks are made in respect of the criminal records of applicants for PSV licences. [29180]

Mr. Norris: Public service vehicle operators' licences are not granted unless traffic commissioners are satisfied that the applicant meets the requirements of good repute. The applicant must declare any relevant convictions that he or any of his employees have had in the last five years. In advance of the grant of a licence, the names of all applicants are circulated to the police and local authorities who have a statutory right to make a formal objection to a licence being granted.

Driving Instructors

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many approved driving instructors have been found to be in groups 5 and 6 following assessment by the Driving Standards Agency. [29545]

Mr. Norris: As at the end of March 1996, the figures were:

Grade 5: 12,748

Grade 6: 2,288.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what procedures his Department has in place to monitor the training of large goods vehicle and passenger-carrying vehicle driving instructors. [29537]

Mr. Norris: The Driving Standards Agency is working with representatives in the road haulage and training industries to produce a voluntary register of LGV driving instructors. Matters such as entrance exams and check tests, and how such a register should be administered, are currently being considered. It is hoped to introduce the register in spring 1997.

Road Maintenance

Mrs. Dunwoody: to ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many individuals have been injured as a result of road accidents attributed to (a) road surface defects, (b) road works, (c) defective or obscured road signs and (d) defective traffic signals for each of the last 10 years. [29554]

Mr. Norris: The number of casualties involved in injury road accidents where road works were present is shown in the following table:

Number of casualties from injury road accidents where road works were present: GB 1984 1984–1994

		Casualties
	At road works	All
1984	526	324,314
1985	564	317,524
1986	641	321,451
1987	665	311,473
1988	628	322,305
1989	635	341,592
1990	708	341,141
1991	628	311,269
1992	541	310,673
1993	599	306,020
1994	585	315,189

The presence of road works does not necessarily indicate that they were the cause of the accident. Information about casualties in accidents attributed to road surface defects, defective or obscured road signs and defective traffic signals is not available.

Airbags

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 26 March, Official Report, column 552, what research his Department has undertaken into injuries and fatalities occurring as a result of a front passenger seat airbag hitting a child in that seat. [29532]

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport has not undertaken any research into injuries and fatalities occurring as a result of a front passenger seat airbag hitting a rear facing child restraint.

Passenger Transport Executives

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the revenue received by British Rail for the use of its facilities for the provision of services provided by (a) West Yorkshire PTE and (b) South Yorkshire PTE in 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96; and what each of those bodies will pay Railtrack in 1996–97. [26513]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 2 May 1996]: The figures, which are set out in the table, represent BR's charges for PTE-secured rail services in PTE passenger transport areas net of ticket receipts. BR deducts the revenue from ticket sales in determining the net charges that BR makes to the PTEs. The 1993–94 figures reflect the accounting treatment applicable for that year, when the PTEs were charged only on a marginal cost basis. The figures for 1994–95 and 1995–96 reflect the full costs of rail support, including access charges and rolling stock leasing charges.

£ million

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
South Yorkshire	5.2	16.8	19.8
West Yorkshire	13.8	43.7	45.7

The relevant train operating companies, rather than the PTEs, are responsible for payments for Railtrack charges arising from rail operations.

TREASURY

Self-employment

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 27 February, Official Report, column 508, what progress has been made on extending the use of the single form; and in what areas it is now available. [29158]

Mr. Jack: Following the pilot of the single form to give the self-employed a single notification point for tax, national insurance contributions and VAT, the use of the form was extended to the whole of the country in April 1996. The form is available from tax, social security and VAT offices. The form is accompanied by a new leaflet which guides people commencing self-employment through the ins and outs of income tax, national insurance and VAT, explaining how to get things right first time. Both leaflet and form have been well received by customers.

Tax Offices

Mr. Key: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is (a) the total area of the premises, (b) the area of office space and (c) the area of office space currently in use at Salisbury tax office. [29086]

Mr. Jack: The areas of the premises, office space and office space currently used by Salisbury tax office are as follows—figures shown are in square metres:

Total area of the premises	Area of office space[1]	Area of office space used by tax office
2,903	2,903	1,326

[1] Although precise details are not known it would appear that the whole premises are for office use.

Mr. Key: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the rents, fees or charges paid by the Inland Revenue in respect of its occupation of Salisbury tax office; and to whom they are paid. [29084]

Mr. Jack: Details of the amounts paid annually by the Inland Revenue in respect of its occupation of Salisbury tax office are as follows:

Freehold property—assessed rent paid to the property	212,252.63
Advisers to the Civil Estate
Service charge paid to the Lord Chancellor's Department[1]	75,386.87

[1] Includes contribution in lieu of rates.

Mr. Key: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the rents, fees or charges paid by the Inland Revenue in respect of its occupation of Swindon tax office; and to whom they are paid. [29083]

Mr. Jack: There are two tax districts and a collection office in Swindon. The amounts paid annually by the Inland Revenue in respect of its occupation total £491,687 which includes rent, service charge and a contribution in lieu of rates. It is not possible to provide details of individual recipients and amounts paid to them as this information is commercially confidential.

Mr. Key: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is (a) the total area of the premises, (b) the area of office space and (c) the area of office space currently in use at Swindon tax office. [29085]

Mr. Jack: There are two tax districts and a collection office in Swindon. Details of the areas of the premises, office space and office space currently used by each are as follows—areas shown are in square metres:

Office	Total area of premises	Area of office space[1]	Area of office space used by tax office
Swindon 1	1,431	1,431	980
Swindon 2	1,609	1,609	1,523
Swindon Collection	864	864	624

[1] Although precise details are not known it would appear that the whole premises are for office use.

State Earnings-related Pension Scheme

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Securities and Investments Board has concluded its examination into the sale of personal pensions to those who would otherwise have remained in SERPS; and if he will make a statement. [29809]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The then Minister of State announced on 25 October 1994 by written parliamentary answer, Official Report, column 509–12, that the Securities and Investments Board would work with the Department of Social Security to investigate whether there has been widespread misselling to people who would otherwise have been contributing to the state earnings-related pension scheme. SIB is today making a statement on the outcome of its research. The results are striking, and I hope will be welcomed as positive evidence of the significant financial benefits personal pensions can bring to those who choose them.

Based on a sample, the research demonstrates that nearly all those who contracted out of SERPS stand to gain—and gain significantly—compared with the pension entitlements they would have had in SERPS. At least 96 per cent., and perhaps as many as 99 per cent., of the personal pension policyholders concerned stand to be better off—in most cases by between about 150 and 300 per cent. of the SERPS entitlement given up. That typically amounts to an extra £550 to £1,000 a year of pension rights in today's prices.

However, not all those who contracted out of SERPS are likely to share in this benefit. The research pinpointed a small minority who are likely to be worse off as a result. They may number as few as 1 per cent. of those who chose a personal pension instead of SERPS, and no more than 4 per cent. Where losses occur, they are likely to be very low—typically between £33 and £78 a year in reduced pension rights.

Of those likely to lose, most fall into the category of people with very small personal pension funds: for example, where contributions to the personal pension have ceased because the policy in question has been closed. Often the losses are associated with flat-rate charges by the pension provider, which can erode the value of the pension over time. That does not mean that everyone in this situation is bound to lose. If, for example, the pension policy is later revived, the losses may be wiped out. Those who have policies with providers who waive fixed charges in years where no money is received may not lose out at all.

In view of this, SIB has been exploring with pension providers what scope there is to help people in risk categories through altering charging structures or otherwise. I am pleased to say that action already planned by some firms should help to protect the position of vulnerable policyholders. This is a welcome step in demonstrating the good will of the industry. I challenge all firms to follow their good example.

The research published today makes it clear that a review of the kind currently being carried out for pension transfers and opt-outs would be out of all proportion to the scale of the potential losses. The scale and extent of the potential losses for those who contracted out of SERPS is in stark contrast to the evidence in relation to personal pension holders who had left occupational pension schemes. In the latter case, there was evidence of widespread misselling and loss. There is no such evidence in the case of those who contracted out of SERPS.

However, that does not leave those who may stand to lose without the means to improve their situation. Action is being taken to ensure proper information is available to all those who may be affected. SIB will produce a leaflet for policyholders in the autumn so that they are able to reach an informed view of their own position and on the courses of action that are open to them. Anyone who believes they are the victim of misselling has the option of making a complaint under the normal arrangements established by the Financial Services Act regulators.

This FSA protection, and the additional action that is planned, will ensure that ample help is available to all those who stand to lose from choosing a personal pension instead of SERPS to understand and address their situation.

SIB has acted with commendable thoroughness and diligence in pursuing its research, which places beyond doubt the very great success of the policy of giving people the option to leave SERPS, and demonstrates the very significant advantages of personal pensions for many people.

Government Deficit

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his policy to have the UK general Government financial deficit in 1997–98 at below the reference value used in the European Union's excessive deficits procedure; and if he will make a statement. [28891]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 10 May 1996]: The Government's fiscal objective is to bring the public sector borrowing requirement back towards balance over the medium term. The Budget projection of the general Government financial deficit in 1997–98 was £17 billion, equivalent to 2 per cent. of GDP. An updated forecast will be published in the summer economic forecast on 9 July.

Inland Revenue (Interest Charges)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what regulations permit the Inland Revenue to impose interest charges on money requested from taxpayers in respect of time taken by the Inland Revenue to respond to queries about the calculation of the assessment; if he will make it his policy to review the effect of this practice on the Inland Revenue response times; and if he will make a statement. [28659]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 13 May 1996]: Interest is chargeable on overdue tax under a number of statutory provisions, depending on the particular head of tax. The main provisions are sections 86, 87 and 87A of the Taxes Management Act 1970, which charge interest on overdue income tax, capital gains tax and corporation tax, and the pay-as-you-earn regulations, which provide for interest on overdue PAYE tax. The rules for charging interest are designed to encourage prompt payment and to neutralise the advantage late payers have over those who pay promptly, while aiming to recompense the Exchequer for the loss of taxes paid later than the due dates laid down by Parliament.

The Inland Revenue aims to reply to inquiries about assessments within 28 days, but there may be good reason why it cannot meet this target. However, if there is a long delay by the Department, for which there is no good reason, it will give up interest on tax that was unpaid during the period of the delay. The Inland Revenue publishes the rules on this in its code of practice on mistakes.

Earnings Statistics

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the percentage of full-time workers in England and Wales with gross weekly earnings both including and excluding overtime, of less than (a) £228.68, (b) £215.47 and (c) £161.60 for the categories (1) male manual, (2) male non-manual, (3) all male workers, (4) female manual, (5) female non-manual, (6) all female workers, (7) all manual, (8) all non-manual and (9) all workers; [29165]

(2) if he will list the average gross weekly earnings, both including and excluding overtime, for (a) all manual workers, (b) all non-manual workers and (c) all workers in England and Wales; [29164]

(3) if he will list the number and percentage of full-time workers in England and Wales with gross hourly earnings, both including and excluding overtime below (a) £6.03, (b) £5.68, (c) £4.24 and (d) £3 for (1) male manual, (2) male non-manual, (3) all male workers, (4) female manual, (5) female non-manual, (6) all female workers, (7) all manual, (8) all non-manual and (9) all workers; [29170]

(4) if he will list the percentage of full-time workers (a) in Scotland and (b) in each region in Scotland with gross weekly earnings, both including and excluding overtime, of less than (i) £228.68, (ii) £215.47 and (iii) £161.60 for the categories (1) male manual, (2) male non-manual, (3) all male workers, (4) female manual, (5) female non-manual, (6) all female workers, (7) all manual, (8) all non-manual and (9) all workers; [29169]

(5) if he will list (a) the mean weekly earnings, (b) median weekly earnings and (c) the distribution of earnings for those with incomes (i) under the point below which 10 per cent. of earners fall and (b) at the point above which 10 per cent. of earners exceed, with a breakdown by (1) all manual workers, (2) all non-manual workers and (3) all workers; [29167]

(6) what was the number and percentage of full-time workers (a) in Scotland and (b) by region in Scotland with gross hourly earnings both including and excluding overtime, below (i) £6.03, (ii) £5.68, (iii) £4.24 and (iv) £3 for (1) male manual, (2) male non-manual, (3) all male workers, (4) female manual, (5) female non-manual, (6) all female workers, (7) all manual, (8) all non-manual and (9) all workers; [29166]

(7) if he will list the average gross weekly earnings, both including and excluding overtime, for (a) all manual workers, (b) all non-manual workers and (c) all workers in Scotland; and if he will provide a regional breakdown of these figures. [29168]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 13 May 1996]: Average gross weekly earnings of manual, non-manual and all workers in England and Wales are published in table X5 of "New Earnings Survey 1995", part A, a copy of which is available in the Library. The rest of the information requested is contained in several tables which I will place in the Library.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits Agency (Home Visits)

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will correct the information regarding how many home visits were made by Benefits Agency staff for the period April 1979 to March 1980 provided in the answer to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden (Mr. Dewar) on 19 July 1995, Official Report, column 1503. [29811]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table:

	April 1994–March 1995	April 1991–March 1992	April 1989–March 1990	April 1984–March 1985	April 1979–March 1980
Effective Supplementary Benefit/Income Support visits	498,819	552,191	803,795	3,001,362	3,288,025
Effective Contributory Benefit visits	49,186	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a

Data is provisional and is subject to amendment.

Benefit Payments (Service Provider)

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if a service provider has been selected to supply and operate the new technology which will automate post office counter operations with particular reference to the payment of social security benefits; and if he will make a statement. [29632]

Mr. Lilley: Pathway Group Ltd. has been selected as the successful service provider under the private finance initiative. Pathway Group Ltd. is a wholly owned subsidiary of ICL plc. Their major sub-contractors are Girobank, De La Rue and the Irish Post Office An Post.

The new benefit payment arrangements are intended to combat the deficiencies of the current system, including significant losses through fraudulent encashment, and will help to secure the future of the post office network. Introducing the new system will entail replacing order books and girocheques with a plastic card. The views of customers and their representatives have been taken into account to ensure that they, and post office staff, will find the new system easy to use.

The current planning assumption is that the first cards will be issued this autumn starting with some child benefit recipients. Other benefit groups will follow and the table sets out our current assumptions for the transition. These indicative plans will be subject to review in the light of experience. There will be a pilot of up to three months for each benefit group before full rollout commences. The length of time it will take to complete the change to card for all customers in each benefit group will depend on the rollout of automation into post offices, but we expect almost all customers to be paid by the card system by mid-1999.

Benefit Type	Planned rollout start Date
Child Benefit	October 1996
Incapacity Benefit Severe Disability Allowance Widows Benefit Maternity Allowance	February 1997

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to increase the level of control exerted by the banks involved with Motability Finance Ltd. [28605]

Mr. Burt: None. Motability Finance Ltd. is an independent company which is neither funded by, nor accountable to, this Department.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the percentage profit margin of Motability Finance Ltd. [28345]

Mr. Burt: The amount of profit the funding banks can make from taking part in the Motability scheme is currently 1 per cent. on the average value of the funds they have invested in the scheme.

Office Space

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the square footage and cost of office apace rented by his Department and its agencies and the number of his Department's or agencies' buildings partly or fully unoccupied together with the square footage of that unoccupied office space and its estimated rental value where available in each of the past five financial years. [27721]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the tables:

In response to the information required regarding properties on the Common User (Office) Estate, I refer the hon. Member to the recent reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment on 31 January, Official Report, columns 648–50.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

UN Conference on Human Settlements

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who will be representing the Government at the UN conference on human settlements in Istanbul in June; and what new proposals the Government will make to help to ensure that city dwellers in the world's poorest countries have access to adequate housing and clean water. [29275]

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will be leading the UK delegation to the UN conference on human settlements—Habitat II—which is to be held in Istanbul over the period 3 to 14 June 1996. He will be accompanied by a broad-based team, which will include representatives from both the aid and diplomatic wings of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in addition to senior members of his own Department.

The sectors in which ODA assistance can best help to contribute to sustainable development vary from country to country, depending on needs, what others are doing to tackle these needs, and our capacity to contribute.

On this basis, we are currently planning new projects in urban housing and/or water and sanitation for direct ODA funding in a number of cities in India, China and Nepal. We are also investigating possibilities for assistance in Ghana and Kenya, particularly in urban water supply. In addition, we are planning to extend our current assistance in urban areas in Pakistan and in South Africa. We will also continue to provide support to non-governmental organisations through our joint funding scheme for assistance in these sectors.

Mr. John Battle (Leeds West): To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, how much money Her Majesty's Government has contributed in support of the Angolan Community Rehabilitation and National Reconciliation Programme since its annoucement in September 1995. [29319]

Mr. Hanley: Since June 1993 the UK has committed almost £50 million bilaterally and through the European Commission to Angola. More than £13 million of this has been targeted on priority areas within the Community rehabilitation and national reconciliation programme announced in September 1995. Our ability to do more will depend on the Angolan Government efforts to expedite the peace process and to improve economic management.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners' Release Procedures

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the release procedures from gaol when the release date falls on a weekend or a bank holiday. [28718]

Miss Widdecombe: There are no plans at present to amend the current legislation.

Prison Boards of Visitors

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the members representing boards of visitors on the National Advisory Council, indicating the boards on which each serves. [28972]

Miss Widdecombe: Members of boards of visitors who serve on the National Advisory Council, including the boards they represent, are as follows:

Mr. David Emanuel Abelson OBE JP: Her Majesty's Prison Latchmere House

Mrs. Sarah (Sally) Black MBE: HMP Ackington

Mrs. Barbara Mary Vyvyan Blackburn JP: HMP Risley

Mr. Hugh John Boulter: HMP Reading

Mrs. Ruth Draycott JP: HMP The Verne

Mr. Norman William Simpson: HMP Wayland

Mrs. Anthea Rosemary Taylor JP: Her Majesty's young offenders institution/remand centre Brinsford and HMP Stafford

The Chairman of the National Advisory Council is Mrs. Ruth Draycott JP.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inquiries his Department has received from housing authorities seeking to establish whether a claimant for homelessness is also seeking political asylum. [28968]

Miss Widdecombe: Since the beginning of February this year, when a central point of contact was set up within the immigration and nationality directorate, 577 inquiries have been received from housing authorities seeking to establish whether a person seeking assistance under part III of the Housing Act 1985, England and Wales, part II of the Housing (Scotland) Act 1987 or part II of the Housing (Northern Ireland) Order 1988, has applied for asylum.

Prisoners (Private Property)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his Department's policy in respect of the restrictions on prison inmates' private property. [28971]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 15 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the restrictions on prisoners' private property.

Each prison decides on the type of property a prisoner is allowed to retain in line with Prison Standing Orders. Each prison may therefore allow different articles. Security, as well as health and safety aspects are considered before permitting each article.

As a result of Sir John Woodcock's report, volumetric control of prisoners' property is currently being introduced across the prison estate. Under this system, each prisoner may hold up to two boxes of property, plus one outsize item; legal papers; bedding; and an additional set of clothing.

Firearms

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to deal with those firearms recovered by the police during the amnesty in June; what disposal procedure was adopted during the 1988 amnesty; and if he will make a statement. [28255]

Mr. Maclean: Where a surrendered firearm is selected as being of significant scientific or historical value it will be allocated to suitably authorised, publicly funded museums or other public bodies. The remainder, probably the vast majority, will be destroyed in line with the usual practice of local police forces. Similar procedures were operated in 1988.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures, other than the national firearms amnesty, exist for members of the public to dispose legally of firearms that have been owned, or discovered, without a licence; how long these procedures have been in place; in what ways these have been publicised by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [28256]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 13 May 1996]: Whether to prosecute offences of unlawful possession of firearms is a matter for the prosecuting authorities on a case-by-case basis, but Home Office guidance to the police is that no obstacle should be placed in the way of individuals who wish to hand in unlicensed or unwanted guns, even when an amnesty is not running. Our current guidance, publicly available from Her Majesty's Stationery Office since 1989 in "Firearms Law: Guidance to the Police", underlines this advice.

Buckley Hall Prison

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer on 19 March, Official Report, column 154, on smuggling at Buckley Hall prison, what is the estimated total amount of items that have been smuggled over the prison fence since the prison was opened; what is the estimated proportion of total smuggling caused by items being thrown over the prison fence; and what is the basis for the estimate that additional fencing will reduce the potential for this method of smuggling by 80 per cent. [28955]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 15 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question, pursuant to the Director General's reply of 19 March, Official Report, column 154, about smuggling at Buckley Hall prison.

The estimated number of unauthorised items that have been smuggled over the fence since the prison opened is very small, but the smuggling of most articles at Buckley Hall prison takes place in this way.

Additional fencing has restricted the area adjacent to the perimeter fence which can be accessed by prisoners by 80 per cent.

Stage Hypnotism

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the Home Office's recommendations on stage hypnotism. [29080]

Mr. Kirkhope: I expect to be able to announce the outcome of our review of stage hypnotism in June.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he has given to instituting controls on the video taping of stage hypnotism shows and the sale of home videos. [29081]

Mr. Kirkhope: All videos, other than a small category of exempt works, must be certified by the British Board of Film Classification. It is a criminal offence to supply unclassified videos or to breach the classification certificate.

The recent report by an expert panel on the alleged dangers of participation in stage hypnotism found no evidence of serious risk. I do not therefore propose to place additional controls on videos of stage hypnotism.

Correspondence

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will respond to the letter from the hon. Member for North-East Derbyshire, reference GK/HB/060396. [28991]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 13 May 1996]: I wrote to the hon. Member on 10 May.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

HMSO (Uzbekistan)

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many consultancies were invited by HMSO to tender for the investigation of its bad debts with the public authorities of Uzbekistan. [29087]

Mr. Freeman: Earlier this year I asked Binder Hamlyn to undertake an urgent investigation of matters surrounding HMSO's trade with Uzbekistan. Binder Hamlyn was already acting as reporting accountant for the HMSO privatisation, and so had an unrivalled knowledge of the business. No wider tendering procedure was necessary or, given the urgency of the situation, desirable.

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much in fees was paid to Mr. Paul Howell by HMSO for his study of its bad debt in Uzbekistan. [29088]

Mr. Freeman: Mr. Howell was engaged by HMSO to assist in progressing its trade in Uzbekistan. It is normal policy not to disclose the terms of individual consultancy appointments for reasons of commercial confidentiality.

Central Office of Information

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress has been made in improving the efficiency of the Central Office of Information following his announcement in November that it would remain as a next steps agency. [29752]

Mr. Freeman: Following an efficiency report by Kinsley Lord, I have agreed a substantial programme of efficiency improvements and restructuring of the COI, which will in future concentrate on procurement rather than the direct provision of services. This programme is being carried forward by the chief executive, and is due to be completed by April 1997. But in view of the fact that the current chief executive is due to retire shortly, I am setting in train the process of appointing by open competition a new chief executive, who will have the responsibility of carrying forward the programme of change and ensuring the continuation of the valuable service provided by COI.

Public Appointments Unit

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the current role of the public appointments unit. [29810]

Mr. Freeman: The public appointments unit's role is as set out in "The Government's Response to the First Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life", Cm 2931. It advises, through the head of the home civil service, on certain appointments in which the Prime Minister has an involvement; maintains a central list of around 5,000 potential appointees; acts as an initial point of contact for individuals seeking public appointments; and provides Departments with names from the list suitable for specific appointments, and other relevant advice.

To keep Departments informed about this continuing role, the unit is issuing guidance on public appointment procedures which supplements that of the Commissioner for Public Appointments. I am placing copies of this supplementary guidance in the Libraries.

Chessington Computer Centre

Mr. Tracey: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make an announcement on the progress of the sale of Chessington Computer Centre. [29813]

Mr. Freeman: I told the House on 17 October last year that it was the Government's intention to sell Chessington Computer Centre as a single viable business in a way which would ensure that it retained its reputation for the provision of high-quality services to Government Departments and the wider public sector while allowing it to benefit from the freedom and opportunities for attracting new customers to be gained outside the constraints of operating within government.

A large number of expressions of interest were received following the advertisement of the sale in December last year. These have subsequently been reduced through pre-qualification and indicative bid procedures. A final shortlist of three has now been selected. Those being invited to submit final bids are:

The Capita Group

CMG Computer Management Group

The Management Employee buy-out team in partnership with Integris UK.

I believe that this shortlist will lead to final bids which maximise the prospects of securing good long-term value for money for the Government and taxpayer while meeting the objectives set for the sale of the business.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Youth Training

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of people on youth training (a) failed to complete the course and (b) failed to obtain a recognised qualification, for each training and enterprise council in the last year for which information is available. [29232]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 13 May 1996]: The available information, which comes from the national follow-up survey of youth training trainees, is contained in a number of tables and will be placed in the Library. These results are consistent with the national totals published monthly in "Labour Market Trends" . The figures overstate the extent to which young people leave the programme early. They include a significant number who simply switched from one training provider to another, as well as trainees who left early having already achieved their full qualification. Those not gaining a qualification will include many who subsequently obtained a job, or continued in further education and training.

"Going GM" Costs

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much has been spent by her Department on "Going GM" conferences; and how much has been spent on "Going GM" packs sent to schools and school governers in each of the past three years. [29335]

Mrs. Gillan: Grant-maintained information packs can contain a variety of publications, so it is not possible to identify the cost of the packs within overall spending on publications relating to grant-maintained status. The available information is set out in the following table:

Expenditure on:	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Going GM conferences[1]	270,298	222,696	217.234
GM information[2]	320,000	380,000	178,000
Total	590,298	602,696	395,234

[1] The expenditure figures for "Going GM" conferences include venue costs, the contracted support services and mailings.

[2] The expenditure figures for GM information represent the total production and distribution costs of all GM publications over the last three years.

The table refers to financial years.

Investors in People

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 30 April, Official Report, columns 41-42, how many firms with under 50 employees (a) are currently participating in investors in people and (b) have achieved the standard, (i) in total, (ii) in each region and (iii) in each parliamentary constituency. [29157]

Mr. Paice: As at 24 March 1996 a total of 10,558 firms with under 50 employees were participating in investors in people of which 1,525 firms are already recognised as having achieved the standard.

A breakdown of the figures by parliamentary constituency is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, a regional breakdown is provided in the following table:

Investors in People commitments and recognitions in firms with under 50 employees

Nursery Education Inspections

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what occupations are (a) included and (b) excluded by the provision of the substantial experience of providing for education of four-year-olds in the advertisement for applicants for registered nursery education inspectors. [29519]

Mr. Robin Squire: This is a matter for Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what instructions she has given to Ofsted in respect of persons of substantial experience in provision of education for four-year-olds in relation to applications for becoming nursery education inspectors. [29520]

Mr. Squire: The Nursery Education and Grant-Maintained Schools Bill requires the chief inspector to satisfy himself that nursery education inspectors are fit and proper persons to undertake nursery education inspections, and capable of conducting them competently and effectively, before registration.

Employees' Rights

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what provision is available to employees of executive agencies under the control of her Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) child care allowances, (n) carers' leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [27591]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 7 May 1996]: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency and the Teachers' Pensions Agency under the chief executives. I have asked for them to arrange for replies to be given.

Letter from Denyse Metcalfe to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 10 May 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about provisions for employees within the Executive Agency.

The arrangements that apply to the Teachers' Pensions Agency are the same as that of the Department for Education and Employment and I would refer you to the reply sent to you on 7 May 1996, Official Report, column 107-110.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Robert Horne to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 15 May 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question, in the absence of the Chief Executive, about provisions for employees within the executive agencies.

General guidance for employees and their managers is contained in a number of documents. The ES has nearly completed the process of putting this guidance together in 2 volumes of 'The ES and You'; the first covering 'Your rights and responsibilities' and the second 'A guide for managers'. Some of the information you request is still contained in a chapter of the old guidance which has yet to be incorporated into the new volumes. Copies of this guidance and that for personnel managers on various flexible work patterns are enclosed, and also placed in the Library. Together these will provide information on maternity leave and pay; paternity leave and parental leave; flexible working hours; part time work; leave to care for sick children; homeworking; term time contracts; carers leave and career break schemes. This covers your items a—f, h—j, n and 0.

Annual Hours contracts (item k) are not offered as standard in the Employment Service and therefore no guidance is available. Likewise, childcare allowances (item m) are not available, although the ES does pay additional childcare costs where extra hours are worked. The relevant extract from the ES guide to expenses will also be sent to you.

Job sharing (item g) is encouraged and my Personnel Managers have the flexibility to manage this locally in the light of people's requests and operational need. No central guidance is produced.

Likewise, the ES supports the establishment of workplace nurseries (item 1) and has recently opened one in Sheffield. Local arrangements vary widely depending on need and the provision already available. Often nurseries will be shared with other organisations and Government Departments and Agencies. Full details of Civil Service nursery provision is contained in the Childcare Bulletin produced by the Office of Public Service.

I hope this is helpful.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Business Employment (Strangford)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many businesses employ fewer than (a) 10, (b) 50 and (c) 100 employees in (i) Northern Ireland and (ii) the Strangford constituency. [28850]

Mr. Ancram: There are approximately 15,325 non-agricultural enterprises in the private sector in Northern Ireland which employ fewer than 10 employees; 19,669 which employ fewer than 50 and 20,182 which employ fewer than 100. Similar information for the Strangford constituency is not readily available.

Average Incomes

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the average per capita income in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) each constituency within Northern Ireland; what have been the figures for each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [28849]

Sir John Wheeler: The average gross weekly incomes in Northern Ireland, for each of the years 1990–1995, was as follows:

1994–95[1]	326.32
1993	302.71
1992	281.25
1991	285.21
1990	256.59
1989	220.46

[1] Financial year April 1994–March 1995.

This information is taken from the published results of the Northern Ireland family expenditure survey. Due to a change in definitions, the income measure for 1992 and subsequent years is not strictly comparable with those for earlier years. Information on income is not available by parliamentary constituency.

Jobs and Investment (Strangford)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern ireland what was the last project in which the Industrial Development Board was involved which resulted in investment in the Strangford constituency; what was the total amount of investment; and how many jobs were created. [28847]

Mr. Ancram: The most recent project in the Strangford constituency assisted by the Industrial Development Board was the £1.25 million investment by Lamont Textiles in the B. H. McCleary operation at Ballygowan in 1995. The project holds out the prospect of 14 additional jobs in the manufacture of polypropylene carpet yarn.

Veterinary Surgeons

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many veterinary surgeons are employed by the Government in Northern Ireland; what was the number five and 10 years ago; and if he will make a statement on the adequacy of the supply to deal with problems arising from bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [28851]

Mr. Ancram: The number of veterinary surgeons employed by the Government in Northern Ireland at April 1996 is 135, compared with 114 at April 1991 and 103 at April 1986.

The number employed is adequate to deal with present problems arising from BSE.

Traffic Offences

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the figures for traffic offences by police division between April 1994 to April 1995. [28603]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is not available in the form requested as traffic statistics are not all held on a divisional basis, nor are they held by fiscal year.

The following Northern Ireland total figures refer to the period 1 January 1994 to 31 December 1994:

	Number
Persons given advice and warning	261,472
Fixed penalty notices issued	68,294
Persons proceeded against	22,926
Total traffic offences detected	352,692

The following figures are available by division and for the period requested:

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what tendering procedures (a) are being planned and (b) have been implemented for the appointment of a voucher company for pre-school education; and when he estimates an appointment will be made. [28700]

Mr. Ancram: Advertisements have been placed in The Guardian, the Financial Times, the Sunday Times and the Times Educational Supplement seeking expressions of interest in tendering for the contract to administer the national phase of the nursery education voucher scheme. It is estimated that a contractor will be appointed by the end of September 1996.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends to publish a draft Order in Council for the proposed voucher scheme for pre-school children. [28701]

Mr. Ancram: I intend to publish a draft Order in Council, which will include provisions relating to the pre-school voucher scheme, later this year. It is not possible to give a precise date for its publication.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the administrative costs per place of the proposed voucher scheme for pre-school education. [28699]

Mr. Ancram: I am at present consulting on the Government's proposals for the operation of the pre-school voucher scheme in Northern Ireland. It would not be possible or appropriate to provide any estimate of administrative costs per place in advance of decisions arising from this consultation.

Pre-school Curriculum

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he commissioned the Northern Ireland curriculum council to prepare a pre-school curriculum; and when he expects the council to report. [28702]

Mr. Ancram: The Northern Ireland Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment was commissioned on 7 March 1996 to prepare, and consult on, a suitable pre-school curriculum and to report to the Department by 31 October 1996.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated number of cattle which will have to be slaughtered in Northern Ireland in accordance with the Government's BSE eradication policy. [28848]

Mr. Ancram: It is estimated that more than 40,000 cattle are on farms in Northern Ireland awaiting slaughter under the Government's over-30 months slaughter scheme, which came into operation recently.

Notwithstanding the requirement for slaughter under this scheme, all suspect BSE cases are slaughtered as and when they are identified.

Nursery Education

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the maximum group size and staffing ratios (a) recommended and (b) allowed in nursery education in Northern Ireland. [28703]

Mr. Ancram: The maximum group size to staffing ratio specified for nursery education in Northern Ireland is 25 children to two adults. No other maximum ratio is allowed.

Manufacturing Business

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were employed in manufacturing business in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the Strangford constituency, for each of the past five years. [28588]

Mr. Ancram: Information on the number of employees in manufacturing is obtained from the Northern Ireland census of employment, which is currently conducted every two years. The available figures are:

Employees in employment in manufacturing

	1989	1991	1993
Northern Ireland	105,631	104,840	101,840
Strangford Constituency	4,273	4,728	4,423

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

	£000
Institutions of further and higher education
North east (Magherafelt)	1,505
North west (Londonderry)	1,100
Newtownabbey	2,560

Child Support Agency

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to publish details of the targets for the Child Support Agency; and if he will make a statement. [29815]

Mr. Moss: The Child Support Agency will publish its 1996–97 business plan today. Copies will be placed in the Library.

The targets that I have set for the Child Support Agency for 1996–97 are:

A target band of between £7.9 million and £8.3 million of maintenance to be either collected, or arranged for direct payment from absent parents to parents with care.[1]

95 per cent. of payments made to parents with care to be made in 10 working days of receipt from an absent parent.

To achieve a continuing improvement in accuracy, so that in at least 85 per cent. of cases checked during March 1997 the cash value will be for the correct amount.

Where a client is dissatisfied with a child support officer's decision and requests a review, 55 per cent. to be cleared within 13 weeks; 80 per cent. to be cleared within 26 weeks; and no more than 15 per cent. to be older than six months as at 31 March 1997.

65 per cent. of new maintenance applications to be cleared within 26 weeks and as at 31 March 1997 no more than 2 per cent. of applications received by the agency to be over 12 months old.[2]

To manage the agency's resources so as to deliver its business plan within the gross budget allocation as adjusted during the course of the year; this includes the administration of the Belfast Child Support Agency Centre on behalf of the GB agency.

The targets are challenging and will require a substantial improvement in a number of areas of the agency's performance. The new targets include measures of accuracy and of the time taken to provide services. This underlines the agency's continuing focus on quality and client services in 1996–97.

[1] This target includes cases where maintenance is paid direct by the absent parent to the parent with care.

[2] For this target, applications include all cases received via the Social Security Agency or from private clients.

WALES

Speech and Language Therapists

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of speech and language therapists at each grade from spine points 23 to 27 in each of the past five years. [28446]

Mr. Richards: Reliable information for the particular spine points requested is not available. However, the total whole-time equivalent numbers of speech and language therapists directly employed by the NHS in Wales is given in the following table. Data for 1994 and 1995 may exclude a small number of staff paid on local pay scales for whom no details of occupation are available centrally.

Staff in post at 30 September (whole-time equivalent numbers)

1991: 153

1992: 168

1993: 177

1994: 180

1995: 199

Brain Search Facilities

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the (a) centres and (b) hospitals which provide minute brain search facilities; and if he will make a statement. [28634]

Mr. Richards: In Wales the majority of NHS trusts with acute hospital facilities are able to offer access to neurological services. Neurosurgical services are provided at the University Hospital of Wales and Morriston hospital. Further information should be obtained directly from the relevant chief executives.

Physiotherapists

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many placements were available for physiotherapy students for each year since 1988; and if he will make a statement. [28654]

Mr. Richards: The number of placements is dependent on the individual college's course and the requirements of the validating body. This is not recorded centrally.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of state for Wales how many people have qualified as physiotherapists since 1988; and if he will make a statement. [28707]

Mr. Richards: The number of physiotherapists qualifying has been monitored centrally only since the introduction of the towards 2000 arrangements for non-medical education and training in 1993. The figures are as follows:

July 1993: 32

July 1994: 26

July 1995: 31

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the current number of physiotherapy vacancies; and if he will make a statement. [28653]

Mr. Richards: This information is not routinely collected centrally. However, a recent survey of physiotherapy departments estimated that there were some 77 WTE vacancies in total across Wales which took account of 62 additional posts arising from local service developments over the past two years.

Teachers

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the total number of (a) male and (b) female primary and secondary school teachers; and how many (i) male and (ii) female headteachers there are in each sector in Wales. [28709]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is contained in the following table. The number of qualified teachers—full and part time—and headteachers is shown as at January 1995, for local education authority-maintained and grant-maintained schools.

Qualified teachers at January 1995

	Primary schools		Secondary schools
	Males	Females	Males	Females
Full time teachers (including headteachers)	2,430	9,412	5,807	6,049

Railway Contractors

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has made to the contractors supplying railway services between Cardiff and the north Wales coast to increase the number of through trains each day in each direction; and if he will make a statement. [28595]

Mr. Hague: None. Any increase in the number of through trains between Cardiff and the north Wales coast is currently a matter for the British Railways Board and the train operating companies concerned.

South Wales and West currently operates one through train between Cardiff and Holyhead, via Crewe. The franchising director has undertaken consultation on the draft passenger service requirements for the South Wales and West franchise. He is assessing the representations he has received and will publish the final PSR in due course. The draft PSR specifies services between Cardiff central and Crewe. Services between Crewe and Holyhead will be specified in the PSR for the North West Regional Railways franchise, which the franchising director will develop in due course. Franchise operators are free to operate services in addition to the PSR in response to demand.

Forestry

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what mechanism exists for deciding on a Welsh forest policy; [28428]

(2) how Welsh input into the evolution of United Kingdom forest policy is ensured; [28429]

(3) what direct responsibilities he has for forest policy in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [28427]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend has responsibility for forestry in Wales and, together with the Secretary of State for Scotland and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, is jointly responsible for forestry policy in Great Britain.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he has taken in respect of the conclusions of the Minister's working group on forests in Wales. [28430]

Mr. Jones: My right hon. Friend has asked the Forestry Commission, through the Forestry Authority for Wales, to take the lead role in furthering the issues raised by the Minister's working group.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his role in respect of the management of the Forestry Commission estate in Wales as it relates to (a) wood, (b) conservation and (c) landscape. [28431]

Mr. Jones: My right hon. Friend approves the Commission's plans for managing its estate, including those relating to wood production, conservation and landscape.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what corporate plans subject to his approval exist for the Welsh public woodland; [28432]

(2) what targets have been set for Forest Enterprise in Wales; and what role he has in the setting of those targets. [28425]

Mr. Jones: Forest Enterprise's business plan for 1996–97, a copy of which is in the Library, includes targets for Forest Enterprise's activities throughout Great Britain. The plan and the targets were approved by my right hon. Friend.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has evaluated on the end use of wood from publicly owned forests in Wales; and what assessment he has made as to whether such wood is used to the best advantage in strengthening and diversifying the economy of rural Wales. [28424]

Mr. Jones: The Minister's Welsh forestry group investigated the timber market in Wales. More timber is now processed in Wales than is grown in Wales and over £350 million has been invested in Welsh timber processing industries. These industries are among the most technically advanced in the world; they make 20 per cent. of the newsprint, 25 per cent. of the particleboard and 37 per cent. of the medium density fibreboard produced in Britain. The development of this sector has been a major industrial success story in Wales.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will ensure that accounts are published for the Welsh activities of Forest Enterprise. [28426]

Mr. Jones: Forest Enterprise's accounts are published in the Forestry Commission's annual report; separate accounts are not prepared for Wales.

Robert Powell (Medical Treatment)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he received the report of the inquiry into the keeping of the general practitioner records pertaining to the appeal concerning the medical treatment of Robert Powell of Ystradegynlais, Powys; when he expects to publish the report; and in what form. [29387]

Mr. Hague: My Department received the report on 17 April and is currently considering its contents. When this process is complete I will write to the hon. Member.

South East Wales Ambulance Trust

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the South East Wales ambulance trust concerning the advertising of the chief executive's post; and if he will make a statement. [29388]

Mr. Hague: None. The appointment of a chief executive for the trust is a matter for the chairman and his non-executive directors. My officials have briefed the chairman on the statutory requirements for such an appointment and on the accountability role associated with the post.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the South East Wales ambulance trust concerning the minimum level of qualifications acceptable for the post of gold commander for major incidents. [29389]

Mr. Hague: I have held no such consultations. It is for the boards of NHS ambulance trusts to ensure that those nominated to take on the responsibilities of gold commander or equivalent have sufficient authority and expertise to carry out this important role.

It is for health authorities to ensure that appropriate arrangements and staff are in place.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the South East Wales ambulance trust concerning the (a) number of trained paramedics available by the end of 1996, (b) participation in research and development groups by paramedics and (c) numbers of training places for paramedics and numbers of training officers. [29390]

Mr. Hague: None. These are matters primarily for the trust. However, the Government's target of a paramedic on all front-line emergency vehicles by the end of 1996 is monitored by my Department. The numbers of training places for paramedics are determined on an all-Wales basis in line with employers' requirements.

SCOTLAND

Irvine Development Corporation

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was the district valuer's valuation of the housing stock of Irvine development corporation; [29195]

(2) what value was put on the properties of Irvine development corporation by the district valuer; when this valuation took place; and if this valuation was passed to all the bidders for the housing stock of Irvine development corporation. [28992]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 13 May 1996]: For the disposal of tenanted housing stock, the district valuer's valuation was £33.043 million, assuming the warden costs of sheltered housing were borne by the social work budget, or £32.269 million if these costs were met by rental income from the housing.

The valuation took place on 17 August 1995 and was subsequently passed to both bidders for the housing stock of Irvine development corporation.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the value of the bid lodged by Irvine housing association for the housing stock of Irvine development corporation; and for what reason it was allowed. [29194]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 13 May 1996]: The aggregate of the cash bids made by Irvine housing association was £22.777 million. My right hon. Friend concluded that the bids were value for money, particularly when broader factors were taken into account. These included VAT which is not recoverable by the housing association, the opportunity to give tenants a genuine choice in the ballot between a municipal and non-municipal landlord and the possibility of attracting private sector funding into tenanted housing in Irvine.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what procedure was used by his Department in scrutinising the bids lodged by prospective landlords for taking over the housing stock of Irvine development corporation; what guidance was issued to Cunninghame district council and North Ayrshire council, relating to the valuation which it has to put on the properties of Irvine development corporation; and in what respect this guidance differed from that given to Irvine housing association; [28993]

(2) against what criteria the Scottish Office assessed the bids lodged for the housing stock of Irvine development corporation. [29193]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 13 May 1996]: During 1992 and 1993 the Scottish Office issued comprehensive guidance about housing disposal to the development corporations, the district councils in their areas, hon. Members with constituencies in the areas of new towns and other interested parties. The guidance applied to all bidders and covered all aspects of the process including bidding, valuation and appraisal of bids.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much Irvine housing association has received in funding from (a) Irvine development corporation and (b) Scottish Homes. [29075]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 13 May 1996]: Scottish Homes has to date paid £15,050 to Irvine housing association. The development corporation has not provided funds to the association.

Ambulance Base, Kyleakin

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what established planning restriction exists from Kyle Farm road end to the Lucy Burn at Kyleakin, Isle of Skye; and if he will make a statement. [29241]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 14 May 1996]: There is no established statutory planning policy which restricts development at this location.

Wind Farms

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what representations he has received from those involved in the tourist industry on the east coast of Sutherland about the potential impact on local visitor numbers of proposals to establish wind farms at West Garty and Gartymore; [29483]

(2) what representations he has received from crofters about the proposal to develop a wind farm on common grazing land at Gartymore, East Sutherland; [29482]

(3) pursuant to his answer on 7 May, Official Report, column 63, how many of the letters in support of proposals to develop wind farms at West Garty and Gartymore were received from those who have a financial interest in the proposed developments through payments they will receive from RES Ltd. and Micon Ltd. if the developments proceed. [29485]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 14 May 1996]: Of the 412 letters of objection that my right hon. Friend has received about the wind farm proposals at West Garty and Gartymore, Sutherland, 11 proprietors of various tourism related businesses have commented on the development's potential harm to the industry.

One crofter has written against the proposal, but only in general terms. Letters in a similar vein have been received from two local farmers and a shareholder in local grazing.

Of the 10 letters written in support, five were received from family members with a financial interst in the developments.

Local Authorities (Structure Plans)

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will devolve more power to local authorities in Scotland in relation to structure plans; and if he will make a statement. [29814]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am delighted to announce a new initiative today which is consistent with my general aim to devolve more power from central to local government in Scotland. I propose to give councils greater freedom for deciding how best to allocate appropriate land for housing in structure plans on the basis of their own detailed knowledge of local circumstances and priorities, including housing demand. This responds to representations about the inflexibility of the present policy and persistent claims about central Government imposing unacceptable levels of development on existing communities. Accordingly, what I propose represents a change from the current position where the Government set out guidance on what needs to be provided and I take decisions about whether to approve or modify the structure plans in the light of these. In my view, this is too prescriptive and means too many planning decisions are taken centrally.

My new policy will enable authorities to take on real responsibility for deciding what level of provision is appropriate in their areas having regard both to those who want to live in the area and those who already live there. To assist authorities with this task I will be publishing shortly fresh guidance which will set out the factors authorities should take into account. In addition to housing demand these will include economic, infrastructure, environmental and amenity considerations with a view to authorities striking a balance in the light of local priorities. Authorities will now, for example, be better able to protect small towns and villages from inappropriate large scale development where they consider this would adversely affect the local environment and amenity.

In considering the structure plans which come before me, I will retain my present obligation to satisfy myself that the way authorities have carried out this balancing is reasonable and complies with policy guidance.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Scott Report

Sir Colin Shepherd: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if the Committee has considered how the appendices to the Scott report will be made available to hon. Members; and if he will make a statement. [28978]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: At its meeting on 23 April, the Administration Committee, following a request from Madam Speaker, considered whether the laying of the appendices to the Scott report in CD-Rom form would be acceptable to the House, with or without paper copy, and what other provisions should be attached to such laying.

Following similar consideration by the Information Committee at its meeting on 29 April, Madam Speaker has endorsed the following recommendations:

(a) that two CD-Rom copies and two paper copies should be deposited in the Votes and Proceedings Office by the Department of Trade and Industry in the normal way after the House has agreed to the proposed Address for an Unopposed Return; and that a further two paper copies should be available in the Library as loan copies;

(b) that the CD-Rom should be made available to the Deliverer of the Vote in numbers which he deems necessary to satisfy the requirements of hon. Members until the end of the Parliament;

(c) that the CD-Rom should be compatible with, and available on, the parliamentary data and video network;

(d) that a machine capable of accessing the CD-Rom should be available in the Library for the use of hon. Members.

The Administration Committee considers that acceptance by the House of the appendices in CD-Rom should not be seen as creating a precedent, but rather as an acknowledgement of a possibly unique situation.

Until every hon. Member has access to the parliamentary data and video network or has their own CD-Rom reader, the Committee does not consider it acceptable for CD-Roms to be the usual way of presenting papers to the House. However, if a similar proposal were to arise in the future, the Committee would be prepared to consider it on its merits.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Vietnamese Refugee Camps (Hong Kong)

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Vietnamese refugees are located in camps or similar facilities in Hong Kong and its territories; and what proposals he has to address their needs when the Chinese Government take control of Hong Kong. [29273]

Mr. Hanley: On 1 May 1996 there were 19,456 Vietnamese in camps in Hong Kong, including 1,366 refugees, 17,762 non-refugees to be repatriated to Vietnam and 328 cases pending screening. Our objective is to have the camps cleared by the time sovereignty is transferred to China, but the needs of any Vietnamese remaining in camps in Hong Kong after 1 July 1997 would be a matter for the Government of the Special Administrative Region.

Malaysia

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will discuss with the Malaysian high commissioner in London representations he has received about the impact of the Bakun dam project. [28423]

Mr. Hanley: We have no plans to discuss the Bakun dam project with the Malaysian high commissioner in London.

UN Peacekeeping Budget

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of reductions in the UN peacekeeping budget arising from diversion of funds to the regular UN budget. [29510]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The practice of borrowing funds from UN peacekeeping budgets to meet cash shortfalls in the UN regular budget is a short-term measure. It does not result in any overall reduction of UN peacekeeping budgets. However, we oppose this on grounds of good practice.

HEALTH

Pharmaceuticals (Safety)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to require his Department's regulatory bodies to disclose all relevant safety data to (a) their own advisory committees and (b) the relevant manufacturers in advance of any decision being taken about the safety of pharmaceutical products. [25809]

Mr. Malone: It is normal policy to disclose all relevant safety data available to our advisory committees and, when not restricted by confidentiality agreements, the relevant data are provided to pharmaceutical companies whose products are under consideration. If compulsory regulatory action is proposed, it is the policy of the Medicines Control Agency to provide the relevant pharmaceutical companies with a copy of the assessment reports prior to a final decision being made.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5581]

Mr. Horam [pursuant to his reply, 18 December 1995, c. 935]: There was an error in the figure given for the Department's agencies. Expenditure on hospitality to the end of November 1995 was as follows:

Department	49,779
Agencies	19,277
Total	69,076

The projected total expenditure for 1995–96 that was provided for the agencies should therefore have been about £38,000, not £75,000.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on official hospitality by his Department and all associated agencies in the financial year 1995–96. [28575]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 9 May 1996]: The amount of expenditure on official hospitality in the financial year 1995–96 was:

Department of Health	73,516
Agencies	36,304
Total	109,820

General Practitioners

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the additional amounts in the years 1995–96 and 1996–97 which would have been received by GPs in (a) Waltham Forest and Redbridge and (b) London if deprivation payments were based on information available in the 1991 census. [28023]

Mr. Malone: Deprivation payments for 1995–96 and 1996–97 are, in all cases, based on 1991 census data.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners were registered in each family health service authority or its equivalent at 30 December in each of the last 20 years. [29202]

Mr. Malone: The information will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was paid to fundholding GP practices to meet computerisation costs in each year since 1990–91. [29018]

Mr. Malone: Information is not available for 1990–91. Information on the subsequent years is contained in the 1996 departmental report, copies of which are available in the Library.

Smoking

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what new programmes he is evaluating to publicise to young women the dangers to their health of smoking. [29231]

Mr. Horam: The Health Education Authority continually evaluates the effectiveness of the current national smoking education campaign. A new teenage smoking campaign, starting later this year, will also be carefully evaluated. Both campaigns contain elements which are targeted at young women.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the financial cost incurred in 1995 by Her Majesty's Government in respect of campaigns on the dangers of smoking. [28974]

Mr. Horam: In the 1995–96 financial year, the Department provided £6.5 million for anti-smoking campaign activity in England. In addition, health authorities and trusts run local anti-smoking campaigns.

Long-term Care

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to help the families of disabled people who sell their (a) homes and (b) other assets to meet the costs of long-term care; [29064]

(2) what assessment he has made as to how partnership schemes in the United States provide insurance against the costs of long-term care for disabled people; [29062]

(3) what are the current arrangements for means testing disabled people when establishing how much they should contribute to the costs of their long-term care; [29035]

(4) what discussions he has had with representatives from the insurance industry regarding the development of immediate needs annuities designed for disabled people wishing to insure against the costs of long-term care; [29030]

(5) what plans he has to meet representatives of (a) the insurance industry and (b) organisations representing disabled people to discuss how best disabled people can insure against the costs of long-term care; and what steps he has taken to canvass the opinion of disabled groups regarding the consultation paper "A New Partnership for Care in Old Age;" [29034]

(6) what plans the Government have for helping disabled people insure against the costs of long-term care in the event that the insurance industry does not provide insurance schemes designed specifically for disabled people. [29063]

Mr. Bowis: The consultation paper "A New Partnership for Care in Old Age" sets out the Government's proposals for helping people to make better provision for the costs of long-term care through greater flexibility in pension provision and through a partnership scheme. The proposals are likely to be of most interest to those who need care in old age, but people who need long-term care at a younger age may also be able to benefit from them.

The partnership scheme would enable people to protect more of their assets from the means test for residential care arranged by local authorities. The means test does not make any distinction between the various client groups, such as elderly or disabled people, in assessing ability to contribute to the cost of residential care.

It is proposed that the scheme would be open not only to those who take out long-term care indemnity insurance, as in the United States schemes, but also to those who take out immediate needs annuities. It would therefore potentially be of benefit to those whose condition meant that they could obtain insurance only for a very high premium, if at all.

As the consultation paper makes clear, the terms on which indemnity insurance and annuities are offered are a matter for the insurance and annuity providers themselves to determine—subject, when the relevant provisions have been commenced, to the Disability Discrimination Act.

We welcome comments on our proposals, by 14 June, from all interested parties.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many disabled people at present are insured against the costs of long-term care using an indemnity insurance scheme. [29032]

Mr. Bowis: The information is not available.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the total public cost of a partnership scheme, in accordance with (a) paragraph 9.6 and (b) paragraph 9.7 of "A New Partnership for Care in Old Age" assuming an individual achieves total asset protection by purchasing £30,000 of care insurance, requires five years of care and exhausts their insurance entitlement in (i) one year, (ii) two years, (iii) three years and (iv) four years with the remaining years of care being provided by a local authority at a cost of £12,500 per annum, to which the individual contributes £2,000 per annum. [29521]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 14 May, at column 419.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applications, broken down by gender, were received for the position of chairman of the new Sunderland health authority; how many candidates matched the criteria for selection; how many were considered for the short-list; and what criteria were used for the final selection. [29200]

Mr. Malone: Twelve men and one woman applied for the chairmanship of the new Sunderland health authority. Four men and one woman were shortlisted for interview. Candidates were assessed against the job description for health authority chairmen, copies of which will be placed in the Library.

Mental Illness (London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is currently the number of people living in the Greater London area who are registered with local health authorities as being mentally ill. [29069]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new acute psychiatric beds were established during 1995 at NHS hospitals in the Greater London area. [29056]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Mental Hospitals (Sales)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the proceeds from each sale of water tower mental hospital property in each of the last 10 years. [29470]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the remuneration paid to NHS trust chairs and non-executive directors in each region in 1995–96. [29402]

Mr. Malone: All non-executive directors of national health service trusts are entitled to remuneration of £5,000 per year. National health service trust chairmen are remunerated in one of three bands. These bands, which have not been increased since 1991, are currently:

Band 1: £19,285

Band 2: £17,145

Band 3: £15,125

A list of those appointed to national health service authorities and trusts as at 1 April 1996, together with their remuneration details, will be published in the summer and copies will be placed in the Library.

Corticosteroids

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the risks associated with prescribed corticosteroid drugs. [29515]

Mr. Malone: Corticosteroids are authorised for use in the treatment of many serious and life-threatening conditions and have been used for the treatment of children and adults for many years. All medicines have side-effects, and those for corticosteroids are well documented in the product information, which is produced by the manufacturer and authorised by the licensing authority, and in the British National Formulary, which the Department sends free of charge to all doctors. In 1994, the Committee on Safety of Medicines evaluated the association of corticosteroids and severe chickenpox, as a result of which the product information for corticosteroids was revised to strengthen warnings and precautions of use. Doctors and pharmacists were informed of these changes through the CSM's regular bulletin,"Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance."

West Lancashire and Southport and Formby NHS Trusts

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who is responsible for taking the decisions about the reconfiguration of the West Lancashire and Southport and Formby NHS trusts. [29161]

Mr. Malone: There have been no decisions to re-configure the West Lancashire and Southport and Formby national health service trusts. Any proposals for the dissolution and merger of trusts would be subject to public consultation, with the final decision being taken by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

Pressure Sores

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 7 May, Official Report, column 32, about statistics in relation to the incidence of pressure sores among NHS hospital patients, if he will give his estimate of the cost of securing the information requested. [29026]

Mr. Bowis: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Private Patients

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private patients were treated in (a) NHS pay beds and (b) independent sector beds for (i) all acute conditions excluding maternity care, (ii) maternity care, (iii) cataract surgery, (iv) hip replacement surgery and (v) heart surgery in 1989–90 and each year since then. [29019]

Mr. Malone: Information for England for private patients treated in national health service pay beds is shown in the table. Information on private patients treated in independent sector beds is not available centrally.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated number of admissions to NHS hospitals in England from non-NHS hospitals, nursing homes, health care and residential institutions in 1985–86 and in each year since then. [29020]

Mr. Malone: The relevant information is as follows:

Fluoridation

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which (a) water authorities and (b) water companies have rejected health authorities' requests for fluoridation since 1985 indicating where these have been on (i) non-technical and (ii) technical grounds; [29135]

(2) what estimate he has made of the savings in dental health costs to Sunderland health authority from water fluoridation; [29132]

(3) when his Department last discussed fluoridation of water supplies with (a) the NHS Executive, (b) the Water Services Association and (c) the Water Companies Association; [28990]

(4) if he will give the total number of cases since 1986 of dental fluorosis in each of the district health authorities in the Northern and Yorkshire region indicating which DHA has (a) artificial fluoridation and (b) natural fluoridation; [29138]

(5) what are the estimated annual projected (a) capital and (b) revenue costs to Sunderland health authority from water fluoridation; [19133]

(6) what research his Department has (a) undertaken and (b) commissioned regarding the relationship between the incidence of tooth decay in areas of similar income level which (a) have and (b) do not have fluoridated water supplies. [29139]

Mr. Malone: Sunderland is naturally a fluoridated area with 87 per cent. of the population receiving water with a natural fluoride content between 30 per cent. and 70 per cent. of the optimum concentration for dental benefit. There are no revenue or capital costs associated with natural fluoridation at the level found in Sunderland. No estimate has been made of the savings this has made in dental health costs to Sunderland health authority. Studies have shown in general, however, that the incidence of caries can be reduced by as much as a third to a half in fluoridated areas compared with non-fluoridated areas.

A number of studies and surveys have been carried out since 1990 showing the effect of water fluoridation on dental caries in five-year-old children in communities of differing socio-economic groups. These are listed, with the relevant technical references, in the publication "One in a Million" published in 1994 by the British Fluoridation Society and the Public Health Alliance. This publication is available in the Library. Some of the studies have been commissioned by the British Fluoridation Society, which is funded by the Department of Health. The Department has not itself, however, directly undertaken nor commissioned such studies as information is already available. A recent study into the effect of fluoridation and social class on caries experience in five-year-old Newcastle children in 1994 compared with results over the previous 18 years, showed that differences between the fluoridated and non-fluoridated areas were observed in all social class groupings but the greatest difference in the percentage of children with decay experience occurred in social groups IV and V.

Figures on the number of cases of dental fluorosis in each district are not collected. Officials are currently in correspondence with both the Water Services Association and the Water Companies Association about new guidelines to be issued to health authorities on water fluoridation. Since 1985, the English water undertakers which have rejected fluoridation requests by health authorities have been North Western Water, Yorkshire Water and Southern Water. None of these rejections was on technical grounds.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 7 March, Official Report, column 321, (1) if he will lists the costs of (a) printing and (b) distributing the letter of 26 October 1995 attributed to the Family Planning Association; [26247]

(2) what factors led the Medicines Control Agency to fund the letter dated 26 October 1995. [26571]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 24 April 1996]: The cost of printing and collating the letter was £36,780.17. The costs relating to postage to relevant health professionals were £54,040.52. The Medicines Control Agency agreed to fund the costs of this letter since there was a clear need to provide health professionals with additional information and guidance on the practical management issues arising from the advice issued by the Committee on Safety of Medicines on the safety of oral contraceptives dated 18 October. The letter was produced jointly by the Faculty of Family Planning and Reproductive Health Care and the Family Planning Association.

Nurses (Work Permits)

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many work permits have been issued to trained nurses from outside the European economic area to work in private sector nursing homes and in NHS hospitals in East Sussex in each year since 1990. [29197]

Mrs. Gillan: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available. Records of the number of work permits issued each year do not identify county or region.

ENVIRONMENT

Fluoridation

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by (a) water authority and (b) water company each incident since 1985 which has resulted in an overdose of fluoride entering the water supply. [29134]

Mr. Clappison: There are no records available for the period 1985 to 1989. No incidents have been reported since then.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to renew the code of fluoridation practice. [29136]

Mr. Clappison: My right hon. Friend has no plans to revise this code at present.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department last discussed fluoridation of water supplies with (a) water companies and (b) the Water Services Association. [29137]

Mr. Clappison: My officials last discussed fluoridation of drinking water supplies with an individual water company in October 1995, and with the Water Services Association in November 1993.

Surrey Docks

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment by what date he plans to remove the Surrey docks peninsula from designation as part of the London docklands development area; and what procedures apply to this removal. [29199]

Mr. Curry: Our aim is to remove Surrey docks peninsula from the docklands urban development area, and to transfer planning and development control powers to the London borough of Southwark, with effect from 31 December 1996. This accords with the target timetable outlined in my predecessor's letter of 15 February 1994 to the hon. Member.

The procedures are the same as those which applied to the removal of Bermondsey Riverside from the UDA. First, there are comprehensive discussions between the London borough of Southwark and the London Docklands development corporation to bring forward detailed proposals for handling all LDDC's assets and liabilities and for ensuring the on-going regeneration of the area. These discussions are now at an advanced stage for the Surrey docks peninsula and I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as they are concluded.

Subject to the agreement of all parties to the detailed withdrawal proposals, consultations with the London borough of Southwark and LDDC will be undertaken on a draft statutory order under section 134(3A) and (5) of the Local Government Planning and Land Act 1980, as amended by section 179 of the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993. The order will alter the UDA boundary and transfer planning and development control powers.

We expect to lay the order in late November to early December 1996. It is subject to the negative resolution procedure.

Dry-stone Walling

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assistance his Department provides to encourage the maintenance and building of dry-stone walls. [29145]

Mr. Clappison: The Government provide grant assistance for the restoration and maintenance of dry-stone walls. Until 1 April, the Countryside Commission, one of my Department's countryside agencies, operated the countryside stewardship scheme, which offers grants for the repair and restoration of walls in association with other land management measures. This scheme was transferred to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 1 April, and my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister announced the introduction of a new stand-alone option for field boundaries including payments for stone walls and banks within stewardship, and that an extra £5 million will be available for new management agreements under the scheme for each of the years 1996–97 and 1997–98. The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food also provides grants for wall restoration under the environmentally sensitive areas scheme.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department is taking to encourage local authorities to promote the preservation of dry-stone walling. [29150]

Mr. Clappison: The Government provide grant assistance for the maintenance and improvement of dry-stone walls under the countryside stewardship and environmentally sensitive areas schemes. Both these schemes are open to appropriate applications from local authorities. Some local authorities also take an active part in the promotion of the countryside stewardship scheme to farmers in their areas. This scheme was transferred from the Countryside Commission to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 1 April, and my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister announced that an extra £5 million will be available for new management agreements under the scheme for each of the years 1996–97 and 1997–98.

Local authorities and national parks have powers themselves to operate local environmental grant schemes, some of which may include assistance for the management of dry-stone walls. Local planning authorities also have planning powers to control the demolition of dry-stone walls in conservation areas.

Freshwater

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what legislation governs (i) a local authority's and (ii) an urban development corporation's responsibilities for the safety, cleanliness and maintenance of freshwater used for recreational purposes. [29198]

Mr. Clappison: The environmental health departments of local authorities can make available data on the quality and any potential health risk of recreational waters, so that the public can decide whether to use them. If there is reason to suspect that there may be a specific health problem concerning the quality of the water it would be for the local environmental health department, in consultation with the consultant in communicable disease control and the director of public health, to decide what action would be appropriate. The powers under which environmental health departments operate are many and varied but, in the main, stem from public health legislation.

Urban development corporations have no specific statutory powers in respect of the question the hon. Member raises. However, for the London Docklands development corporation the London Docklands Development Corporation Act 1994 confers powers on the LDDC for the management and regulation of certain lands and waters within its area.

Passive Smoking

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will next meet representatives of the brewing industry to discuss the dangers of passive smoking in licensed premises. [29141]

Mr. Clappison: There are no plans to meet representatives of the brewing industry to discuss the dangers of passive smoking in licensed premises.

The implementation of smoking policies in licensed premises is a matter for the discretion of the manager in line with the Government's continuing voluntary policy, which encourages the implementation of suitable smoking policies in all enclosed public buildings. Guidance on implementing policies is given in the Government's code of practice on smoking in public places, which was published in December 1991. It makes it clear that the Government expect every effort to be made to cater for the interests of the non-smoker.

Local Government Finance

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government intend to proceed with their plans for a pilot scheme for the challenge funding of English local authorities' capital expenditure. [29684]

Mr. Gummer: The challenge approach has already proved its ability to stimulate new and innovative thinking among local authorities and so generate projects which offer excellent value for taxpayers' money. Our consultation paper of 30 January sought views on whether this approach could be brought to bear more widely on local authority capital spending on work such as highway maintenance, school building projects or house renovation.

The Government have considered carefully the points made by local authorities and others in response to that consultation paper. We have concluded that it is right to proceed with a practical test of how challenge funding of capital spending might work, the benefits it can bring and the possible opportunity costs of the approach. We therefore intend to establish a pilot capital challenge fund to allocate a proportion of total Government support for English local authorities' capital expenditure. The pilot will in particular test whether the challenge approach can:

- foster local choice and local decision making and provide a clear incentive to developing local partnerships;
- give positive encouragement to those local authorities which take a strategic approach to planning capital investment; and
- lift some of the close controls Whitehall exercises over investment decisions.

The scheme that we intend to implement builds on that outlined in our consultation paper. Key elements of the pilot are:

- it will consist of a single bidding round, with bids to be submitted by 23 September this year, which offers support for capital projects over a maximum of three years, beginning in 1997–98. A total of £600 million of planned support for local authority capital spending will be allocated to successful bids over the three years through the capital challenge fund, with £150 million available in 1997–98, £250 million in 1998–99 and £200 million in 1999–2000;
- authorities will be encouraged to seek support for broadly based, innovative projects or programmes which meet a well defined local need and offer particularly good value for money. They will not be required to address specific service-led objectives;
- authorities will be encouraged to submit a single bid encompassing the complete package of projects and programmes for which they seek support from the challenge fund. Where possible, different authorities responsible for different local services within an area should co-operate in deciding priorities and submit joint bids;
- bids must be submitted to Government offices by 23 September 1996. The names of successful bidders will be announced in December 1996;
- the capital challenge fund will be allocated on a regional basis. Indicative regional shares will be published; and
- awards to successful bidders will take the form of supplementary credit approvals (SCAs).

We are today issuing to all local authorities detailed advice on the preparation and submission of bids for support from the capital challenge fund. I have placed copies of this guidance in the Library of the House.

There are, of course, many practical questions about how best the challenge approach should be applied to the full range of local authority capital spending, and a number of authorities have raised important points which need to be addressed. The pilot scheme will give us the opportunity to consider these while maintaining the momentum towards challenge over the three years for which it will run. We will need to evaluate carefully the outcome of this first bidding round and the projects resulting from it before deciding whether to proceed beyond the pilot to a fuller application of challenge principles to the determination of capital allocations.

In parallel with the pilot we will also consider other questions which it does not directly address, but which need to be considered before we decide whether the challenge approach can be taken further. These include the role of some form of assessment of need in the allocation of capital support and how best to ensure authorities can meet their statutory obligations under a challenge regime, and the mechanism for taking into account usable capital receipts. We hope to involve local authority representatives both in the monitoring of the pilot and the additional work we plan to undertake.

I believe the pilot capital challenge scheme will give us a sound basis from which to explore the challenge approach. I hope it will bring greater local choice over spending priorities, better and stronger local partnerships and improved value for money in publicly financed local authority capital expenditure.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in rank order the approximate mileage of Thames river frontage (a) for each constituency abutting the Thames from Teddington to the estuary limits and (b) for each London borough and district council authority abutting the Thames from Teddington to the estuary limits. [28344]

Sir Paul Beresford: The approximate length of Thames river frontage (km) for the London boroughs and district councils are, in rank order:

Construction Industry

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with representatives of small companies in the construction industry following publication of the provisions of the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Bill; and if he will make a statement. [28375]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Ministers in the Department of the Environment regularly meet representatives of small firms in the construction industry, and this has continued during the passage of the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Bill.

The Bill offers considerable benefits for small construction firms. If enacted, it will provide a right to refer contractual disputes to adjudication and will ensure that all contracts provide an adequate payment mechanism. It will render ineffective the notorious pay-when-paid and pay-if-paid contract provisions, except in the case of insolvency, and it will give contractors the right to suspend work if they were not getting paid in accordance with the contract. All these objectives have been welcomed by representatives of small construction companies.

Mining Industry (Major Accidents)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many accidents involving major injury occurred in the mining industry in 1995–96; and what has been the change in the number of accidents involving major injury per man shift since the changes in safety regulations were effected. [29266]

Sir Paul Beresford: This information is not available in the form requested. However the provisional figure for major injuries in coal mines for the period from April 1995 to December 1995 is 126.

Housing Need

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the Government's response to the Environment Select Committee's second report of Session 1995–96 on Housing Need (HC 22); and if he will make a statement. [29613]

Mr. Curry: The Government remain committed to responding to housing need and to an open public debate on the issue. I am pleased that the Environment Select Committee has welcomed our publication of estimates of housing need and recognised the importance of a full and open debate. I welcome the Committee's endorsement of the steps we are taking to improve the forecasting and estimates of future housing need.

The response that I am publishing today makes clear the Government's view that our estimate of the number of social lettings required each year is correct. Latest evidence of continued growth in private rented housing and home ownership shows that we are right to provide social housing at the lower end of our range of estimates of 60,000 to 100,000 social housing outputs a year.

Housing is improving and evidence shows that the numbers of people with severe housing problems is falling.

(a) the number of people sleeping rough in central London has fallen from over 1,000 in 1990 to around 270 in 1995;

(b) the number of households living in bed-and-breakfast accommodation has fallen by 66 per cent. since its peak in 1991 to 4,450 in 1995;

(c) the number of households in overcrowded conditions is around 3 per cent. of all households, compared with 5 per cent. in 1981.

We are getting ahead, not falling behind, in meeting the need for new homes. We will continue to take a balanced approach, promoting sustainable home ownership, encouraging growth in the private rented sector, and investing in social housing. Provisions in the housing Bill currently before Parliament will help us meet need more effectively—for example by ensuring that social housing is allocated fairly.

The private sector has a significant role to play in meeting housing need and can offer a variety of housing options, especially to meet the needs and preferences of older people. The quality of housing in this sector is improving and the Committee should be reassured that provisions in the housing Bill will substantially improve standards in houses in multiple occupation.

I fully share the Committee's concern that some people who bought homes under the right to buy cannot sell them because potential buyers cannot get mortgages, and my Department has taken measures within the housing Bill to resolve the situation, including reducing leaseholders' charges for major works, and further encouragement to local authorities to guarantee loans. Discussions also continue to be held with lenders to encourage a more flexible approach.

I am encouraged that the Committee's report also recognises the contribution of the planning system in assisting the delivery of affordable housing. The Government will continue to consider ways to improve planning guidance.

Recycling Projects (Funding)

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which local authorities will receive supplementary credit approval resources for recycling projects in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [29727]

Mr. Clappison: I am today announcing the allocation of over £10 million in supplementary credit approval resources for investment in recycling projects by local authorities in 1996–97. This is the sixth year of the programme and the allocations announced today bring the total number of recycling projects supported by the programme to over 1,300.

The programme forms part of the Government's environmental partnership initiative, which aims to maximise investment through a combination of Government resources, authorities' own resources and private sector contributions. This year we received bids totalling almost £40 million. We have given priority in allocating resources to large-scale projects of strategic significance, aimed at delivering the objectives set out in our White Paper, "Making Waste Work: a strategy for sustainable waste management in England and Wales". If recycling infrastructure is to expand and recycling increase, all those involved in dealing with waste, including Government, local authorities and the private and voluntary sectors, need to work together. Partnership and co-operation are at the heart of our strategy for more sustainable waste management.

Authorities working in co-operation with the private and voluntary sectors have therefore done particularly well in the allocations. The programme also provides the opportunity for authorities to work with the private sector to respond to our producer responsibility challenge for packaging. A number of bids are the result of partnerships between industry and local authorities and are aimed at recycling packaging. A variety of schemes have been successful, including a new materials reclamation facility at Peterborough, a municipal composting facility to be run jointly by Sandwell and Dudley metropolitan borough councils and a kerbside collection scheme in Amber valley.

One of the features of the SCA programme has been to provide assistance to projects which although environmentally beneficial may not attract support from the private sector. Home composting is a good example of this. We see composting as an important way in which the environmental impact of household waste can be reduced, as well as providing a valuable alternative to peat-based products.

In our waste strategy, "Making Waste Work", we have set a target of 40 per cent. of domestic properties with a garden to carry out home composting by the year 2000. I am therefore pleased that so many authorities are enabling householders to taking increased responsibility for their own waste, by establishing home composting schemes, and I am happy to announce support for home composting which totals £1.1 million.

Each authority is today being notified of the outcome of its bid. Lists of the allocations have been placed in the Library.

Housing Bodies

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he intends to implement the proposals in the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Bill for the establishment of a residuary body to deal with those assets, rights and liabilities remaining when the Commission for the New Towns, the urban development corporations and the housing action trusts are wound up. [29728]

Mr. Curry: Powers to establish such a residuary body are included in the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Bill. Subject to parliamentary approval of these powers, our intention is to base the new body on the Commission for the New Towns. The reformed body will be a small organisation with clearly defined targets and a limited life. It will concentrate on the disposal of the remaining new town land holdings and other assets at a rate consistent with maximising receipts by achieving full open market values, while also disengaging from the remaining liabilities.

We will discuss with CNT the details of the new arrangements. We need to look carefully at a number of issues including the implications of transferring staff and the extent to which the reformed body should carry forward the powers currently enjoyed by the commission. We will also consult other relevant parties on the detailed arrangements, including the bodies to be wound up, the local authority associations and those representing the interests of affected employees.

When my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment announced on 27 July 1993, Official Report, column 896, that it was our intention to wind up CNT in its current form by March 1998, he said that provision would need to be made for the longer-term management and sale of those new town assets which it would not be prudent to dispose of within that time-scale and for the continuing management of any remaining liabilities. Since then, the commission has made considerable progress in disposing of its assets for their full market value and in disengaging from a wide range of liabilities, on which both the board and officials are to be congratulated. We therefore now believe that it would make sense to build on their expertise and experience in order to maximise the returns to the Exchequer on the land holdings which will remain to be disposed of after 1998. In addition, although we expected each individual urban development corporation and housing action trust to dispose of its assets and liabilities before wind up, the reformed body will be able to take on any remaining responsibilities for which no other successor can be identified.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Energy Prices

8. Mr. Jenkin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the movement in energy prices for (a) industry and (b) the domestic consumer since the privatisation of the electricity industry. [28363]

Mr. Page: Between electricity privatisation in 1990 and the last quarter of 1995 electricity prices, in real terms, fell by 10.5 per cent. for industrial consumers and by 7.5 per cent., excluding VAT, for domestic consumers.

Export Markets

13. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures the Government plan in order to encourage small businesses to develop export markets. [28368]

Mr. Page: Through the Overseas Trade Services Organisation, my Department now provides its best ever package of information, advice and practical assistance to British companies. Small businesses can take advantage of this support through business links.

Nuclear Industry (Privatisation)

21. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the cost to his Department to date of the privatisation of the nuclear industry. [28378]

Mr. Lang: The Department of Trade and Industry had provision for expenditure of £25 million in the year 1995–96. Provisional expenditure figures will be published in July in the public expenditure outturn White Paper. Actual expenditure will be reported to Parliament through the appropriation account.

Manufacturing Output

24. Mr. Turner: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the growth in manufacturing output in the last three months. [28383]

Mr. Oppenheim: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, Leith (Mr. Chisholm) earlier today.

Mr. Pike: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in which regions of England there has been a decline in manufacturing output since 1979. [28358]

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not available. Overall, manufacturing output has risen by 12 per cent. since 1979. The latest CBI regional trend survey shows manufacturers are expecting strong output growth in all regions.

Visible Trade Deficit

26. Mr. Hutton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on trends in the visible trade deficit in the last six months for which figures are available. [28385]

27. Mr. French: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultation he has had with European Trade Ministers on the prudential supervision of insurance companies. [28386]

Mr. Nelson: There has been no need for discussions at ministerial level in the recent past. However, my officials regularly meet their European counterparts to discuss these issues, both bilaterally and in EU and other international forums.

Common European Currency

28. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the consequences of Britain joining a common European currency with a level of investment as a proportion of gross domestic product lower than that of the other participating nations. [28387]

Mr. Lang: We will agree to take part in a single currency only if it is in our national interest to do so, given the circumstances at the time. A full assessment of the benefits and disadvantages will be carried out nearer the time, before the decision is made.

Since 1979 business investment in the United Kingdom has risen by over a third and has been a greater share of GDP than in the other major EU countries.

Business Failures

29. Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many business failures there were in the first quarter of 1996. [28389]

Mr. Oppenheim: In the first quarter of 1996 there were, on a seasonally adjusted basis, 1,273 compulsory liquidations, 2,022 creditors' voluntary liquidations and 5,333 bankruptcy orders.

Gas Suppliers

30. Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to ensure that the directors of private gas companies which fraudulently missell gas contracts to consumers are investigated by his Department. [28391]

31. Mr. Etherington: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will ask the Office of Fair Trading to carry out an investigation into complaints received by the Gas Consumer Council about companies which fraudulently attempt to switch customers from British Gas to other suppliers. [28392]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Plymouth, Devonport (Mr. Jamieson) earlier today.

Mr. Lang: No.

Child Labour

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had concerning restrictions on the importation of goods produced by child labour; and if he will make a statement. [28382]

Mr. Nelson: The Government deplore any exploitation of children and press all countries which have signed labour conventions to meet their obligations. We believe improvements in labour standards are more likely to result from economic growth through trade than by unilateral trade restrictions.

Mortality Study

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date the report, "Mortality Study of Workers at a Patent Fuel Plant"—Institute of Occupational Medicine 1987—was received by his Department; what was the date of publication; and what action was taken in light of the report's findings. [27783]

Mr. Page [holding answer 2 May 1996]: I understand that the report, "Mortality Study of Workers at a Patent Fuel Plant," was published in December 1987 by the Institute of Occupational Medicine, an independent research body. Any action taken in light of that report is a matter for British Coal.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date the report "Toxicity Review 28, Cancer Epidemiology in Coal Tar Pitch Volatile-associated Industries" published in 1993 by the Health and Safety Executive was published; when it was received by his Department and what action was taken in light of the report's conclusion in respect of the risk of cancers in coke oven workers. [27785]

Mr. Page [holding answer 2 May 1996]: I understand that the report, "Toxicity Review 28", was published by the Health and Safety Executive on 14 April 1993. Any action taken in light of the report is a matter for the Health and Safety Executive and Commission.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action Her Majesty's Government have taken in respect of the analysis of mortality rates by occupation in the Registrar General's occupational health decennial supplement in respect of lung cancer incidence in the occupational group labourers in coke ovens. [27715]

Mr. Page: Action taken in light of the Registrar General's occupational health decennial supplement is principally a matter for employers.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when trade unions were informed following the publication of the 1987 "Mortality Study of Workers at the Patent Fuel Plant in the Cynon Valley"; what action was taken consequently by (a) management and (b) the unions; and what consultations took place into (i) the management and (ii) the unions involved in the industry following the "Toxicity Review 28, Cancer Epidemiology in Coal Tar Pitch Volatile-associated Industries" in 1992. [27796]

Mr. Page [holding answer 2 May 1996]: Matters relating to the 1987 "Mortality Study of Workers at a Patent Fuel Plant" are for British Coal. Matters relating to the report, "Toxicity Review 28" are for the Health and Safety Executive and the employers concerned.

Deregulation

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress he has to report on the deregulation initiative as it affects his Department.[28369]

Mr. Oppenheim: The deregulation initiative is making good progress in my Department. For example, we have laid six deregulation orders to date, and are pursuing radical improvements to the business environment through the Arbitration Bill, which, as the hon. Member will know, is before the House for consideration.

Gas Industry

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he last met the Director General of Gas Supply to discuss the future of that industry; and if he will make a statement. [28559]

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend has not met the Director General of Gas Supply since becoming President of the Board of Trade. However, I last met her on 17 January. I am very pleased with the way competition is developing as are those consumers in the south-west now buying cheaper gas.

Aerospace Industry

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the collaborative arrangement on the development of an engine for the new generation of super-jumbo aircraft between General Electric and Pratt and Whitney on the United Kingdom aero-engine manufacturing sector; and if he will make a statement. [29408]

Mr. Eggar: My officials have had preliminary discussions with Rolls-Royce. I shall continue to monitor the situation.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received from the Society of British Aerospace Companies on the United Kingdom aerospace industry; and if he will make a statement. [29407]

Mr. Eggar: My Department and the Society of British Aerospace Companies issued a joint statement on 29 November 1995 outlining specific ways in which the Government can assist the aerospace industry and maintain an active dialogue on the key issues for the continuing success of this important industry.

Research Councils

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Linlithgow of 7 May, Official Report, column 45, from which existing budget the additional sums allocated to the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council came. [29489]

Mr. Lang: The additional sums allocated to the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council for international subscriptions came from the science budget. Details are provided in the booklet, "Allocation of the Science Budget 1996–97", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Financial Assistance

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 29 April, Official Report, column 363, if he will state, with reference to the register of personal financial interests of members of his Department's regional industrial development boards and external advisers, (a) its location, (b) the information that is required to be declared, (c) if it is a single document and (d) if the declarations of financial interest are mandatory. [28299]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 7 May 1996]: Details of regional industrial development board members financial interests are held on registered files in the appropriate Government offices. The declaration of interests is a mandatory requirement for appointment. The files are not available for public scrutiny to maintain legitimate personal and commercial confidentiality.

Details of financial interests of external advisers, which are being collected in response to the recommendations of the internal report on ROM Data, are maintained on the same basis as for members of regional boards.

Bomb Bags

Ms Jowell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received concerning the banning of bomb bags; and if he will make a statement. [29406]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My Department has received four written and three oral representations about the safety of bomb bags and the nuisance which they can cause. The safety of toys such as bomb bags is controlled by the Toys (Safety) Regulations 1995, which specify safety requirements which all toys must meet. Day-to-day enforcement of the regulations is the responsibility of local authority trading standards officers who have the necessary powers to remove products from the market if they consider them to be unsafe. My Department has ensured that trading standards departments are aware of the issues raised by these products.

Arms Exports

Mr. Mullin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to review the export credit arrangements for arms sales; and if he will make a statement. [28390]

Mr. Nelson: None.

ECGD's role is to encourage United Kingdom capital goods and project exports by providing insurance against the risks of not being paid by overseas customers. Whether or not individual arms consignments are allowed to go overseas is a matter for the DTI's export licensing unit. Any exports which need an export licence, but do not have one, are not eligible for ECGD cover. ECGD support for defence and civil business is available on the same basis.

Business Links

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 7 May, Official Report, column 43, which business links operate as divisions of training and enterprise councils. [29471]

Mr. Page: The following business links operate as divisions of TECs, as at 14 May 1996:

Lincolnshire
Milton Keynes
Oldham
St. Helens
Sunderland
Sussex
Thames Valley
Wolverhampton.

Catering Industry

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many catering firms will be excluded from applying to the loan guarantee scheme from 1 September in each region of Great Britain. [29017]

Mr. Page: Given that eligibility for the loan guarantee scheme depends on factors other than business sector it is not possible to determine how many catering firms will be excluded.

Late Payment

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 1 May, Official Report, column 546, on what day his Department will be publishing the table of results of all departments and their agencies for 1995–96. [29329]

Mr. Page: The table of results for 1995–96 departmental payment performance is currently being collated and will be published at the earliest possible opportunity before the summer recess of the House.

Oil and Gas Installations (North Sea)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many of the offshore oil and gas industry installations in the United Kingdom sector of the North sea could be disposed of at sea under the present legal provisions; and what is the total weight of these installations in metric tonnes. [29336]

Mr. Page: The Government have made it clear that the decommissioning of offshore installations will be consistent with our international obligations, including the International Maritime Organisation's guidelines and standards for the removal of offshore installations. Application of the IMO guidelines and standards to the UK continental shelf—UKCS—means that shallow water installations in less than 75 m of water will be entirely removed. That represents almost three quarters of all UKCS fixed installations. It is likely that they will be returned to shore. In deeper waters, installations may be partially removed provided that there is at least 55 m of clear water above any remains. Around 60 fixed installations fall in to this category representing a total weight of some 3.3 million tonnes. Decisions on their decommissioning and disposal will be taken on the basis of an assessment of the best practicable environmental option in order to arrive at the appropriate solution in each case.

Sellafield (Safety)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library the correspondence on safety at Sellafield between the Minister of State and the executive director of Greenpeace UK. [29328]

Mr. Page: Lord Fraser made clear, in his answer in the other place on 15 April, that it is not for him to place copies of correspondence instigated by a Member of that House in the Library of the House. I have nothing to add to his reply.

Electro-magnetic Comparability Directive

Mr. Timms: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the impact on United Kingdom industry of the European Union's electro-magnetic comparability directive; and what advice he has issued since it became enforceable. [28988]

Mr. Lang: The Electromagnetic Compatibility (EMC) Regulations, (Statutory Instrument 1992 No. 2372) implementing directive 89/336/EEC came into force on 1 January 1996. It is too early to assess their impact on industry in the United Kingdom, although an initial compliance cost assessment—CCA—estimated that between 2 and 5 per cent. could be added to design costs, this cost being lower as the proportion of designs which took account of EMC requirements from the outset increased. Manufacturers thus had a period of six years in which to design the necessary protection and immunity requirements into their products. By meeting the harmonised requirements and CE marking their products, manufacturers gain access to markets throughout the European economic area.

It is possible for most manufacturers to self-certify their products against a European harmonised standard. Testing is not mandatory except for apparatus designed for the transmission of radiocommunications. Manufacturers are free to judge for themselves the extent to which testing is necessary. If they decide to conduct minimal tests or none at all, they may need to incur some costs to satisfy the enforcement authority that the product complies, if called upon to do so in the absence of a test report—but this applies to all firms across the EU.

Following an extensive awareness programme of seminars and publications between 1992 and 1995 my Department set up a telephone advice service at the beginning of this year, when the regulations came fully into force, to help to ensure that electrical and electronic equipment manufacturers had the most up-to-date information and guidance on specific queries relating to the legal, technical and standardisation aspects of the EMC legislation.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery Grants (Croydon)

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list for each constituency in Croydon the organisations which have received grants from the national lottery and their amount. [27877]

Mr. Sproat: There have been three awards, totalling £73,900 allocated to projects in Croydon, as follows:

Body	Announced	Recipient	Amount £
NLCB	19 December 1995	Friends of the English Language Scheme	9,400.00
NLCB	19 December 1995	Victim support	19,500.00
NLCB	19 December 1995	Refugee project	45,000.00
			73,900.00

Figures for national lottery awards by constituency are not currently available, but my Department is developing a new lottery database, which will shortly allow for this break-down to be made.

Millennium Celebrations

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) if she will undertake an assessment within the next three months of the risks of the Greenwich millennium celebration not being fully operational within the agreed timetable; and if she will inform the Birmingham National Exhibition Centre of the results of such risk assessment before 1 August; [28045]

(2) what assessment she has made of the prospects for (i) the private sector support for, (ii) the transport infrastructure of and (iii) the environmental restoration of the Greenwich site being in place in sufficient time for the Greenwich site to stage the millennium celebration to begin on 1 January 2000. [28046]

Mr. Sproat: The commission is currently undertaking an assessment of the viability of a millennium exhibition on the site of the Greenwich peninsula. The results are expected to be available in September.

National Lottery (Arts Projects)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to revise the national lottery guidelines in respect of non-capital investment creative arts projects and receiving lottery grants. [28693]

Mr. Sproat: On 1 April, my right hon. Friend announced, Official Report columns 69–70, changes to the policy directions issued under subsections (1) and (2) of section 26 of the National Lottery etc. Act 1993. These changes will allow the Arts Council to make revenue-only lottery awards.

Performing Arts (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the performing arts organisations based in Coventry which have (a) requested and (b) received grants. [28695]

Mr. Sproat: My Departments's funding of the arts is channelled through the Arts Council of England and regional arts boards. It is for them to decide on the allocation of funding for the arts, taking into account national and regional priorities. For 1995–96 West Midlands Arts provided funding of over £770,000 for the following performing arts organisations in Coventry:

DNA Dance and Music

Coventry St. Vincent and Grenadine Association

University of Warwick

Bare Essential Youth Theatre

Shaskeen Theatre Company

Multi Arts National Ltd.

Saint Michael's Singers

Suits U2 Dance Company

Belgrade Theatre, Coventry

Warwick Arts Centre

Warwick Arts Society.

Women in Sport

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps she is taking to encourage more women to take part in sport; and what funding is available to encourage women's participation in sport at every level. [29057]

Mr. Sproat: The Government are keen to improve opportunities for women and girls to participate in sport at all levels. These objectives are pursued through sponsorship of the Sports Council, which received £49.2 million grant in aid in 1995–96. In the same year, the Sports Council awarded £617,000 to women's governing bodies of sport; almost £2 million was provided at a national and regional level for projects exclusively or primarily concerned with the development of sport for girls and women; and a further £7.1 million was provided at a national and regional level for projects which had specific implications for women. Women's sport would also have benefitted from the Sports Council's other programmes.

In its first year of operation, the national lottery provided a huge injection of funds for capital projects aimed at increasing participation and enhancing performance. The changes to the directions that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State recently made will enable the Sports Council to give revenue awards to talented sportswomen.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much was spent on official hospitality by her Department and all associated agencies in the financial year 1995–96. [28577]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 9 May 1996]: The information is as follows:

Department of National Heritage: £25,563

Historic Royal Palaces Agency: £46,133

Royal Parks Agency: £16,627.

Euro 96 (Tickets)

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment she has made of the ticket allocation procedures for Euro 96; what discussions she has had with the football authorities on this matter; what plans she has to meet the organisers of Euro 96; and if she will make a statement. [29326]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 14 May 1996]: The allocation of tickets for Euro 96 has been carried out in accordance with UEFA guidelines, and the Football Association has established procedures for the distribution of tickets to supporters. Last week, it became apparent that a significant number of tickets had not been allocated in accordance with these procedures. Proper segregation of supporters is important for public safety and public order. The FA is working closely with the police and security checks are being made before the tickets concerned are released. I have had a number of meetings with the organisers of Euro 96. I shall continue to monitor developments closely. The eyes of the world will be on us during Euro 96. The FA is well aware that everything must be done to minimise possible disorder and have taken additional precautions in the light of what has emerged.

Orchestras

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many orchestras have been awarded funds from the national lottery. [28942]

Mr. Sproat: To date, 23 orchestras have been awarded funds, totalling £5,201,119, from the national lottery.

STAFF EMPLOYED SINCE 20 MARCH

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question about staff employed since 20 March in respect of his Central Science Laboratory (CSL) Agency, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible. (28216)

Since the date in question CSL has taken on some 54 staff. This includes 15 casual or fixed-term appointees and 33 Regional Bee Inspectors who are employed on short-term contracts to carry out work of a seasonal nature.

Letter from Dr. J. M. Rutter to Mr. David Nicholson, dated 15 May 1996:

The Veterinary Medicines Directorate has employed 6 extra staff since 20 March. Of these 2 were recruited, 1 transferred from core-MAFF, 2 transferred from the Central Science Laboratory and 1 is on loan from the Department of Health.

Letter from George Trevelyan to Mr. David Nicholson, dated 15 May 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food about the number of additional staff employed by this Agency since 20 March 1996 as this is a matter that falls within my administrative responsibility. (28216)

Since 20 March this year, this Agency has recruited and appointed 54 new staff, ranging from the Higher Executive Officer grade to Clerical and Support Grade staff. Of these, 33 of the new staff have been deployed to help other existing staff working on BSE schemes or additional work arising from the recent announcements about BSE. Some of the other new recruits have been posted to other parts of the Agency in order that a further 10 more experienced permanent staff can be re-deployed to BSE related duties.

The Agency is based in Reading and Newcastle and as the majority of our new staff requirements have been in the non-mobile clerical grades, no additional staff have been deployed from London or from other locations.

Letter from Johnston O'Neill to Mr. David Nicholson, dated 15 May 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service, your question to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food concerning the employment of extra staff since 20 March has been passed for me for reply with respect to this Executive Agency. (28216)

The Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) was launched on 1 April 1996 as an Executive Agency of MAFF. It took over from some 300 local authorities responsibility for enforcement of the hygiene and welfare at slaughter legislation in licensed fresh meat premises in England, Scotland and Wales.

The MHS is responsible for enforcing the enhanced specified bovine offal (SBO), now termed specified bovine material (SBM) controls recommended by the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee. These controls are central to the protection of public health from any risk of BSE. They require the removal of all those tissues known to potentially harbour BSE infectivity from all cattle at slaughter. Compliance with these controls is of paramount importance

To ensure the rigorous enforcement of SBM controls the MHS has recruited 47 additional Meat Inspectors (MIs) and 1 Official Veterinary Surgeon (OVS). The MHS has also developed a new concept of "meat technician" to provide back up support to MIs and OVSs and to give additional public assurance that SBM controls are comprehensively enforced. These individuals are required to hold appropriate relevant qualifications, e.g. from the Institute of Meat or have extensive practical experience in the meat trade. 52 meat technicians have now been recruited, 32 of whom are currently on a training course developed by the MHS in conjunction with the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, University College Salford, the Royal Society of Health.

The working hours of existing MHS staff have also been increased to ensure the strict enforcement of the controls. 31 casual Meat Inspectors have so far been upgraded to full time inspectors. In addition other staff continue to be redeployed to SBM control functions.

Training on SBM controls is also being provided to all meat inspection staff. To assist in this exercise, the MHS has drawn up a guidance pack and a comprehensive set of slides on SBM controls.

Civil Servants

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which of the companies in which civil servants in his Department are directors have given money to political parties in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [29251]

Mr. Boswell: Details of contributions to political parties by companies are given in companies' accounts. Whether a particular company has or has not made a contribution to any political party is not taken into account when deciding whether appointments are suitable.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to ensure that civil servants from his Department who sit on the boards of food and agricultural companies are removed from official duties in areas of work in which those companies have a trading interest; and if he will make a statement. [29255]

Mr. Boswell: The position of staff holding non-executive directorships or similar appointments is safeguarded by the general requirement binding on all civil servants that they must not take part in activities which might conflict with the interests of their Department, or impair their usefulness as public servants, or be inconsistent with their position as such.

Civil servants acting as directors remain subject to the Official Secrets Acts and the need to preserve the confidentiality of departmental business and information received in confidence from others. In relation to any particular appointment, individuals and their line managers must consider whether there is a present or potential conflict of interest, including whether their duties are in areas of work in which the company has a trading interest. If appropriate, an appointment may not be proceeded with, or restrictions may be placed on the kinds of discussion that the individual can take part in.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what costs his Department has paid in respect of liabilities incurred by civil servants or directors of companies; and if he will make a statement. [29250]

Mr. Boswell: I am not aware of any departmental civil servant holding a non-executive directorship or non-executive appointment being subject to legal proceedings or threatened legal proceedings in respect of his or her non-executive role; or of any other liability on behalf of civil servants or directors.

It was agreed in 1991 to allow Departments to indemnify civil servants in non-executive roles because the civil liabilities associated with such appointments might have deterred civil servants from taking up these opportunities.

Agricultural Systems

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the comparative costing of (a) organic, (b) bio-dynamic, (c) permaculture and (d) conventional intensive agricultural systems where the external costs have been internalised; if he will list the results of that research; and if he will make a statement. [29253]

(2) what research on permaculture has been (a) evaluated and (b) commissioned by his Department; what plans it has to evaluate or commission such research in the near future; and if he will make a statement. [29254]

Mr. Boswell: We fund a wide range of research into the environmental aspects of conventional farming, to support our aim of protecting and enhancing the environment. We also have an organic research programme which so far has concentrated on evaluating the agronomic and economic performance of that system. As yet, no research has been commissioned of the specific type noted in these questions.

Comparative work in this area is inherently difficult and subjective, not least because it requires a precise definition of the systems being compared, identification of the various cost factors, and a reliable technique for their valuation. We are considering a study of these methodological issues, in relation to a comparison of organic and conventional farming. Bio-dynamic agriculture is regarded as a form of organic farming, but we do not have a specific policy or research effort in relation to permaculture.

Dry-stone Walling

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what help his Department provides to encourage the maintenance and building of dry-stone walls. [29146]

Mr. Boswell: Grants for the restoration of dry-stone walls are available in those environmentally sensitive areas in which walls are a particular feature, as well as under the countryside stewardship scheme which applies throughout England outside ESAs.

Chocolate Directive

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 523, what assessment he has made as to whether the European Commission proposals to replace the 1973 cocoa and chocolate products directive will adequately (a) protect the diversity of chocolate recipes which may be marketed within the European Community and (b) safeguard the use of the name chocolate on products containing mixtures of vegetable fats currently marketed throughout the European Community; and what is his policy on the Commission's new draft directive on this matter. [29025]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Swindon (Mr. Coombs) on 24 April 1996, Official Report, column 212.

We have not yet seen the formal text of the proposals for the new cocoa and chocolate directive. I sympathise with the points made by the hon. Member and can assure him that we shall seek to protect the legitimate interests of United Kingdom consumers and manufacturers during negotiations.

Wildlife Bill

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what briefing his Department provided to hon. Members for the Committee stage of the Wildlife Bill. [29267]

Mr. Boswell: None.

Employees' Rights

Ms Jowell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provision is available to employees of executive agencies under the control of his Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) child care allowances, (n) carers' leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [27593]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 7 May 1996]: Responsibility for these matters is delegated to agency chief executives and I have asked them to reply to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 15 May 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your PQ on provisions available to employees of the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA).

The VLA was established on 1 October 1995, from the merger of the existing Central Veterinary Laboratory with the Veterinary Investigation Service, which was part of the State Veterinary Service.

The availability of the provisions you mention are set out in a MAFF Staff Handbook to which all employees in this Agency have access. They apply to both full-time and part-time staff. Maternity arrangements are provided in conjunction with the statutory entitlements available. Where provision in the Agency differs from that of MAFF, information is readily available, for example on the Holiday Playscheme.

Letter from G. K. Bruce to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 15 May 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question about the provision available to employees for maternity leave and various other allowances and schemes in respect of the Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD), as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.

PSD currently follows the provisions allowed for by MAFF policies.

Letter from J. M. Rutter, to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 15 May 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about the provision of (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) childcare allowances, (n) carers' leave and (o) career break schemes for staff in the Veterinary Medicines Directorate as this is an area for which I am responsible.

The availability of these provisions is set out in a Staff Handbook to which all employees in Veterinary Medicines Directorate have easy access. They apply to both full-time and part-time staff. Maternity arrangements are provided in conjunction with the statutory entitlements available.

There is an on-site Playscheme for 5-12 year olds which is provided during the main school holidays by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency, with whom we share the site. There is no provision for under 5 year olds.

Letter from Phillip Needham to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 15 May 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply direct to your Parliamentary Question in which you ask what provision is available to employees of Executive Agencies for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home-working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) childcare allowances, (n) careers' leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case.

ADAS follows the provisions as set out in the MAFF Staff Handbook to which all employees in ADAS have access. They apply to both full-time and part-time staff. Maternity arrangements are provided in conjunction with the statutory entitlements available.

Letter from Johnston McNeill to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 15 May 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service, your question to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food concerning various personnel policies has been passed to me for reply with respect to this Executive Agency.

The Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) was launched on 1 April 1996 as an Executive Agency of MAFF. It took over from some 300 local authorities responsibility for enforcement of the hygiene and welfare at slaughter legislation in licensed fresh meat premises in England, Scotland and Wales.

The MHS has developed, consulted on, and negotiated the agreement on a comprehensive set of personnel policies covering a number of these areas, specifically a), b), c) and k). The MHS however must develop policies relevant to the nature of its business environment. On a full cost recovery basis the MHS provides statutory meat inspection and official veterinary services in approximately 1,800 licensed meat plants, cold stores and cutting rooms dispersed throughout England, Scotland and Wales. Employees operate in teams ranging in size from lone workers to a team size of approximately ten. The MHS seeks to provide a cost effective and responsive service to Industry at all times. Specific policies provide for the following:

(i) The MHS maternity leave and payment arrangements apply to all pregnant employees regardless of the number of hours worked per week. To qualify for maternity leave, an MHS employee should write to their Regional Manager or Head of Department at least twenty one days before maternity leave is intended to begin or as soon as is reasonably practicable, confirming pregnancy and the expected week of confinement (EWC). Employees should state the date of the beginning of maternity absence and whether or not they intend to return to work. Maternity leave may not commence earlier than 11 weeks before the EWC. Employees who have 1 or more years' continuous service, are entitled to 18 weeks' leave of absence and may remain absent for up to 29 weeks from the beginning of the week in which confinement occurs. Employees who have less than 1 year's continuous service are entitled to up to 18 weeks' absence. Any employee returning to work after pregnancy may do so under the original contract of employment and on terms and conditions no less favourable than that which would have applied if there had been no maternity leave.

(ii) Employees who have one or more years' continuous service receive maternity pay of 90 per cent. of full pay for the first six weeks and 50 per cent. of full pay and State Maternity Pay for the following 12 weeks. Employees with less than one year's service, casual employees and those with a fixed term contract of less than 2 years receive Statutory Maternity Pay or Maternity Pay.

(iii) Maternity Support Leave (paternity leave) of 5 days with pay will be granted to the child's father or the partner or nominated carer of an expectant mother at or around the time of birth. A nominated carer is the person nominated by the mother to assist in the care of the child and to provide support to the mother at or around the time of the birth. Employees applying for maternity support leave must provide a copy of the mother's maternity certificate.

(iv) Industry requirements for MHS services vary tremendously based on seasonal factors, consumer demand, etc. Accordingly employees operate principally on a 37 hour/5 day week. This is however supplemented by conditional/contractual overtime schemes, a variety of shift systems and in some cases a scheme of annualised hours where significant seasonal demand patterns exist, typically in lamb production. The particular scheme involves employees based at seasonal plants, or servicing a number of plants, working a longer working week of conditioned hours at certain times of the year and a correspondingly shorter working week at other times of the year. The particular scheme in question will be discussed with Industry representatives.

Given the practical demands of the environment in which the majority of MHS operate it does not have any specific policy on parental leave, leave to care for sick children or carer's leave. However, consideration would be given for these purposes under the MHS special leave scheme. No provision is available for homeworking, term time contracts, flexible working hours, childcare allowances, part-time working or career break schemes. Sympathetic consideration would be given to some of the above if appropriate.

Letters from P. I. Stanley to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 15 May 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question about the provision available to employees for maternity leave and various other allowances and schemes in respect of his Central Science Laboratory (CSL) Agency, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.

CSL has not as yet developed specific policies in the areas that you have referred to and is currently following the provisions allowed for by MAFF policies.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provision is available to employees of his Department for (a) maternity leave, (b) maternity pay, (c) paternity leave, (d) parental leave, (e) flexible working hours, (f) part-time work, (g) job sharing, (h) leave to care for sick children, (i) home working, (j) term-time contracts, (k) annual hours contracts, (l) workplace nurseries, (m) child care allowances, (n) carers' leave and (o) career break schemes; and what criteria are used to judge eligibility in each case. [27592]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 7 May 1996]: The availability of these provisions is set out in a staff handbook to which all employees in this Department have easy access. They apply to both full-time and part-time staff. Maternity arrangements are provided in conjunction with the statutory entitlements available.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further research is being carried out to establish whether bovine TB in cattle is infective at any stage of the disease in the absence of gross visible lesion tubercles. [29261]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 14 May 1996]: None in this country at present.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by county the number of dairy herds which reported outbreaks of bovine TB in 1995, or the latest year for which figures are available, the approximate number of cases in each herd, and whether each was a first or repeat outbreak. [29262]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 14 May 1996]: The information is not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, there were 446 new confirmed herd breakdowns in Great Britain in 1995. The approximate number of cases in each herd is four.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much was spent on official hospitality by his Department and all associated agencies in the financial year 1995–96. [28573]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 9 May 1996]: The amount spent by the Minstry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food excluding its agencies on hospitality in the financial year 1995–96 was £59,646.25.

Chief executives of the agencies will reply separately.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 15 May 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question on expenditure on official hospitality over 1995–96 in the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA).

The VLA was established on 1 October 1995, from the merger of the existing Central Veterinary Laboratory with the Veterinary Investigation Service, which was part of the State Veterinary Service. This information therefore includes spending from October 1995 to March 1996 by the former VI Service.

Expenditure on official hospitality in the VLA in the financial year 1995/96 was £18,900.

Letter from J. M. Rutter to Tony Banks, dated 15 May 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question (No. 28573) about expenditure on hospitality by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate for 1995/96, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.

The expenditure on hospitality, which principally covers working lunches for industry liaison meetings, for 1995/96 was £122.70.

Letter from Johnston McNeil to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 15 May 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service, your question to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food concerning official hospitality has been passed to me for reply with regard to this Executive Agency.

£5,750 was spent on hospitality by the Meat Hygiene Service during the financial year 1995/96.

Letter from Phillip Needham to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 15 May 1996:

The costs incurred by ADAS on official hospitality in 1995/96 were £10,630.

Letter from G. K. Bruce to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 15 May 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD), to your question concerning hospitality.

The sum of £1,269 has been spent on official hospitality during 1995/96.

Letter from P. I. Stanley to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 15 May 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question about expenditure on hospitality in the financial year 1995/96 in respect of his Central Science Laboratory (CSL) Agency, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.

Expenditure for the year in question is expected to be £21.3K. Final figures are not yet available but any variation to this estimate will be very small.

Letter from George Trevelyan to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 15 May 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your Question about the amounts spent of official hospitality by the Intervention Board in 1995–1996 as the matter is one within my operational responsibility.

In 1995–1996 the cost of hospitality, which is included in the running cost of the Agency, was £2,522.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

EC Legislation

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will set out the results of the review of guidance on avoiding the over-implementation of EC legislation in UK law. [29976]

Mr. Freeman: The Government's policy is to implement EC legislation in a way that fully meets our legal obligations while imposing the least possible burden on business and others affected.

I am today publishing a new "Implementing European Law" checklist, which will assist Ministers and officials in avoiding any over-implementation of EC legislation. Ministers will certify personally that they have applied the checklist.

I am arranging for copies of the checklist to be placed in the House Library.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was the total amount of unpaid assessed maintenance owing to the Child Support Agency at 31 March; [29347]

(2) what was the average level of arrears for absent parents at 31 March who had received (a) full maintenance assessments and (b) interim maintenance assessments. [29348]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Frank Field, dated 15 May 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about unpaid assessed maintenance.

The total Maintenance Debt as at 31 March 1996 was £895.6m. This includes the debt for both Full Maintenance Assessments estimated at 32% (£286.6m) and Interim Maintenance Assessments estimated at 68% (£609m).

It should be made clear that this is not debt due to the Child Support Agency. Rather it is debt due from absent parents to parents with care some of which will be re-directed to the Secretary of State for Social Security to re-imburse benefit payments previously paid to parents with care.

The average level of arrears in Full Maintenance Assessment cases is not available, nor is it available in Interim Maintenance Assessment cases. This information will be available from the Agency's Debt Management System which will be introduced later this year.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications the Child Support Agency has received for property settlements to be taken into account when calculating maintenance payments; and in how many cases maintenance payments have been reduced to take account of property settlements. [29024]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 15 May 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency maintenance payments.

The Agency received 11,388 applications in response to mailshots from March 1995, which notified absent parents about property/capital settlements. Of the cases live on the Child Support Computer System prior to April 1995, 3,113 cases have been awarded an allowance in respect of property and capital settlements.

New cases since April 1995, which include consideration of property and capital settlements as part of the maintenance assessment process, have to date resulted in 1,928 successful applications.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total administrative cost of running the Child Support Agency in 1995–96; and what was the whole-time equivalent number of staff employed by the agency at (a) the start and (b) the end of that year. [29023]

Mr. Mitchell: Administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 15 May 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency costs and staffing.

The running costs of the Agency for 1995/96 are not yet finalised. The most up to date figure is £197m (subject to end of year adjustment).

The number of whole time equivalent staff employed by the Agency at the start of financial year 1995–96 was 5965.4. The number of whole time equivalent staff employed by the Agency at 31 March 1996 was 6660.0.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) incoming and (b) outgoing items of correspondence and telephone calls were recorded by the Child Support Agency in 1995–96. [29021]

Mr. Mitchell: Administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 15 May 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency correspondence and telephone calls.

No records are kept of the numbers of either incoming or outgoing items of post. The post handled by the Agency contains not just items of correspondence from clients, but general administration items, internal post and files etc. There is no business need for the Agency to differentiate between the types of post received or sent, nor is there a need to record exact figures.

Similarly, the Agency does not maintain records at all its business locations of every incoming and outgoing telephone call (which would include internal and Departmental calls). Procedures are in place to try to ensure that all calls from the public are dealt with effectively, and all Child Support Agency Centres (CSACs) have Client Helplines that record details of all case-specific calls on the Child Support Computer System. Any telephone enquiry which requires action by another section is passed on with a written referral.

Information is available to show how many calls from the public were answered by the Client Help Line sections in each CSAC and the National Enquiry Line, and is shown on the table attached. This also shows the number of occasions where these sections made calls back to the public to answer the query raised.

I hope this is helpful.

Telephone calls answered and made by the client help line and national enquiry line for the period April 1995 to March 1996

	Number
Incoming calls	1,799,686
Call back to the public	41,962

Child Support Assessments

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many child support assessments had been concluded before the 1995–96 financial year; how many were concluded during that year; and how many applications were being processed but had not been concluded at the end of that year. [29022]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 15 May 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support assessments.

In 1993/94 and 1994/95 financial years a total of 456,278 child support assessments were concluded.

The number concluded for financial year 1995/96 is 127,876.

The number of applications that were being processed but had not been concluded at the end of March 1996 is 409,659.

It may be helpful for you to know that this information is regularly updated and copies are placed in the Library.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average full maintenance assessment made by the Child Support Agency. [29349]

Mr. Mitchell: Administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Frank Field, dated 15 may 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency maintenance assessments.

In cases where the absent parent has earned income the average full maintenance assessment is £38.92. When absent parents on benefit are included the average figure is £23.43. These figures are based on a 5% sample of cases as at 30 November 1995.

I hope you find this helpful.

Examination Results

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were the average point scores (A*=7) for (a) English language, (b) GCSE mathematics and (c) both subjects together of each individual 20th group of (i) all 15-year-olds, (ii) boys only and (iii) girls only, when ranked in each case by their average point scores in each of these subjects, indicating the average point score of each group for all GCSE subjects and its average number GCSE entries per pupil in each case, together with the number of pupils in each group for all such pupils (1) in England, (2) in the local education authority maintained sector, (3) in the grant-maintained sector, (4) in the whole maintained sector and (5) in the independent sector for 1992 and 1995. [28607]

Mr. Paice: The data are contained in a number of tables which will be placed in the Library. The tables for 1992 and 1995 show the average point scores (A*=7) for (a) GCSE English language, (b) GCSE mathematics, (c) both subjects and (d) all GCSEs together of each group (i) of all 15-year-olds, (ii) boys only and (iii) girls only, when ranked in each case by their average point scores in each of these subjects, indicating the average point score of each group for all GCSE subjects and its average number of GCSE entries per pupil in each case, together with the number of pupils in each group for all such pupils (1) in England, (2) in the local education authority maintained sector, (3) in the grant maintained sector, (4) in the whole maintained sector and (5) in the independent sector. For English and mathematics separately there are eight groups, and for both subjects together there are 15 groups.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the academic performance of children at grant-maintained schools in London. [28967]

Mrs. Gillan: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Brentford and Isleworth (Mr. Deva) on 20 March, Official Report, column 223.

Smoking

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to publicise to children in school the link between smoking and cancer. [29228]

Mr. Robin Squire: Education about the harmful effects of tobacco is a statutory requirement as part of national curriculum science. The Department has issued guidance to schools on their contribution towards ensuring pupils are aware of the health risks associated with smoking, and to teachers on addressing smoking within the school curriculum and on their contribution towards ensuring pupils are aware of the health risks associated with smoking, and to teachers on addressing smoking within the school curriculum and on appropriate smoking education materials.

Student Loans Company

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the savings to date the Student Loans Company has made from out-sourcing arrangements with the SHL software computer system, compared with the use of in-house services; and if she will make a statement. [29530]

Mr. Forth: This is a matter for the Student Loans Company. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Unemployment (Merseyside)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the measures taken by her Department to assist the unemployed in Merseyside. [29289]

Mr. Forth: In Merseyside, as elsewhere, the Employment Service and training and enterprise councils will continue to deliver a wide range of employment, enterprise and training programmes to help people find the best and quickest route back to employment.

Poverty and Racism

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to take up the finance being provided by the European Union for programmes to tackle poverty and racism; and what amount is being offered. [29661]

Mr. Forth: The Government have recently agreed, in conjunction with other member states, the Commission's guidelines for its new EMPLOYMENT–INTEGRA initiative, which is designed to help vulnerable groups to enter the labour market. The UK will receive an additional 43.9 million ecu to support action under that initiative.

PRIME MINISTER

Lichfield

9. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the effects of the Government's policies on the people of Lichfield. [28487]

The Prime Minister: Lichfield has benefited fully from the Government's policies to provide the foundation for sustainable economic growth and improving living standards.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received from Sir Richard Scott, concerning the Government response in the media to the publication of his report into military exports to Iraq. [29507]

The Prime Minster: None.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 16 May. [28650]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 16 May. [28651]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Committee on Standards in Public Life

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to receive the second report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life; and if he will make a statement. [30147]

The Prime Minister: The second report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life, under the chairmanship of Lord Nolan, is being published today as Command Paper 3270 and copies of the report have been placed in the Vote Office and the Library of the House. I should like to thank Lord Nolan and his colleagues for their continuing commitment and effort in discharging their important remit.

The second report covers further and higher education bodies, grant–maintained schools, training and enterprise councils, local enterprise companies and registered housing associations. I welcome the fact that the committee found these to be "organisations in which very many voluntary Board members and paid staff work hard, maintain high standards and achieve good results.".

I should like to join Lord Nolan and his colleagues in putting on record the Government's appreciation and admiration of the dedicated unpaid service of so many thousands of volunteers in these local public spending bodies. This inquiry confirms the continuing vitality of voluntary service as one of the great strengths of the British system. This voluntary local commitment, channelled through a clear policy framework set by central Government, provides a successful formula for delivering high-quality service to meet local needs.

Naturally, the committee has identified some areas where it believes that improvements can be made and we shall now give the report the close study it deserves before making a considered response, particularly to those recommendations which are addressed directly on the Government.

Armed Forces (Health Services)

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement about the pay of medical and dental officers in the armed forces. [30149]

The Prime Minister: The Armed Forces pay review body has made recommendations on the pay of medial and dental officers in the armed forces in a supplementary report being published today. Copies are available in the Vote Office and the Library of the House.

The review body recommends that the daily rate of basic pay should be increased by an average of 3.8 per cent. from 1 April. Further it recommends that, along with other military personnel, the x-factor, which compensates for the balance of disadvantage of service life, should be increased by 0.5 per cent. to 12 per cent. The review body has also recommended increases in consultant pay, which are designed to improve retention in this area.

The Government have decided to accept the review body's recommendations but to stage their introduction in the same way as the earlier recommendations of the Armed Forces pay review body, and the recommendations of most of the other review bodies. The full award less 1 per cent. will be back-dated to 1 April, and the remainder will be paid from 1 December.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister how much was spent on official hospitality by his Department and all associated agencies in the financial year 1995–96. [28579]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 9 May 1996]: My office spent £60,000 on official hospitality in 1995–96. This reflected twice as many receptions as in the previous year, primarily held to promote issues of importance. The details are set out below.

Motability
Praemium Imperiale

UK Science, Engineering and Technology.

TRANSPORT

Buses (Roadworthiness Checks)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what additional resources are being allocated to roadworthiness enforcement in 1996–97 to allow more roadworthiness checks to be made on buses. [29535]

Mr. Norris: The level of roadworthiness enforcement on public service vehicles—PSVs—by the Vehicle Inspectorate in 1996–97 is forecast to increase by 16 per cent. compared with the budgeted level for 1995–96. This is equivalent to an increase of about two vehicle examiner man years.

Joint Enforcement Database Initiative

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 22 March, Official Report, column 387, when he expects a decision to be made on the investment required for the joint enforcement database. [29571]

Mr. Norris: I have nothing to add to my earlier answer.

Health Visitors (Parking)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will include health visitors in the categories of exemptions from parking restrictions for medical personnel. [29547]

Mr. Norris: There are no general exemptions from parking restrictions for medical personnel. I understand that local agreements exist in London, and in some other parts of England and Wales, whereby the police, traffic wardens and parking attendants exercise discretion where doctors, nurses and midwives park illegally in the course of their work. These have no formal status in law, and their scope is a matter for local consideration.

Bus Operator Licences

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the bus working group to report on the need for applications for operators' licences to provide financial projections to traffic commissioners. [29536]

Mr. Norris: I expect to receive the recommendations of the bus working group on this issue later this year.

Central Transport Group (Pay)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the estimated outturn of the Civil and Public Services Association grades base pay bill in the central transport group for the end of the current financial year. [29557]

Mr. Norris: The estimated outturn for the CPSA grades base pay bill in the central transport group for the current financial year is not yet known as pay negotiations for the 1996–97 CPSA pay settlement are still in progress. The estimated outturn excluding the pay settlement is £9.4 million.

Driving Examiners

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many delegated driving examiners are authorised by (a) his Department and (b) the Driving Standards Agency; [29538]

(2) if he will list the pass and fail rates for delegated driving examiners together with those for examiners employed by the Driving Standards Agency. [29539]

Mr. Norris: The Driving Standards Agency has appointed, on behalf of the Secretary of State for Transport, 62 driving examiners to conduct driving tests for staff working in their organisations. There are 59 persons authoritised to conduct bus driving tests and three authoritised to conduct car driving tests.

The number of tests conducted and pass rates in 1995 were:

	Total	Pass rate (per cent.)
Passenger Carrying Vehicle tests
DSA	15,060	50
Other examiners	6,926	63
Car tests
DSA	1,493,642	47
Other examiners	301	72

The armed forces, police and fire brigades are also authorised to conduct driving tests for their staff. Statistics about the pass rates for those organisations are not collected by this Department.

Heavy Vehicle Driving Standards

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the theory test questions for the large goods vehicle and passenger carrying vehicle driving test will be published; and if they will contain questions relating to drivers' hours rules. [29540]

Mr. Norris: The question bank for LGV and PCV tests will be published on 8 November. The question bank does contain questions on the rules relating to drivers' hours

Driving Theory Test Centre

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what criteria were used in the decision not to locate a driving theory test centre in Crewe; [29534]

(2) what criteria were used when deciding the location of the proposed driving theory test centre. [29533]

Mr. Norris: The criteria for locating theory test centres across Great Britain were decided in order to give a balance between costs, the travelling distances to centres for candidates and the frequency with which test sessions would be available. They are that tests will be available: within five miles in districts—usually towns or cities—with population density of greater than or equal to 1,250 persons per sq km; within 40 miles in sparsely populated districts with a population density of fewer than 100 persons per km; within 20 miles in other districts where population density lies between these limits.

On this basis, it was decided not to locate a theory test centre in Crewe.

Channel Tunnel Safety Authority

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority to publish its annual report for the year 1994–95. [29737]

Mr. Watts: The Channel Tunnel Safety Authority has now published its seventh annual report, covering the period from 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995. I have today arranged for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

Stansted Airport

Sir Alan Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what decision he has reached on options to increase the limit on aircraft movements at Stansted airport. [29876]

Mr. Norris: Following consultation with interested parties, I am today laying before the House a draft order for an increase in the aircraft movement limit from 78,000 per annum to 120,000 per annum. Based on the latest information about the average number of passengers per aircraft, a revised limit of 120,000 movements per year will allow a throughput of 8 million passengers per annum. This throughput is expected to be reached in around 2000-01.

This proposal is consistent with the planning inquiry's conclusion that the timing of the further development of Stansted to a capacity of 15 million passengers per annum should depend on the rate of growth of demand.

The Government welcome the development of the less busy airports in the south-east. The increase to 120,000 movements per year would permit the continued growth of Stansted, providing more jobs for the local communities, in line with the further development of the associated infrastructure. This new limit would also ensure that growth of the airport is phased, allowing BAA, the airport operator, to invest in new facilities at the terminal as business grows.

Shadow Tolls

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what forecast he has made of the total cost of shadow tolls per annum from design, build, finance and operate road schemes to the Government in (a) 2000, (b) 2005 and (c) 2010. [29268]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Colin Pickthall, dated 16 May 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the cost of shadow tolls for design, build, finance and operate road schemes. We forecast expenditure of approximately £110m in 2000/01, £120m in 2005/6 and £130m in 2010/11 at cash prices on contracts let to date. Actual expenditure incurred will be dependent on traffic levels.

Rail Infrastructure

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the replacement cost of the permanent way and other railway infrastructure in Great Britain. [28475]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack's fixed asset values as at 31 March 1995 on a current cost basis are described in section D of part 10 of the Railtrack prospectus. Current cost is the cost of replacing the existing asset with an equivalent asset capable of performing its task. The total gross replacement cost of Railtrack's tangible fixed assets at 31 March 1995 was £19,366 million, of which £9,097 million related to the track. After taking into account accumulated depreciation, the amounts are £6,492 million and £1,467 million respectively. Fuller information is set out on pages 144 to 146 of the prospectus, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) bridges, (b) viaducts and (c) other railway structures have been demolished by Railtrack since it assumed responsibility for the railway infrastructure. [28476]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack would demolish bridges or other structures only when they were no longer required for operational reasons and after any necessary consents had been granted. Exact figures could be obtained only at disproportionate cost because Railtrack does not hold this information centrally.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Committee of the Regions

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to announce the nomination of a new United Kingdom member of the Committee of the Regions to replace Mr. Roy Cross. [29686]

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary has recently nominated Councillor Robert Eccles, JP, an independent member of Ryedale district council and of the new unitary York district council, to replace Mr. Cross.

Conference Representatives of Governments

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what communication he has received from the secretariat of the conference of representatives of Governments of member states of the European Union concerning its endowment with a specific legal personality by an amendment to the present treaty of European Union. [29712]

Mr. David Davis: The secretariat has circulated a presidency note setting out options on the issue of legal personality for the European Union. The document is note No. 27 (CONF 3827/96). It was placed in the Library of the House on 8 May.

Indonesian Police

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Indonesian police officers have received training in the United Kingdom under the police management training project in each year since 1990; and if he will list for each officer the (a) name, (b) rank, (c) cost of training, (d) duration of training and (e) United Kingdom police force which provided the training. [29506]

Mr. Hanley: Between 1990–91 and 1995–96, 24 Indonesian police officers have received training in the United Kingdom under the police management training project. Details are given in the table, which records that several officers came to the UK for training more than once. The training costs quoted are approximate.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Firemen

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) fatalities and (b) injuries have been suffered by firemen in the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [29048]

Mr. Sackville: The information is given in the table.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in each of the last two year, how many (a) pistols, (b) other handguns, (c) sub-machine guns, (d) rifles, (e) other firearms and (f) shotguns seized subsequently by the police, or surrendered under amnesty to the police, in (i) Manchester, (ii) Liverpool and (iii) the Metropolitan police areas, have been used in a crime, or have been seized by the police as being in the possession of persons conspiring to commit a crime; how many had been previously deactivated in accordance with the requirements of the Firearms Act 1988, and subsequently illegally reactivated; and in each category, how many were fitted with a sound modulator or silencer. [29277]

Mr. Maclean: Information on seizures of firearms, on sound moderators and on silencers is not available. There have been no firearms amnesties in the areas referred to in the past two years.

I shall write to the hon. Member with the available information about illegally reactivated firearms, which is being obtained from the Forensic Science Service.

Prisoners (Drugs)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will break down by class the illegal drugs found on prisoners in England and Wales in the last available year; what assessment he has made of the advantage of restricting the visiting privileges available to prisoners who are tested positive for drug use and found in possession of illegal drugs; and if he will make a statement. [29394]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 16 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking for a break down by class of illegal drugs found on prisoners; and for an assessment of the advantage of restricting the visiting privileges available to prisoners who test positive for drugs and who are found in possession of illegal drugs.

Information is held centrally about drug finds reported by establishments and includes finds in various locations as well as finds on prisoners. Information relating to finds on prisoners could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The breakdown by class of the illegal drugs finds reported by prisons in England and Wales during the 1995/96 financial year is shown in the table below.

	Number
Class A	1,019
Class B	7,020
Class C	81
Total	8,120

There were a further 404 finds for which no classification is available. As part of its drugs strategy, the Prison Service is introducing in a number of prisons, on a trial basis, mandatory closed or non contact visits for any prisoner found, through mandatory drug testing to have misused drugs, or who is known or reasonably suspected to have dealt in drugs in any way. This initiative will be carefully assessed and evaluated to see whether it should be extended to the rest of the prison estate.

Drug Misuse

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement as to the estimated percentage of non-drug offences which arise from, or are connected with, the misuse of drugs by male offenders in the 14 to 21 years age group. [29391]

Mr. Sackville: It is not currently possible to estimate with any accuracy the percentage of drug-related crime committed by male offenders in the 14 to 21 years age group.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department has commissioned concerning the relationship between the misuse of illegal drugs and other non-drug offences; and if he will make a statement. [29392]

Mr. Sackville: Research has been commissioned by the Home Office into the nature and incidence of drug-related crime, and projects currently in progress include interviewing and testing people arrested by the police to establish the extent of their drug misuse, obtaining information on how crack-cocaine addicts fund their habits and the impact of treatment programmes on offending behaviour.

Police Authorities

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the expenditure for each of the police authorities in England in 1995–96, their planned expenditure in 1996–97 and the percentage change in each case. [29616]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is set out in the table.

Police Grant

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the police grant for each English police authority in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97; what was the percentage change; and how much that represents (i) per resident and (ii) per elector in each authority area. [29591]

Mr. Maclean: The information available is set out in the table. Numbers of electors are not available by police authority area. Numbers of electors by London boroughs, counties and districts are published by the Office for National Statistics in "Electoral Statistics 1995" (series EL No. 22), a copy of which is in the Library.

HEALTH

Contracts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 22 March, Official Report, column 382, if he will now make a statement on health service contracts agreed by health authorities for 1996–97. [29474]

Mr. Horam: Information on health service contracts agreed by health authorities will be placed in the Library.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has instigated into past cases of CJD, with particular reference to analysis of museum specimens, to establish whether the new strain of CJD recently reported to his Department existed previously. [28612]

Mr. Horam: The Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease surveillance unit in Edinburgh holds data going back to the 1970s on pathologically confirmed cases of CJD. The post mortem reports show no evidence of the new variant CJD—NVCJD—announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 20 March 1996. Further checks on younger cases have produced no evidence of the earlier existence of NVCJD.

Some 32 United Kingdom and four European museum specimens dating from 1980 to 1990 have been examined by the CJD unit. Two UK cases dating from pre-1980 have also been examined.

Mental Health

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 22 April, Official Report, column 24, how many children have been admitted to (a) NHS psychiatric care and (b) non-NHS psychiatric care for each year since 1979; and how many children have been detained under the Mental Health Act 1983 or other provision for each year since 1979. [29478]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 22 April, Official Report, column 24, for the information on children admitted to national health service psychiatric care. Information on the number of children admitted to registered private mental hospitals and nursing homes is not recorded centrally. The number of children detained for psychiatric care under the Mental Health Act 1983 and other provisions is not identifiable separately in the information available centrally.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients undergoing a mental health review tribunal under mental health legislation have been refused discharge on the ground of inadequate and inappropriate provision in the community, for each year since 1979. [29404]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not held centrally. Such grounds are not part of the criteria in sections 72 and 73 of the Mental Health Act 1983 but discharge can be delayed until a care plan under the care programme approach is in place.

Asbestos

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department collates in respect of the incidence of carcinoma of the larynx; and how many cases were attributed to an individual working with asbestos in the last five years for which figures are available. [29272]

Mr. Horam: There were 1,996 newly diagnosed cases of cancer of the larynx (ICD[1] 161) in 1990, the latest year for which data are available. Figures for earlier years are given in the annual reference volumes, "Cancer statistics: registrations", series MBI, copies of which are available in the Library.

Information on possible exposure—occupational or otherwise—to asbestos related to newly diagnosed cases of cancer of the larynx is not collected.

National Register for Carers

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what support his Department is giving to the National Register for Carers; and if he will make a statement. [29274]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for West Lancashire (Mr. Pickthall) on 7 May, Official Report, column 36.

Epilepsy

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the effects on people with epilepsy of changes to their medication; [29309]

(2) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the levels of misdiagnosis in respect of children suspected of suffering from epilepsy. [29313]

Mr. Bowis: The Department of Health has not commissioned research in these specific areas. The Medical Research Council is the main agency through which the Government commission biomedical and clinical research, which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. The MRC is always willing to consider scientifically sound research proposals and has identified neurological conditions, which include epilepsy, as an area in which it would particularly welcome proposals.

The Department of Health's central research development committee has a standing group on health technologies. This group has identified new anti-epileptic drugs and existing therapies as a priority area for research. A call for proposals will be made in June 1996. In addition, a large MRC multi-centre study has recently been set up to compare immediate versus deferred treatment with anti-epileptic drugs.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the preferred medicine choices for people with epilepsy that are contained in the prodigy pilot study on computer-assisted prescribing currently being evaluated. [29311]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Minister for Health gave my hon. Friend the Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton) on 18 December 1995, Official Report, column 945.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many nurses specialising in the care of people with epilepsy are employed in the national health service; [29315]

(2) how many hospital consultants and paediatricians specialising in the treatment of epilepsy are employed in the national health service. [29314]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was spent on medicines for the treatment of epilepsy in the last five years. [29308]

Mr. Bowis: The table shows the information for England for the period 1991 to 1995. The data were obtained from the prescription cost analysis system, an information system administered by the Prescription Pricing Authority The figures are in terms of net ingredient cost which has increased from £26 million in 1991 to £48.5 million in 1995. The figures for 1995 are based on provisional data.

Net ingredient cost of drugs prescribed for the treatment of epilepsy

England

Year	Net ingredient cost (£ millions)
1991	26.0
1992	31.0
1993	36.3
1994	41.8
1995	48.5

1. Drugs used for the treatment of epilepsy are those preparations in the British National Formulary (issue 28 September 1994) therapeutic group 4.8—antiepileptics. Some of the drugs in this section may be used for other conditions.

2. The data are from the Prescription Cost Analysis system and cover all prescriptions dispensed by community pharmacists and appliance contractors, dispensing doctors and personal administration.

3. The net ingredient cost refers to the cost of the drug before discounts and does not include any dispensing costs or fees.

4. The figures for 1995 are based on provisional data.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of medicines prescribed for the treatment of epilepsy was for (a) generic preparations and (b) branded medicines in each of the last five years for which records are available. [29310]

Mr. Bowis: The table shows the information for England for the period 1991 to 1995 obtained from the prescription cost analysis system. The figures for 1995 are based on provisional data.

Proportion of generic and branded drugs prescribed for the treatment of epilepsy

England		Percentage
Year	Generic	Branded
1991	41.2	58.8
1992	43.5	56.5
1993	45.8	54.2
1994	46.7	53.3
1995	50.0	50.0

1. Drugs used for the treatment of epilepsy are those preparations in the British National Formulary (issue 28 September 1994) therapeutic group 4.8—antiepileptics. Some of the drugs in this section may be used for other conditions.

2. The data are from the prescription cost analysis system and cover all prescriptions dispensed by community pharmacists an appliance contractors, dispensing doctors and personal administration.

3. Drugs prescribed generically include drugs prescribed and dispensed generically and drugs prescribed generically but dispensed as a branded drug because a generic is not available (for example the branded is still under patent).

4. The figures for 1995 are based on provisional data.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to issue guidance to the regional offices of the national health service executive on appropriate standards of care for people with epilepsy. [29312]

Mr. Bowis: I have no current plans to do so.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions his Department held with GPs and patient organisations before deciding which medicines should be included for the treatment of epilepsy in the prodigy pilot study. [29316]

Mr. Bowis: We fund several sources of information for general practitioners on drug treatments, consulting a wide range of professional and other bodies as appropriate. GPs are of course free to choose which drugs to prescribe for their patients, in the light of the information available to them.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice his Department has issued to doctors treating people with epilepsy regarding consistency and continuity in prescribing medicines. [29318]

Mr. Bowis: While it is our policy to encourage generic prescribing, we expect the doctor to choose the product which, in his clinical judgment, is most appropriate for the patient's condition. The British National Formulary, issued free of charge to all doctors, recognises that bioavailability can be a problem, making it necessary that some patients remain with one brand.

Prescription Guidelines

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many medicines are currently contained in the prescription guidelines; and if the guidelines include brand names. [29317]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton) on 18 December 1995, Official Report, column 946 and to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Croydon, North-East (Mr. Congdon) on 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1154.

Doctors

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of those who completed their training as doctors in each of the last 10 years were (a) men and (b) women. [29323]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 19 March, Official Report, column 190.

Embryos

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to instruct the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority to contract donors of sperm or eggs whose embryos will be kept past the five-year limit. [29338]

Mr. Horam: Most embryos currently in store were created from gametes from couples being treated together. In a small number of cases, donor gametes were used. The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority has issued guidance on the steps to be taken to alert couples and, where appropriate, donors to the arrangements available for extending the storage period. The authority has also had a series of meetings with centres where it has stressed the importance of making all reasonable effort to contact those whose embryos are nearing the end of their storage period.

Committees (Membership)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the present members of (a) the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Food Policy, (b) the Committee on Mutagenicity of Chemicals in Food and (c) the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Foods, together with their current employers; [29285]

(2) which present members of (a) the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Food Policy, (b) the Committee on Mutagenicity of Chemicals in Food and (c) the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, are in receipt of grants from private companies. [29286]

Property Sales

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 321, (1) what estimate he has made of the annual proceeds from the sale of properties in each of the next 10 years; [29714]

(2) if his estimate of proceeds from the sale of surplus or potentially surplus properties has been assumed in published public expenditure survey accounts. [29715]

Mr. Horam: The estimated annual proceeds from the sale of non-national health service trust properties over the next four years is shown in the table, together with an aggregate estimate of sales after 2000. The figures are based on the best estimate of estates advisors to the NHS executive. The estimates are based on current open market values and are liable to change as a result of fluctuations in property market values. Actual proceeds may be subject to considerable variation since many properties scheduled for sale are currently in operational use and the estimates are based on provisional disposal dates.

Estimates of the proceeds from the sale of surplus non-national health service trust properties have been taken into account as capital receipts in the Government's expenditure plans, published as Cm 3212 in March.

Mr. Bowis: The social services inspectorate, working with the north-western regional office of the national health service executive, will shortly complete its investigation into the implementation of community care by Wirral metropolitan borough council and the Wirral health authority. [29331]

Mr. Bowis: Grants can be authorised at any time during the year. Comprehensive information about those paid during 1996–97 will not therefore be available before the end of that year. The majority of grants go to national organisations.

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the chief inspector of social services to (a) commence and (b) conclude his investigations into Essex social services. [29582]

Mr. Bowis: The social services inspectorate will shortly complete its investigation into the implementation of community care by Essex county council. Material originally submitted by the end of March is being updated in the light of newly available statistical data. In the light of the inspectorate's conclusions, we shall consider what further action, if any, is required.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Arms Export Licences

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total value of the licences granted for the export of arms manufactured in the United Kingdom to the former Yugoslavia, for each year between 1987 and 1991; and what is his policy on the granting of such licences currently. [27445]

Mr. Oppenheim: The first part of this question could be answered only at disproportionate cost.

The UK has observed the UN arms embargo of former Yugoslavia with effect from 25 September 1991. The Government's current policy was set out in an answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office in response to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Aylesbury, (Mr. Lidington), 31 January 1996, Official Report, column 766.

Land Mines

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many export licences for land mines possessing a self-destruct mechanism have been (a) applied for and (b) granted in each year since 1990; [28316]

(2) how many export licences for components which can be used in the manufacture of land mines have (a) been applied for and (b) granted in each year since 1990. [28317]

Mr. Oppenheim: It has been the practice of successive Administrations not to disclose details of applications for export licences or export licences. The hon. Lady may be aware that, following the publication of the Scott report, the Government have accepted Sir Richard Scott's recommendation that we should review this convention. The Ministry of Defence is taking the lead in the review and is consulting widely during its consideration.

In this case, however, I am prepared to say that no export licences have been applied for, or granted, for anti-personnel land mines or for specially designed components for such mines during the period in question.

Car Imports (Germany)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the tariff levied on (a) British, (b) Swiss and (c) Japanese cars imported into Germany. [28917]

Mr. Nelson: No tariff is levied on British cars. The Community common customs tariff of 10 per cent. is charged on Japanese and Swiss cars unless the latter qualify for EC-EFTA—European Free Trade Association—preference, in which case they enter Germany duty free.

Mechanical Engineered Products

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the tariff levied by Germany on imports from (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Switzerland and (c) Japan of mechanical engineered products. [28918]

Mr. Nelson: No tariff is levied on imports from the United Kingdom nor on Swiss goods qualifying for EC-EFTA—European Free Trade Association—preference. Other Swiss products and products from Japan are charged the tariffs laid down in the Community common customs tariff. Current rates are contained in Commission regulations (EC) No. 3009/95, Official Journal L 319 of 30 December 1995. Most mechanical engineered products are classified from chapter 84 onwards.

Crown Post Offices

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money the Post Office has generated from the introduction of agency status in (a) Scotland (b) throughout the rest of the United Kingdom in each financial year since the introduction of the policy. [28965]

Mr. Oppenheim: I understand from the Post Office that the recurring financial benefits, on a national basis, from the policy of converting crown post offices to agency status are as follows:

Net recurring benefits from that year's conversions

Year	£ million
1989–90	4.4
1990–91	3.9
1991–92	4.1
1992–93	3.4
1993–94	3.9
1994–95	[1]4.1
1995–96	[1]3.9

[1] Estimated.
Total cumulative recurring benefit: £27.7 million.

Separate figures for Scotland could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what criteria are used by the Post Office in assessing which crown post offices should be given agency status. [29066]

Mr. Oppenheim: I understand from the Post Office that it uses the following criteria in assessing crown post offices for conversion to agency status:

the customer service benefits of changing, eg longer opening hours, better location;

financial benefits;

ability to redeploy any surplus staff;

availability of a suitable partner to become agent.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what surveys the Post Office has carried out on the impact of agency status and franchising on the operation of former crown post offices. [29065]

Mr. Oppenheim: I understand that the Post Office has conducted regular customer opinion surveys of the offices that have converted to agency status. The results show that customers prefer the new agency offices, principally due to improvements in the office environment and longer opening hours.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many staff who formerly worked in crown post offices have left employment following the introduction of agency status. [28963]

Mr. Oppenheim: I understand from the Post Office that, when a crown post office is to be converted to agency status, staff are offered redeployment opportunities or voluntary redundancy terms. The total number of Post Office Counters Ltd. staff who have accepted voluntary redundancy since the introduction of the crown conversion policy is 4,288. It is not possible to say how many of those who opted for voluntary redundancy terms did so as a result of the conversion of crown offices to agency status.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many crown post offices in Ayrshire have been converted to agency status since the introduction of the policy; and how many crown post offices there are currently in Ayrshire. [28987]

Mr. Oppenheim: I understand from the Post Office that 13 former crown post offices in Ayrshire have been converted to agency status since 1989. At the end of April 1996, there were five crown post offices in Ayrshire.

Colliery Areas (Regeneration)

Mrs. Clywd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what allocation of the reserve fund for Community initiatives from the EU will be made available for RECHAR in the United Kingdom. [29463]

Mr. Oppenheim: I shall announce the allocation as soon as possible.

British Coal Industrial Death and Retirement Fund

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the conformity of British Coal's appropriation of the assets of the industrial death and retirement fund with clause 18 of the fund's governing document. [29505]

Mr. Page: The operation of the industrial death and retirement scheme—IDRS—is a matter for British Coal. However, I understand that the chairman of British Coal has written to the hon. Member previously, outlining the corporation's powers under clause 18.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received, and from which bodies, asserting that the British Coal industrial death and retirement fund was intended to be a trust. [29504]

Mr. Page: I have not received any such representations.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will take steps to ascertain from British Coal if there was an intention to create a trust or fund when the industrial death and retirement fund was created. [29503]

Mr. Page: This is a matter for British Coal. However, I understand that the chairman of British Coal has written to the hon. Member previously, confirming the nature of the scheme when it was established.

Trade Associations

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps his Department has taken to put into effect the proposals contained in the model trade association paper. [29657]

Mr. Page: The best practice guide for the model trade association was developed by the DTI in consultation with trade associations and other representative bodies including the Confederation of British Industry, the Institute of Directors, the Engineering Employers Federation and the Federation of Small Businesses.

It is for trade associations to reach decisions about putting the guide into effect. I and my colleagues and officials are, however, actively encouraging adoption of the model through discussions with individual associations. We are also supporting a benchmarking club which aims to set benchmark standards against which trade associations may measure their performance in the various areas covered by the model.

Business Failures

Mr. Khabra: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the number of business failures in the first quarter of (a) 1996 and (b) 1995. [28488]

Mr. Oppenheim: The number of compulsory liquidations, creditors' voluntary liquidations and bankruptcy orders in the first quarters of 1995 and 1996, by category and on a seasonally adjusted basis, are shown in the table:

	1995	1996
Compulsory liquidations	1,364	1,273
Creditors' voluntary liquidations	2,141	2,022
Bankruptcy orders	5,054	5,000

Domestic Gas Bills

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of changes in domestic gas bills over the past five years. [28494]

Mr. Eggar: The average annual domestic gas bill, in real 1995 prices and excluding VAT, fell by more than 12 per cent. from 1991 to 1995. Including VAT, the fall over the same period was 5 per cent. in real 1995 prices.

Export and Import Control

Ms Quin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to bring forward legislation to replace the Export and Import Control Act 1990. [29350]

Mr. Nelson: I plan to publish a consultative paper on export licensing procedures in the summer. I shall consider, in the light of representations made to me in response to that paper, whether new legislation is needed to replace the Export and Import Control Act 1990.

Manufacturing Output

Mr. Pike: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in which regions of England there has been a decline in manufacturing output since 1979. [28358]

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not available. Overall, manufacturing output has risen by 12 per cent. since 1979. The latest CBI "Regional Trend Survey" shows manufacturers are expecting strong output growth in all regions.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans his Department has to undertake an integrated transport study of the M4 corridor; and if he will make a statement. [27899]

Mr. Jones: My right hon. Friend and I have no plans but the development of proposals for the M4 relief road will include an assessment of alternative transport modes.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when his Department plans to publish a draft order concerning the M4 relief road; and if he will make a statement. [27898]

Mr. Jones: It will be several years before the necessary work has been done to identify the scheme details and prepare draft orders.

Beef Producers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he will assist beef producers in respect of their cash flow; and if he will make a statement. [28406]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government have introduced a series of measures to assist beef producers. The two main aids are the calf processing scheme and compensation for animals over 30 months which no longer have a market. Both schemes are operational in Wales and will help producers' cash flow.

In addition, I arranged for payments of subsidies to Welsh beef producers to be accelerated and over £66 million—representing 90 per cent. of livestock payments—was paid during April 1996.

Cattle Slaughter Scheme

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to compensate farmers for the transport costs of delivering cattle from collection points to abattoirs under the slaughter scheme. [28548]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Under the 30 month slaughter scheme, the Government pay the cost of carcase disposal.This includes the transport costs beyond the abattoir. Costs for transporting live animals to abattoirs is the responsibility of producers either directly or via the commission charged by livestock markets.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the foreign-owned companies which have been granted regional selective assistance in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [28655]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Negotiations between the Welsh Office and applicants are confidential. However, certain information on offers of assistance of over £75,000 is published in "Labour Market Trends"—previously in the "Employment Gazette"—following the first payment of grant.

Between 1 April 1991 and 31 March 1996, 186 firms described as foreign owned at the time of the application received offers of regional selective assistance towards a total of 204 projects. These offers totalled £218 million and the projects were forecast to create or safeguard some 30,000 jobs and involved private investment of £1.8 billion.

Physiotherapists

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many physiotherapists there were in (a) general practices and (b) hospitals, in each health board area, in each of the last two years; and if he will make a statement. [28708]

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he plans to assist farmers who raise mature beef; and if he will make a statement. [29046]

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many appeals have been lodged against the political restriction of their posts by Government employees during the last five years; how many of these appeals have been (i) successful and (ii) unsuccessful; and how many of these appeals have still to be dealt with. [29219]

ENVIRONMENT

Business Rate Relief (Village and Charity Shops)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the amount of business rate relief in England and Wales, for the latest year for which figures are available, in respect of (a) village shops obtaining reduction or omission of rates under section 69 of the Local Government Finance Act 1988 and (b) charity shops. [28606]

Sir Paul Beresford: In 1994–95 in England and Wales, £2,309,392 of rate relief was granted to ratepayers under section 49 of the Local Government Finance Act 1988; and £450,935,653 was granted to charities. My Department does not keep information on the breakdown of these figures by types of business.

Asbestos

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what records are (a) collected and (b) evaluated in respect of the number of (a) men and (b) women suffering from asbestos-related diseases. [28602]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department of Social Security keeps records of people suffering from certain asbestos-related disease which are prescribed for the purposes of industrial injuries disablement benefit. The records do not provide a complete count of the incidence of asbestos-related diseases as only those eligible to claim the benefit are recorded. From 1994, these records distinguish between men and women.

The Health and Safety Executive maintains records under the Reporting of Injuries Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1995 (RIDDOR). These require employers, in certain circumstances only, to report certain asbestos-related diseases occurring among their employees. These figures distinguish between men and women.

Council Tax (Students)

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions his Department has had with the Department of Social Security regarding the liability of students for council tax when sharing a house with people on income support. [29037]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department reviews with the Department of Social Security from time to time a range of matters of mutual interest relating to the operation of the council tax and council tax benefit systems.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans his Department has to make changes to the regulations on the liability of students for council tax when sharing a house with people on income support. [29038]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend has no such plans.

Politically Restricted Posts

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local government employees work in politically restricted posts. [29216]

Sir Paul Beresford: Approximately 40,000 local authority posts in England and Wales are estimated to be so restricted.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals have been lodged against the political restriction of their posts by local government employees during the last five years; how many of these appeals have been (i) successful and (ii) unsuccessful; and how many of these appeals have still to be dealt with. [29218]

Sir Paul Beresford: In the past five years, 516 applications for exemption from political restriction were made in respect of England to the independent adjudicator appointed under the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Exemption was granted in 489 cases, declined in 24, and three applications are outstanding.

Passive Smoking

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what proposals he is now evaluating to encourage the leisure industry to protect workers and customers from the effects of passive smoking; [29221]

(2) what steps he is taking to guarantee a smoke-free atmosphere for those who work in the leisure industry. [29222]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Government's view is that passive smoking can best be addressed by voluntary means. The Department of the Environment has issued a code of practice for owners and managers of public places, providing practical guidance on implementing suitable policies on smoking. The code emphasises that such policies should protect both the public and non-smoking employees from passive smoking. The Health and Safety Executive has issued guidance to employers calling on them to adopt smoking policies to protect workers from the effects of environmental tobacco smoke.

The recently published results of a survey commissioned by the Department of the Environment show the leisure industry to be lagging behind in establishing effective smoking policies. The Government are currently considering how best to target advice and publicity campaigns further to encourage progress in these areas.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with representatives of the workers in the licensed and restaurant trade regarding the dangers of passive smoking incurred by their workers in the leisure industry. [29230]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have held no discussions with representatives of workers in the licensed and restaurant trade on this subject.

Ofwat (Nature Conservation)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he proposes to give to the Office of Water Services with regard to the implications of the habitats directive to review licences and consent which could damage special protection areas and special areas of conservation; and how this will be reflected in its next price review. [29256]

Mr. Clappison: The review of abstraction licences and discharge consents in the light of the habitats directive is a matter for the Environment Agency. The conduct of periodic price reviews is a matter for the Director General of Water Services.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what duty there is on Ofwat to further nature conservation. [29257]

Mr. Clappison: Section 3(2) of the Water Industry Act 1991 places a duty on the Director General of Water Services, in formulating or considering any proposals relating to the functions of a water or sewerage undertaker, to exercise his powers so as to further the conservation and enhancement of natural beauty and the conservation of flora, fauna and geological of physiographical features of special interest.

Water Companies

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what new measures the water companies propose to implement as result of their new duty to promote the efficient use of water. [29271]

Mr. Clappison: The measures water companies are taking to promote the efficient use of water amongst their customers are the responsibility of the water companies themselves. The Director General of Water Services is considering how he should use his powers to impose this requirement on water undertakers.

Water Leakage

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what action the water regulator is taking to ensure that the leakage targets which companies have set themselves are reasonable; [29320]

(2) how Ofwat will ensure that a consistent and coherent approach is adopted to water leakage by all water companies. [29321]

Mr. Clappison: The Director General of Water Services is involved in discussions with the water companies about their targets and the measures they are taking to reduce leakage.

Government Office, Yorkshire and Humberside

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what democratic accountability he proposes for the new structure of the integrated Government office in Yorkshire and Humberside. [29659]

Sir Paul Beresford: As head of the Government office for Yorkshire and Humberside, the regional director remains accountable to each of my right hon. Friends the President of the Board of Trade and the Secretaries of State for Education and Employment and for Transport and to me for the delivery of our particular policies and programmes.

Pollution Control

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it a requirement for the operators of integrated pollution control processes to advertise applications or variations of an authorisation in the national and relevant local press. [28477]

Mr. Clappison: Operators of processes falling under integrated pollution control have been required to advertise applications for, and variations of, authorisations in the relevant local press since the inception of the regime in 1991. Such operators have additionally, since 1 April 1996, been required to advertise applications and variations in the London Gazette.

Planning Controls

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he plans to bring forward legislation to abolish crown immunity from planning controls. [29269]

Sir Paul Beresford: We intend to remove crown exemption from the planning system as soon as a suitable legislative opportunity arises.

Planning Guidance

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the regional planning guidance for Yorkshire and Humberside was subject to environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment"; if he will publish the appraisal; what alternative courses of action from those set out in the guidance were considered in the environmental appraisal; how the guidance was modified by the results of the environmental appraisal; and what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of the guidance. [29490]

Sir Paul Beresford: The process of preparing regional planning guidance generally followed the principles set out in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment". The final guidance included numerous modifications to the original advice reflecting the views expressed by environmental organisations and others. It draws heavily on published national policy. A central theme of the guidance is the need to attain the objective of sustainability. I do not intend to publish a separate environmental appraisal in addition to the material already published.

The guidance asks that development plans prepared by local authorities be subject to environment appraisal to ensure that planning policies and proposals are consistent with the principles of sustainable development set out in the guidance. The arrangements for monitoring and review and the means whereby a cross-section of organisations and interests in the region can contribute to the process is currently the subject of discussions between the Government office and local planning authorities.

Water (Environmental Appraisal)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the "Water: Increasing Customer Choice" consultation paper was subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment"; if he will publish the appraisal; what alternative courses of action from those set out in the "Water: Increasing Customer Choice" consultation paper were considered in the environmental appraisal; how the paper was modified by the results of the environmental appraisal; and what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of the paper. [29491]

Mr. Clappison: The consultation paper is about customer choice between suppliers of drinking water. Inter alia, possible environmental aspects were taken into account in developing the proposals; they take for granted that there would be no change in the environmental standards and performance required—that is, with respect to abstraction requirements and the handling of wastes arising in the treatment process—see in particular paragraphs 4.34 and 4.36.

Biodiversity

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the environmental appraisal conducted in accordance with guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" for the forthcoming Government response to the report of the United Kingdom biodiversity steering group. [29492]

Mr. Clappison: The United Kingdom steering group took account of the guidance set out in the booklet, "Policy Appraisal and the Environment", in preparing the costed action plans for key species and habitats contained in the group's report. The Government's response to the report, published on 15 May 1996, accepts the order of costs involved as a best estimate at this time by leading scientists and economists in this field. As more detailed implementation plans are drawn up the costs and benefits may well become clearer. If these differ significantly from the group's estimates, they will be referred to the UK biodiversity group.

Planning and Telecommunications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the planning and telecommunications consultation paper was subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment"; if he will publish the appraisal; what alternative courses of action from those set out in the planning and telecommunications consultation paper were considered in the environmental appraisal; how the paper was modified following the appraisal; and what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of the paper. [29493]

Sir Paul Beresford: Our consultation paper, "Planning and Telecommuncations", seeks views on whether a general planning permission should be granted for certain kinds of telecommunications development. The potential environmental impact was considered in drawing up the paper although a full environmental assessment was not judged appropriate. Likely environmental implications will be fully taken into account in the formulation of any new policies, in the light of responses to the consultation. We are not proposing special arrangements to monitor the impact of any new legislation arising from this consultation exercise but this will be kept under a review in the normal way.

Waste Management

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the waste management regulations were subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment"; if he will publish the appraisal; what alternative courses of action from those set out in the waste management regulations were considered in the appraisal; how the regulations were modified by the results of the appraisal; and what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of the regulations. [29494]

Mr. Clappison: The main purpose of the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994 is to transpose into national law the requirements of the amended EC framework directive on waste. In view of the objectives and requirements of the directive, a separate environmental appraisal in relation to the 1994 regulations would not have been appropriate.

The Environment Agency is a competent authority for the purpose of the regulations and has a duty under section 42 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to ensure that licensed activities do not cause environmental pollution or harm to human health.

Durham Chemicals, Birtley

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will make a statement on the report by the Environment Agency concerning the release of chlorine gas by Durham Chemicals in Birtley on 17 April; [29585]

(2) if he will make a statement regarding his power to insist that where poison gas is released, the local authorities environmental health department and local health authority must be informed, with special reference to the incident at Durham Chemicals on 17 April; [29586]

(3) if he will give an instruction to the director of the Environment Agency to ensure that all companies manufacturing hazardous chemicals in the United Kingdom are aware of their duty to report immediately a leak of those chemicals to the Environment Agency and to the local authority environmental health committee. [29590]

Mr. Clappison: The Environment Agency learnt on 24 April that there had been an unauthorised release of chlorine gas from the Durham Chemicals process. The agency promptly investigated the incident, which had occurred on 17 April, and as a result of its findings, issued an enforcement notice to Harcros Chemical UK Ltd. the operator of the process, on 2 May. The notice states that conditions of the company's integrated pollution control—IPC—authorisation were breached by the operator's failure to report the release to the agency within 24 hours of its occurrence, the failure to provide adequate supervision of staff and the failure to follow written operating instructions. There was a regrettable delay in discussing the incident with officers of Gateshead metropolitan borough council, but the agency is now in discussion with both officers and councillors, and with the Health and Safety Executive, which regulates the site under the Control of Industrial Major Accident Hazards Regulations 1984. The agency is reviewing the options for further enforcement, including prosecution.

The Environment Agency routinely includes in its IPC authorisations a condition requiring operators to report any unauthorised release within 24 hours of its occurrence. The Secretary of State considers that such conditions are essential. In the event of any serious incident at an IPC process which is likely to give rise to significant local public concern, he would also expect that the agency would inform interested bodies such as the local authority and, where there are implications for public health, the local health authority.

Integrated Regional Offices

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the (i) running costs and (ii) number of staff employed for each integrated regional office in 1995–96. [29662]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is as follows:

Waste Disposal

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information is made available by the Government on the disposal of urban waste water and sludge. [30110]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Environment Ministers have today issued a leaflet on sewage collection, treatment and disposal in the United Kingdom. The leaflet is in the Department of the Environment series of "One World" information sheets. It describes on-going and major new initiatives on sewage treatment in the UK, and the investment programme which is involved, in order to ensure that we safeguard and build on our successes in protecting and improving the water environment.

The UK's extensive and effective systems for the continuous collection and treatment of sewage play an essential part in the management and improvement programmes, promoted by our pollution control authorities, for our inland and coastal waters. The £9,000 million investments by the UK water industry since 1989 on sewage collection and treatment services have made significant contribution to improvements in our inland and coastal waters. For example, between 1990 and 1994 there has been a net upgrading of over 26 per cent. of the total length of rivers and canals surveyed in England and Wales.

The leaflet is being disseminated to the public in the UK through local authorities and libraries and the relevant pollution control authorities.

I am placing copies of the leaflet in the House Library.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the band D council tax levied in respect of each of the English police authorities in 1995–96 and 1996–97; and if he will indicate the percentage increase in each case. [29589]

Waste Shipments

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy in relation to shipments of waste into and out of the United Kingdom. [30021]

Mr. Clappison: The Government's policies are set out in the "United Kingdom Management Plan for Exports and Imports of Waste", which is published today, and comes into operation on 1 June 1996.

Under the plan, which is legally binding throughout the United Kingdom, all exports of waste for disposal are banned, as are most imports for disposal other than in exceptional cases where wider environmental considerations apply. Exports of water for recovery to countries within the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development may continue but, subject to limited exceptions, exports of hazardous waste for recovery to non-OECD countries are banned. Imports of waste for genuine recovery operations may continue.

The Government's policy proposals for waste exports and imports were initially outlined in a statement by my right hon. Friend, the Member for South Ribble (Mr. Atkins), who was then Minister for the Environment and Countryside, on 15 June 1994. The Department consulted on a draft document during February and March 1995; some 750 copies were dispatched, and 73 responses were received from industry, waste regulators and members of the public. Copies of non-confidential responses have been placed in my Department's library. The final text of the plan incorporates various changes to meet the concerns and interests of those consulted.

A compliance cost assessment has been undertaken in relation to the plan. Copies of both the plan and the compliance cost assessment have been placed in the Library.

The plan provides the means to implement the Government's long-standing policy of self-sufficiency in waste disposal, while preserving legitimate trade in wastes moving for recovery. It also takes account of the United Kingdom's international obligations, in particular under the Basel convention on the control of transboundary movements of hazardous wastes and their disposal.

Radon

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the National Radiological Protection Board will be publishing the results of its mapping exercise to identify the areas of England with High radon levels. [30148]

Mr. Gummer: In January, we announced that the National Radiological Protection Board report on radon would be published later in the year. That report was published this morning. Copies of it have been provided to the Library of the House. The Under-Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison) has written to hon. Members with a direct interest enclosing a comprehensive briefing pack. Copies have also been sent to affected local authorities.

Housing Purchase Grant

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the consultation paper on proposed rural exemptions from the purchase grant scheme for housing association tenants was subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment"; if he will publish the appraisal; what alternative courses of action from those set out in the paper were considered in the environmental appraisal; how the paper was modified by the results of the appraisal; and what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of the paper. [29499]

Mr. Clappison: The new purchase grant scheme will extend the chance of home ownership to more housing associations tenants, allowing them to buy their own home at a discount. The consultation paper on proposed rural exemptions contains proposals to exclude small rural settlements with a population of 3,000 or fewer from the scheme. Housing association tenants living in those settlements would not have the right to buy their homes. As such exclusions will not have any environmental consequences, an environmental appraisal was not appropriate.

DEFENCE

Ammunition

Mr. King: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to place a contract for 81 mm ammunition; and if he will make a statement. [29761]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I am pleased to announce that we have decided, subject to the satisfactory completion of negotiations, to award two contracts to Royal Ordnance, a division of British Aerospace Defence Ltd., for the supply of five years' worth of 81mm mortar ammunition. The requirement is for the high explosive and smoke rounds for the 81mm mortar in service with the British Army. The total value of the two contracts is approximately £80 million.

The high explosive round contract was won by Royal Ordnance in the face of competition from other UK firms and overseas suppliers. The contract for the smoke round will be placed with Royal Ordnance, as the producers of the only approved product to meet this requirement, subject to the satisfactory completion of price negotiations.

A number of Royal Ordnance factories will benefit from these orders, in particular the factory at Glascoed, Gwent which will undertake the filling and assembly of the high explosive rounds. Significant work packages are also expected to go to RO factories at Birtley, Radway Green and Bridgwater. The orders should help maintain up to 400 jobs at Royal Ordnance sites and its UK sub-contractors for the duration of the contracts.

Jaguar Project

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the estimated costs of the Jaguar thermal imaging airborne laser designator update; and what evaluation his Department has made of the contract process for this project. [29224]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The estimated cost of the initial programme upgrade 12 Jaguar aircraft was of the order of £13 million. The contracting process employed for this and all other procurement projects is decided only after careful consideration and evaluation of all relevant factors.

Departmental Works of Art

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's works of art are classified as stolen. [29403]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Six works of art belonging to my Department have been reported as stolen.

Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency

Mr. Legg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency for 1996–97. [30022]

Mr. Soames: The chief executive of the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency has been set the following key targets for 1996–97:

(1) To achieve a minimum availability of 80 per cent. across the agency commodity ranges.

(2) To ensure that 80 per cent. of research and development milestones are met by the due date and within budget.

(3) To ensure that 90 per cent. of procurement milestones are met for key items, and 80 per cent. of procurement milestones are met for other items, so that total planned time is achieved from initiation of requirement to delivery.

(4) To ensure that expenditure is managed to within 2.5 per cent. of budget.

(5) To ensure that 80 per cent. satisfaction rate is achieved on customer surveys.

These key targets take forward much of the work of the previous targets as set out in the agency's first documents, and it is hoped that the collocation of the agency will drive the rationalisation and reform activities which are essential to the DCTA business plan. Given all the other pressures on the agency, including downward financial pressure, I believe they are challenging but achievable. Copies of the agency's new framework document will be placed in the Library of the House.

Royal Air Force

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the projected strength of the RAF on 1 April 2000. [29645]

Mr. Soames: The estimated strength of the RAF on 1 April 2000 is around 55,500. This figure includes an element for personnel undergoing training.

Civilian Contractors

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to use civilian contractors in front-line operations. [29647]

Mr. Soames: We have no such plans. Our aim is to maintain the effectiveness and operational capability of our armed forces. To that end, we seek to concentrate resources on the front line, providing support to the armed forces in ways which ensure long-term value for money, and utilising the skills and resources of the commercial sector wherever this makes operational and economic sense.

Merchant Vessels

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Ukrainian registered merchant vessels his Department has chartered in the current year. [29649]

Mr. Soames: My Department has chartered one Ukrainian registered vessel to date in 1996. The vessel has undertaken two separate charters.

Armed Forces (Strength)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total service strength of the armed forces at 1 April 1990; and what is the projected strength at 1 April 2000. [29653]

Mr. Soames: The total service strength of the regular armed forces at 1 April 1990 was 314,700. The estimated strength at 1 April 2000 is 213,500. Both figures include Gurkha strengths, Royal Marines and Queen Alexandra Royal Naval Nursing Service, and an element for personnel undergoing training. The former excludes the then Ulster Defence Regiment and the latter excludes the Royal Irish Regiment (Home Service Force).

Armed Forces (Deaths)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many deaths there have been among members of the armed forces since January 1991. [29646]

Mr. Soames: Since January 1991, the total number of deaths of serving personnel in the armed forces is 1,233.

Merchant Ships

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the names and country of registration of all merchant ships chartered by his Department for Operation Purple Star. [29650]

Mr. Soames: The names and countries of registration of ships chartered for Exercise Purple Star is as follows:

Prince of Scandinavia: Danish
Dan Hafnia: Danish
Condock 3: German
Condock V: German
Kidira: Bahamian
Kapitan Mezentsyev: Ukrainian
Arcade Eagle: Norwegian
Arcade Falcon: Norwegian
Norcliff: Norwegian
Chodziez: Polish
Sochi: Maltese.

Suicides

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the armed forces have committed suicide since 1991. [29652]

Mr. Soames: Since January 1991, the total number of suicides by serving personnel in the armed forces is 135.

Kapitan Mezentsyev

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department chartered the Ukrainian merchant vessel, Kapitan Mezentsyev; what checks his Department made to ensure that it would meet American safety standards; when it was impounded by the American authorities; what were the reasons given by the American authorities for the impounding; what discussions his Department has had with the US authorities; if his Department has chartered a replacement vessel for Operation Purple Star; and who is financially responsible for the Kapitan Mezentsyev during Operation Purple Star. [29651]

Mr. Soames: The Kapitan Mezentsyev was chartered on 12 March 1996 on the basis that she complied fully with international port state control standards. She has passed an internationally recognised safety inspection carried out by the Dutch authorities in Flushing on 24 January. She was examined by my Department's marine superintendents on 8–9 April when she reported for loading. No serious defects were noted, and all her safety documentation was found to be in order.

The vessel was impounded on 22 April following a US port state control inspection, which identified a number of minor defects. These were subsequently remedied and, following a further inspection, the Kapitan Mezentsyev was released on 4 May. My Department naturally kept in close touch with the US authorities during the period when the vessel was confined to port.

The vessel was contracted to my Department for the purpose of transporting equipment to the US, and return, for Exercise Purple Star. The contract included a clause requiring the vessel to comply with US marine legislation. No charter fees were therefore attracted during the period she was impounded. Financial responsibility for effecting the repairs needed to satisfy the US authorities lies, of course, with the owners. There was no requirement to charter a replacement vessel.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Business Closures

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many businesses in Northern Ireland have ceased trading (a) voluntarily and (b) involuntarily in each of the past five years. [28589]

Mr. Ancram: The following information relates to companies for the period 1 April 1990 to 31 March 1995. The companies and insolvency report for the year ended 31 March 1995 contains further data and is available in the Library of the House.

	Companies which commenced winding up proceedings				Companies struck off the companies register

1994	50	76	74	200	522
1995	51	50	75	176	489

These figures do not include unregistered businesses which ceased trading voluntarily or involuntarily.

Brain Search Facilities

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the (a) centres and (b) hospitals which provide minute brain search facilities; and if he will make a statement. [28636]

Mr. Moss: In Northern Ireland, all Health and Social Services trusts with acute hospital facilities are able to access neurological services. Regional neurosurgical services are provided by the Royal Group of Hospitals trust, Belfast. Further information can be obtained from the relevant chief executives.

Social Security Agency Customers

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Social Security Agency customers in receipt of unemployment benefit or income support in Northern Ireland currently sign on by post by reason of the distance of their place of residence from their local social security office; how many of these will be required to sign on and be interviewed in person after the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance at each social security office in Northern Ireland; if they will be provided with a travel warrant to cover the cost of a return journey between their place of residence and their local social security office; and how many additional client adviser posts will be created in each social security office to advise and help job seekers. [29143]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Alec Wylie to Mr. Roy Beggs, dated 15 May 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on Jobseeker's Allowance.

There are 20,781 customers in receipt of Unemployment Benefit or Income Support in Northern Ireland who currently sign on by post because of the distance of their place of residence from their local Social Security Office. Some 10,000 of these customers will be required to sign in person and be interviewed when Jobseeker's Allowance is introduced on 7 October 1996. After this date the criteria for postal signing will be revised whereby the jobseeker's journey from home to office or return would have to exceed one hour or their attendance would have to result in an overall absence from home (due to the infrequency of public transport) in excess of four hours. Any jobseeker who has a physical or mental disability which restricts their mobility would also be able to sign by post.

As is the case for all other jobseekers required to attend their local social security office on a regular basis, there will be no provision to meet the cost of travel. Travel expenses are only paid when a jobseeker has been requested to attend their local social security office on a day other than their signing day.

The staffing complement in the local Social Security Offices is presently being considered but it is estimated that the existing client adviser complement will be increased by 114 posts.

I hope this explains the position for you but I would be happy to provide any further information you require.

Inward Investors (Visits)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list by constituency the number of (a) first visits and (b) repeat visits by potential inward investors and industrialists to Northern Ireland during the period 1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996. [28979]

Sir John Wheeler: This information is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Information on visits to Northern Ireland by potential investors and industrialists is recorded by district council area. A breakdown, on this basis, for the period requested is attached.

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Government have implemented a number of measures to tackle late payment, including improving Government Departments' payment performance, requiring large companies to state their payment policies in their annual reports, developing a British standard for prompt payment and improving court procedures for debt recovery.

Tax Cuts

16. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for tax cuts; and if he will make a statement. [28505]

Mr. Jack: The Government are committed to a low-taxation economy and will cut taxes when it is right for the economy to do so.

Mr. Waldegrave: The economy continues to grow steadily. In the first quarter of 1996, it is estimated that GDP was 0.4 per cent. higher than in the previous quarter, and 2.0 per cent. up on a year earlier.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

18. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest estimate of the PSBR for 1996–97 and 1997–98. [28507]

27. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to improve the accuracy of forecasts of the public sector borrowing requirement. [28516]

Mr. Waldegrave: Treasury forecasters, and the tax forecasters in the Inland Revenue and Customs and Exercise, are always looking for way to improve the accuracy of their forecasts.

Unemployment

19. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were (a) the highest and (b) the lowest levels of unemployment recorded in the period of each Parliament since 1979. [28508]

Privatisation (Debt)

20. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much debt has been written off by the Government since 1979 in those industries and organisations that have been privatised. [28509]

Mr. Jack: In cash terms, the amount of debt written off in companies privatised since 1979 is £16.24 billion, but £9.73 billion of new debt was also injected.

Income Tax

22. Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what income tax rates were (a) in 1978 and (b) in 1995; and what plans he has for further reduction in income tax. [28511]

Mr. Jack: In 1978–79, the first £750 of taxable income was taxed at 24 per cent. and the next £7,250 at the basic rate of 33 per cent. There were nine higher rates of tax, beginning at 40 per cent. and culminating in a rate of 83 per cent. on taxable income over £24,000.

In 1996–97, the first £3,900 of taxable income is taxed at 20 per cent., and the next £25,500 is taxed at the basic rate of 24 per cent. All income above this level is taxed at a single higher rate of 40 per cent. It is our intention to reduce tax rates when it is right for the economy. My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor will announce his plans for taxation in November.

Economic Forecasts

23. Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his current forecasts for the principal economic indication over the medium term. [28512]

Mr. Waldegrave: Illustrative projections for economic growth and inflation over the medium term are given in table 3.9 of the 1996–97 "Financial Statement and Budget Report", which show output growing at a rate of 2¾ per cent. to 3 per cent., whilst underlying inflation falls to 2 per cent.

Veteran and Classic Vehicles

24. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many veteran and classic vehicles over 25 years old have been relieved from vehicle excise duty under the provisions of the Finance Act 1996. [28513]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: An estimated 166,000 veteran and classic vehicles over 25 years old were exempted from vehicle excise duty by the Finance Act 1996.

Government Borrowing

25. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the level of Government borrowing next year. [28514]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Budget projection of the 1997–98 public sector borrowing requirement was £15 billion.

Private Finance Initiative

26. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will report progress on the private finance initiative. [28515]

Mr. Jack: Some £4.76 billion of agreed private finance initiative deals were announced in 1995–96, and a further £300 million were at preferred bidder stage. The total of agreed, announced projects has now risen to £4.92 billion with the announcement of a preferred bidder for the Croydon tramlink project. More than £300 million more of deals are due to be agreed in the next few weeks.

On 3 April, I announced the publication of new procurement guidelines, to smooth the procurement process, with case studies of two prisons built under the PFI. To assist further the development of the private finance initiative, a training course was introduced last in January. So far, nearly 1,400 civil servants have either received training or are committed to attend future courses.

Telecommunication Charges

28. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the economic benefits of reduced telecommunication charges. [28517]

Mr. Jack: The Treasury has not carried out a detailed study of the effect of lower telecommunications prices on the UK economy. However, I would expect the very substantial falls in prices since privatisation—they are down some 40 per cent. in real terms—to have provided significant economic benefits to businesses and their competitiveness, particularly those for whom communication is a key element. The UK is now one of the cheapest countries in the world in which to make telephone calls, and UK charges and the cheapest in Europe, thus reaffirming our own economic competitiveness.

Retail Prices Index

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he made about including green peppers in the retail prices index and the contribution they make to monitoring price inflation in the United Kingdom. [28504]

Mrs. Angela Knight: This year, green peppers were included for the first time in the list of goods covered by the retail prices index—RPI. The Office for National Statistics—ONS—updates this list every year to reflect changing consumer patterns. All fresh vegetables, including green peppers, account for only 0.7 per cent. in the RPI.

Living Standards

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the annual change in average United Kingdom living standards for each year since 1966. [28510]

Mr. Jack: Real personal disposable income per head increased by 90 per cent. over the period 1966 to 1995, an annual rate of growth of 2.2 per cent.

Transfer Pricing Practices

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the tax revenues lost as a result of transfer pricing practices by multinational companies in the last five tax years. [27345]

Mr. Jack: The Inland Revenue devotes significant resources to ensuring that the transfer pricing legislation is complied with, and any evidence of non-compliance is carefully investigated. Over the past five tax years, the estimated total tax from inquiries made by the specialist section at the Inland Revenue which deals with the largest cases with international aspects, including transfer pricing, was £793 million. This does not include additional tax arising from work in the Inland Revenue's local offices or at the oil taxation office, separate records of which are not kept but which would significantly increase the total. It is not possible to estimate the amount of tax revenue lost through any failures to follow the transfer pricing legislation of which the Inland Revenue has not become aware. The United Kingdom regards transfer pricing as a very significant aspect of international taxation and the Inland Revenue is consistently on the alert for failures to comply with the legislation.

Computer Systems

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the savings to date which the Inland Revenue has made from out-sourcing arrangements with the SHL software computer system, compared with the use of in-house services; and if he will make a statement. [29529]

Mr. Jack: The Inland Revenue does not have an out-sourcing arrangement with the SHL software computer system.

Post Office

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the chairman of the Post Office to discuss the Post Office's external financing limit. [28755]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have not met the chairman of the Post Office to discuss the Post Office's external financing limit.

Customs and Excise Risk Information System

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Customs and Excise risk information system. [29516]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 15 May 1996]: Customs tells me that this is an integrated risk information system that would eventually assess risk across the whole of a trader's activities in relation to those duties and taxes for which Customs is responsible. It has conducted a feasibility study and is working on the first stage of building a simple prototype that brings together existing risk information to inform better the targeting of local assurance activity.

Value Added Tax

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the impact on VAT revenues of the recent reductions in (a) value added tax staff in his Department and (b) the number of assurance visits made by value added tax staff; [29517]

(2) if he will estimate the percentage reduction which will take place in the number of standard VAT inspections, following staff reductions in Customs and Excise resulting from the fundamental expenditure review. [29522]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answers 15 May 1996]: Customs and Excise aims to improve its effectiveness by replacing some VAT visits with alternative means of gaining assurance and targeting the remaining visits better in relation to risks. This will enable it to reduce staffing levels while maintaining or improving outputs. The precise reduction in visiting which can be achieved will depend on the outcome of trials, which are currently taking place and will be evaluated during the coming year.

We do not expect the changes made this year to affect VAT revenues.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the latest available figures for (a) under-declarations and (b) over-declarations of tax detected by value added tax assurance officers. [29518]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 15 May 1996]: The latest available full-year figures are for 1994–95 and total (a) £3,286 million in under-declarations and (b) £1,146 million in over-declarations identified by officers.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the additional revenue collected annually as a result of assurance visits by VAT officers. [29523]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 15 May 1996]: The additional revenue identified by officers in 1994–95 was £2,140 million.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it a charter commitment for a VAT officer to visit all newly registered businesses within three years of registration. [29524]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 15 May 1996]: Customs has recently published a revised charter standard, which includes a commitment to offer to every newly registering business a choice of options to learn about how VAT works.

This provides timely advice, tailored to business needs, and replaces the commitment to visit within three years.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the annual amount of VAT evaded or undeclared; and if he will make a statement. [29525]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 15 May 1996]: In an average year, HM Customs and Excise investigates about 1,100 cases for fraudulent evasion of VAT, involving total arrears of approximately £60 million. About 1,502 are dealt with through criminal procedures, and about 950 are dealt with using the civil investigation route. Financial penalties of approximately £8 million per annum are applied. About 100 custodial years per annum are imposed by the courts.

It is not possible to quantify the level of fraud that goes undetected, but by its nature the detection of a fraud prevents further evasion. We estimate the total annual amount of evasion prevented as a result of the investigation effort to be in the region of £200 million, including arrears.

In addition, about £2.5 billion of net under declarations is identified, mainly through risk-based auditing of businesses' accounts.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much VAT has been reclaimed by people leaving the country who have bought goods in the UK, in each of the last five years. [29526]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 15 May 1996]: No records are maintained of tax-free sales to entitled persons. Doing so would have resource implications for Customs and Excise and would impose an unacceptable burden on retailers who would be required to keep additional records and submit returns.

Tax Office Closures

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax offices (a) have been closed in 1995–96 and (b) will be closed in 1996–97; if he will list such offices; and if he will make a statement. [29663]

Mr. Jack: The Inland Revenue is engaged in a programme to reorganise the structure of all local tax and collection offices to ensure that the right operational framework is in place to deliver its future business objectives.

Seventy-three tax offices and 22 collection offices were reorganised and merged in 1995–96 to form 38 new-style offices. Most of the mergers involve offices in London or the same provincial city or town. Outside those locations te tax offices in Guildford, Havant, Rotherham and Poole were closed during 1995–96 and merged with new-style offices created in a nearby city or town.

On the basis of the present approved programme, 67 tax offices and 17 collection offices will be reorganised and merged in 1996–97 to form a further 38 new-style offices. The programme includes closure of the tax offices in Bexhill, Bexleyheath, Bognor Regis, Dartford, Ely, Greenwich, Neath and Solihull during 1996–97.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Attorney-General at what date the Crown Prosecution Service learnt of the verdicts of unlawful killing in respect of (a) Richard O'Brien and (b) Shiji Lapite; and when in each case the Crown Prosecution Service expects to reach a decision whether to prosecute. [28717]

The Attorney-General: Evidence gathered during the police investigation into the death of Richard O'Brien was reviewed by the Crown Prosecution Service. On 30 January 1995, it was concluded that there was insufficient evidence to provide a realistic prospect of conviction for any offence of homicide. The Crown Prosecution Service learnt of the verdict of unlawful killing in respect of Richard O'Brien on 10 November 1995. The Crown Prosecution Service has requested transcripts of the evidence given at the inquest and some of the material was received on 4 and 22 April 1996. Once the transcripts have been received they will be carefully considered together with the evidence available prior to the inquest and, subject to any further enquiries that may prove necessary, the Crown Prosecution Service will then decide whether or not the evidence is now sufficient to justify proceedings.

On 18 July 1995, the Crown Prosecution Service advised the police that the then available evidence was insufficient to provide a realistic prospect of conviction of any person for homicide arising from the death of Shiji Lapite. The Crown Prosecution Service learnt of the verdict of unlawful killing in respect of Mr. Shiji Lapite on 26 January 1996. All the transcripts of evidence and copies of documents produced to the inquest jury were received by 18 March 1996. This material is being considered together with the evidence available prior to the inquest and once this has been done the Crown Prosecution Service will decide whether or not the evidence is now sufficient to justify proceedings.

SCOTLAND

Health Service (Acute Bed Strategy)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which (a) individuals and (b) organisations representing (i) doctors and (ii) nurses have been consulted in the acute bed strategy review. [28166]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As part of the review, the views of all health boards and NHS trusts in Scotland were invited. In addition, it was made clear that comments would be welcomed from any other individuals or organisations who wished to offer views.

In order to obtain the views of doctors, nurses and other clinical professions, specific consultation was undertaken with:

The British Medical Association

The Scottish Committee of the Royal Colleges

The Royal College of Physicians Edinburgh

The Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Glasgow

The Royal College of Surgeons Edinburgh

The Scottish Joint Consultants Committee

The National Professional Advisory Committees' Liaison Committee.

Control of Advertisements

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the implementation of circular 10/1984, part II, clause 17 on outdoor advertisements; and if he will make a statement. [28329]

Mr. Kynoch: No formal assessment has been made. My right hon. Friend considers that the guidance contained in Scottish Development Department circular 10/1984, including that in paragraph 17 remains appropriate. However, as part of the wider review of the planning system in Scotland, my Department is currently reviewing the Town and Country Planning (Control of Advertisements) (Scotland) Regulations 1984. A consultation paper will be issued shortly setting out proposals for change to improve the overall efficiency and effectiveness of the advertisements regime.

Water Fluoridation

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent instructions or guidance his Department has issued to Scotland's (a) health boards (b) water authorities relating to the fluoridation of public water supplies. [28614]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Guidance about the procedural and technical aspects of schemes to fluoridate the public water supplies was issued to health boards and water authorities in June 1991. The "Oral Health Strategy for Scotland", which was published in December 1995, described the changes introduced by the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Act 1994. I have arranged for copies of these documents to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from (i) Scottish health boards and (ii) Scotland's water authorities during the last 18 months relating to the fluoridation of public water supplies. [28611]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research his Department has carried out into the fluoridation of public water supplies and the benefits and disadvantages of this policy. [28619]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Although no specific research has been carried out by the Scottish Office, the extensive research undertaken over many years in the United Kingdom and elsewhere has helped inform our view that fluoridation of the public water supplies constitutes a safe and effective means of reducing tooth decay.

Pressmennan Wood

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Forestry Commission's policies for the protection of old native woodlands; and if he will call for a report on the application for a felling licence for oak trees in Pressmennan wood. [28713]

Mr. Kynoch: We are committed to protecting our ancient and semi-natural woodlands, the most important of which have been designated as national nature reserves and sites of special scientific interest.

The Forestry Commission is currently considering an application for tree felling and replanting in Pressmennan wood. The commission has consulted Scottish Natural Heritage and East Lothian district council over the proposals, and will take account of the comments it receives from these bodies and any other organisations and individuals before making a decision on the application.

GP Fundholding (Howie Report)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action his Department has taken in respect of the report on general practitioners fundholding produced by Dr. John Howie; if this report has been circulated to Scotland's health boards; and if his Department is now undertaking additional research on this issue. [28616]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Department has considered the conclusions of the report and has instigated further work on the development of weighted capitation budget setting.

The report has not been formally issued to health boards, but was launched at a conference in March 1995, attended by around 100 invited participants representing primary care, policy making and research interests in the health service in Scotland.

Additional work, in the form of a national evaluation of total purchasing, which is a development of fundholding, is being undertaken as a joint project between the Departments of Health in England and Wales, and in Scotland.

Concessionary Travel

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will estimate the cost of complying with the Atkins v. Wrekin district council and Department of Transport decision by the advocate general of the European Court of Justice (a) in the current financial year, (b) in future years and (c) for each year between 1984 and 1995; [28984]

(2) if men who are or have been aged 60 to 65 years since December 1984 will be able to claim compensation from their local authority as a result of the Atkins v. Wrekin district council and Department of Transport case considered by the European Court. [28985]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The European Court of Justice has not yet given its judgment in the Atkins case. It is not appropriate to speculate as to the implications of the outcome.

Scottish Homes

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how much Scottish Homes spent in each operational district on establishing and supporting the work of housing associations in each financial year since April 1989 and from April to December 1995; [28962]

(2) how many housing associations have received financial support from Scottish Homes since April 1989; how many of these housing associations have had tenancies transferred to them by Scottish Homes; and if he will list these associations, the number of tenancies which have been transferred to them by Scottish Homes and the amount which Scottish Homes has spent on supporting the work of each of these associations. [28983]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information requested is a matter for Scottish Homes. I have asked the chairman, Mr. John Ward, to write to the hon. Member with the relevant information.

Students

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement indicating what funds his Department operates to alleviate hardship among Scottish students. [28966]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the access funds which we introduced in Session 1990–91 as part of the wider changes in the student support arrangements. They are designed specifically to help those students whose access to, or continuance in, further or higher education might be being inhibited by financial difficulty.

In Session 1995–96 access funds resources totalling £4.3 million were made available to universities and colleges in Scotland. Individual applications for assistance are dealt with by the institutions which are best placed to judge the needs of their own students.

Access funds need to be viewed against the background of the overall level of resources made available to students through maintenance grants and loans. For students in full-time higher education, this package of support is uprated annually, and it is worth virtually the same in real terms as the grant alone in 1979–80.

Politically Restricted Posts

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people working in Scottish local government work in politically restricted posts. [28969]

Mr. Kynoch: The information requested is not held centrally.

Read 3 Project

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he had made of the Read 3 project; and if he will make a statement. [29051]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The development of the Read 3 project is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health. The Scottish Office Department of Health is not contributing to the costs of the development but is monitoring its progress. Many general practitioners in Scotland currently use a form of Read version 2, which is also being piloted for hospitals in Scotland.

Objective 5 Funding

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the allocation of objective 5 funds made so far within Scotland under (a) RETEX, (b) PESCA, (c) LEADER II and (d) other schemes; [29242]

(2) what funds have been made available to the Hawick and Peebles travel-to-work areas to date; and what plans he has to make further allocations; [29243]

(3) what extent textile dependency in travel-to-work areas contributes to eligibility for RETEX funding; [29244]

(4) which diversification schemes in the Scottish Borders council area have received financial support from RETEX funding to date; and what additional schemes are currently under consideration. [29245]

Mr. Kynoch: The table shows the allocations of the relevant Community initiative resources to objective 5b areas in Scotland. In some cases, specific allocations are not made and in others allocations are indicative.

£ million	UK allocation	Scotland allocation	Objective 5b allocation
RETEX II (1994 to 1997)	26.600	[1]5.450	[1]1.388
PESCA (Non Objective 1 sub-programme 1995 to 1999)	n/a	10.106	n/a
LEADER II (Objective 5b programme 1995 to 1999)	n/a	6.906	6.906
SME (Lowlands programme 1995 to 1999)	n/a	7.071	n/a
EMPLOYMENT (1994 to 1999)	111.778	n/a	n/a
ADAPT (1995 to 1999)	226.014	n/a	n/a

[1] Denotes indicative allocation only.

Textile dependency as set out in article 6 of the Commission's guidelines as decided on 13 May 1992 (Official Journal number C 142, 4 June 1992), determined the eligibility for funding under RETEX.

The Borders objective 5b programme was allocated some £24 million of European funding for the period 1994 to 1999. To date £862,600 of, European regional development funding has been made available to the Hawick travel-to-work area and £367,500 has been made available to the Peebles travel-to-work area. In addition, match funding of £1,497,600 has been provided by project sponsors.

Under European Social funding, a total of £1,958,480, involving match funding of £2,393,698, has been allocated to the Borders region under objective 3 and 5b. Beneficiaries from the Hawick and Peebles travel-to-work areas have been supported.

The Scottish RETEX II working group met on 30 April and recommended for approval, subject to further information three Borders projects with combined funding of £330,000. The projects involve diversification into the developing environmental technologies. There are currently no other applications under consideration. The deadline for the next round of applications under RETEX II is 30 August 1996.

District Courts

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each district council in Scotland the amounts collected by the district courts in each year since 1991; and of those how much was (i) remitted to the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer and (ii) retained by each district council. [29660]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested has been collected centrally only for the last two years. The table sets out the figures, provided by district courts, for the financial years ending 1994 and 1995 and relates to district councils before 1 April 1996. The basis on which the figures were compiled differed slightly each year and are therefore directly comparable.

Column 1 shows by local authority area the total value of revenue, including fines imposed by the court, fixed penalties, registered and fiscal fines received by the court each year. Column 2 details the value of fines passed to the Crown Office for onward transmission to the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer and column 3 lists the sums retained by each local authority.

Ravenspark Hospital

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when Ravenspark hospital will be closed; and what improvement the Scottish Office will have in the closure process. [29008]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 13 May 1996]: Ayrshire and Arran health board's three-month public consultation exercise on the closure of Ravenspark hospital ended on 30 October 1995. I have yet to receive the board's formal proposals for the hospital.

Once I have received any closure proposals from the health board, I shall consider them carefully before making a final decision. I shall need to be convinced of real benefits for patients as a result of any proposals.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Beef Imports

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Government will be requiring the removal of brain, spinal cord and intestines from beef imported into the United Kingdom from other countries with BSE amongst their cattle. [24241]

Mrs. Browning: The Beef (Emergency Control) Order 1996, as amended, already prohibits the sale for human consumption of all meat derived from bovines which, at the time of slaughter, were more than 30 months old. This measure applies to all bovines slaughtered after the commencement of the order, whether in the UK or overseas, other than those slaughtered in third countries listed in the schedule to the No. 2 amendment order where the Government are satisfied we can import beef without risk. This exemption does not include any countries where there have been cases of BSE.

As regards bovines less than 30 months of age, some countries with BSE have introduced controls requiring the removal of specified bovine offals. We continue to keep the position under review.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library all publications resulting from research sponsored by his Department into the transmissibility of spongiform encephalopathies with particular reference to scrapie and BSE. [25192]

Mrs. Browning: I have placed a bibliography of research into transmissible spongiform encephalopathies—TSEs— detailing much of the published work carried out by the three main research centres in the United Kingdom which receive Government funding, in the Library.

Arrangement for publications on Government-funded TSE research by other institutions are dealt with by the author. Details of these publications are not held centrally.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what checks are made on (a) animal feed factories, (b) farms, (c) marts, (d) abattoirs, (e) meat wholesalers and (f) the rendering industry to prevent further production fo contaminated animal feed and to prevent BSE-contaminated material entering the food chain. [28539]

Mrs. Browning: The Specified Bovine Material (No. 2) Order 1996 lays down the requirements for the handling of specified bovine material—SBM—as defined in the order. It is the responsibility fo slaughterhouse operators and fresh meat wholesalers to comply in full with the controls on SBM. These are vital controls and full compliance is expected and will be enforced. Enforcement responsibilities in such premises lie with the Meat Hygiene Service—MHS. The MHS has enforced, and continues to enforce, the SBM controls rigorously and has reminded all staff at licensed premises of the importance of ensuring 100 per cent. compliance.

Random sampling in mills producing animal feed commenced on 5 February. Up to 9 May, 1,210 samples had been taken at 574 visits. Eight of the samples, all taken prior to 29 March, were positive for mammalian protein and have been investigated. Mills identified as high risk for whatever reason are receiving weekly sampling visits. Farms that have had a case of BSE and where on-farm mixes appear to have been fed are also being visited, and samples are being taken if it is thought necessary. Mills that are mixing medication into feed are required to be licensed by the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain—RPSGB. Category A mills are mainly large compounders and are permitted to mix less than 2kg of medication per tonne of finished feed. Category B mills are mainly on-farm mixers, but some compounders, who are permitted to mix medication only at inclusion rates of more than 2kg per tonne. If medication is not mixed, millers/mixers are not required to be registered. Most of these unregistered premises, but not all, are on-farm mixers. All category A mills will be visited during the coming month and a questionnaire is being sent to all category B mills to determine whether the premises need to be visited for sampling purposes.

Any animals taken to market which are suspected of being affected by BSE must be reported to the Ministry. Animals confirmed by the Ministry's veterinary officer as being affected by BSE are destroyed and their carcases sent for disposal by incineration. All animals going for slaughter are subject to an ante mortem inspection at the slaughterhouse. Animals identified at the slaughterhouse as being BSE suspects are reported to the Ministry. The Ministry's veterinary officer visits the premises and, if the diagnosis is confirmed, arranges for the animal to be destroyed and disposed of.

Checks on rendering plants are currently made by weekly unannounced visits by the state veterinary service. These ensure that rendering plants handle only the categories of material which they are approved for and, where appropriate, that SBM and non-SBM material is kept separate by use of dedicated processing facilities. Records of amounts of material being handled are also checked.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the projected total cost of all proposed and current support measures introduced to deal with BSE for the years (a) 1995, (b) 1996, (c) 1997 and (d) 1998. [29621]

Mrs. Browning: The total estimated cost of measures in the UK taken in response to the BSE situation is £1.01 billion in 1996–97, £0.74 billion in 1997–98 and £0.68 billion in 1998–99.

Cattle Slaughter (Compensation)

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what considerations underlay the payment of compensation under the over 30–month cattle disposal scheme at different prices through abattoirs and livestock markets. [28697]

Mr. Baldry: The scheme is essentially a live weight scheme and the level of compensation payable is based on live weight. In providing for the delivery of stock direct to abattoirs where facilities for weighing live are not common, we were constrained by the conclusions of the Agriculture Council of 1 to 3 April which implied that 1 ecu live weight was equivalent to 2 ecu dead weight. Throughout our discussions of this scheme in the beef management committee, some member states have insisted that EU funding should apply only to cull cows. It was not, therefore, possible to seek to negotiate a range of coefficients which reflect the different killing out percentages likely to be seen in practice.

Beef Industry (Consultants' Report)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many management consultancies were approached recently with a view to preparing a report on the UK beef industry. [28715]

Mrs. Browning: Coopers and Lybrand was the only organisation to be approached recently with a view to the preparation of a report on the UK slaughtering and cutting plant sectors.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the cost of the Coopers and Lybrand report on the UK beef industry; who was responsible for commissioning it; and for what reasons. [28846]

Mrs. Browning: The total cost of commissioning the recent Coopers and Lybrand report of 10 April on the UK slaughtering and cutting plant sectors is approximately £203,000 excluding VAT. In accordance with the requirements of Government accounting, the non-competitively tendered contract was let with the agreement of the departmental accounting officer. The reasons for the contract were to obtain urgent analysis, advice and recommendations on:

(a) whether there was a blockage of meat in abattoirs and cutting plants due to the recent and present crisis in the beef industry;

(b) whether any such blockage was undermining the financial viability of enterprises that would otherwise be financially secure; and

(c) to make observations on the possible justification for exceptional Government help for those affected, and whether there was some simple mechanism that could be employed to give effect to any such aid.

Dry-stone Walling

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many metres of dry-stone walling were (a) built, (b) maintained and (c) destroyed in each of the last three years in the United Kingdom. [29149]

Mr. Boswell: We estimate that, in financial years 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96 around 1,355km, 1,020km and 620km[1] respectively of stone walls were built or renovated with grant aid under the farm and conservation grant scheme of environmentally sensitive area schemes. Information on stone walls destroyed is not held.

[1]England, Wales and Northern Ireland only. Figures for Scotland not yet available.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many skilled dry-stone wallers there are in the United Kingdom. [29147]

Mr. Boswell: I regret that the information is not available within MAFF.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many dry-stone wallers were trained to a recognised standard in each of the last three years. [29148]

Mr. Boswell: I regret that the information is not available within MAFF.

Beef Ban

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those non-EU countries which currently ban British beef, indicating in each case the date the ban became effective. [28976]

Mrs. Browning: Commission decision 96/239/EC of 27 March 1996 provided that the UK shall not export from its territory meat and meat products obtained from bovine animals slaughtered in the UK. The list of third countries therefore shows those countries with a ban on imports of British beef on the day before the introduction of the Commission decision. Veterinary Medicines Directorate

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what performance targets he has set for the Veterinary Medicines Directorate for 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [30111]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The chief executive of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate—VMD—has submitted his proposals to me and I have agreed that the VMD should be set the following performance targets for 1996–97:

- to achieve full cost recovery for its three remain business activities of licensing and surveillance, policy work and residue monitoring;
- to determine 80 per cent. of new marketing authorisations within 120 clock days; 95 per cent. within 200 clock days;
- to achieve a 3 per cent. efficiency gain;
- to comply with the budgetary controls resulting from the public expenditure survey—PES—and the supply estimates; and
- to determine 90 per cent. of all renewals and variations outstanding on 1 April 1996 by 31 December 1996, and to introduce new internal targets for processing renewals and variations from 1 October 1996.

These are challenging targets which will continue to build on the improvements already made in efficiency and quality of service provided by the directorate since its establishment as a next steps agency, and for which I commend the chief executive and his staff. In addition, I have agreed the VMD's corporate plan for 1996–97 to 1998–99, and copies are being placed in the Library of the House and the Public Information Office.

ENVIRONMENT

Small Cetaceans (North Sea)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the population status of small cetaceans in the North sea; and what measures she has taken since the implementation of The Hague memorandum of understanding on small cetaceans to ensure habitat protection in the North sea. [29884]

Mr. Clappison: During 1994 the UK participated in an international project that aimed to record the abundance and distribution of small cetaceans throughout the North sea and adjacent waters. The project, which was co-ordinated by the sea mammal research unit in Cambridge, also received financial and logistical support from the European Commission, Denmark, Germany, the Netherlands and Sweden. A copy of the project report can be obtained from my Department.

After The Hague memorandum of understanding, the United Kingdom signed and became a party to the agreement on the conservation of small cetaceans of the Baltic and North seas.

Enterprise Zones

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the location of each enterprise zone and the date each was established since the introduction of such zones. [29906]

Sir Paul Beresford: The tables list the location and date of each enterprise zone established in the United Kingdom since they were first introduced in 1980. Each zone is designated for a period of 10 years, and zones that are still extant are indicated by an asterisk. The names of zones are given where they exist.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Council of Europe Meetings

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many meetings of, or organised by, the Council of Europe since January 1995 have been attended by Ministers or officials of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [29363]

Sir John Wheeler: None. The UK permanent representative to the Council of Europe consults this Department and the Northern Ireland Departments on all issues of particular importance to Northern Ireland.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Council of Europe Meetings

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many meetings of, or organised by, the Council of Europe since January 1995 have been attended by Ministers or officials of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [29361]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: During the period in question, the Lord Chancellor addressed a meeting of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe in Strasbourg and spoke during the visit of the standing committee of the Parliamentary Assembly to London. Departmental officials attended one conference, one seminar, one colloquy, and nine meetings of committees of experts, including working groups of those committees.

HEALTH

Midwives

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to encourage midwives to stay in the profession and to encourage non-practising midwives to return to work. [28261]

Mr. Horam: A higher proportion of the total stock of nursing and midwifery staff are working, and using their professional skill for the benefit of patients, than ever before. Local employers are responsible for developing and implementing effective human resource strategies further to improve recruitment and retention.

Nursing Shortages

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 505, in which (a) areas and (b) specialties there are nursing shortages. [29466]

Mr. Horam: The national pay review body has considered all the evidence and concluded that there is no widespread shortage of nursing staff.

Mental Health

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients with learning disabilities have been detained under the mental health legislation. [29405]

Mr. Bowis: In 1992–93, the latest year for which information is available, there were 252 formal admissions of patients detained under the Mental Health Act 1983 and classified as mentally impaired or severely mentally impaired.

Clinical Negligence Claims

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost of clinical negligence claims in each region in each year since 1991–92. [29399]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Minister for Health gave him on 6 March 1995, Official Report, columns 40–42. As was made clear at the time, the figures for the earlier years were based on information that was not comprehensive and, in particular, did not include data from national health service trusts. The table shows the regional breakdowns based on latest estimates for 1993–4 and 1994–95 and provisional figures for 1995–96, consistent with the national estimates for those years.

Costs to the NHS of clinical negligence settlements by region

Region	1993–94 £ million (estimated)	1994–95 £ million (estimated)	1995–96 £ million (provisional)
Northern and Yorkshire	15.2	25.0	16.3
Trent	7.1	11.7	15.1
Anglia and Oxford	10.6	18.2	14.8
North Thames	21.4	30.4	37.2
South Thames	30.6	26.9	18.6
South and West	8.0	19.2	16.4
West Midlands	8.4	6.1	6.4

Ethnic Health Research

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to take forward the national ethnic health research and development programme. [29527]

Mr. Malone: The Department attaches great importance to ensuring that the health needs of ethnic minority populations are recognised and met. Since 1989, it has allocated £0.5 million each year to fund a range of development projects aimed at improving access to health services. A directory listing the initiatives has just been published, and copies will be placed in the Library.

In addition, the Department's research programme currently funds a number of projects, to a combined value of £3.5 million, which have an ethnic dimension.

Within the national health service executive, the west midlands regional office leads on research and development in this area. It has commissioned projects to a value of £300,000.

General Practitioners

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the measures he has taken to reduce the administrative burdens affecting general practitioners. [29644]

Mr. Malone: Good progress is being made to implement the report of the efficiency scrutiny into bureaucracy in general practice, "Patients not Paper". As a result, the number of forms completed by general practitioners and practice staff will be reduced by around 17 million a year when new procedures are introduced from 1 July 1996.

Health Visitors

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to require that the organisational structure of national health service trusts includes qualified health visitors and community nurses at management levels. [29551]

Mr. Horam: Decisions concerning staffing, including the employment of health visitors and community nurses at management level, are the responsibility of local managers, who are in the best position to consider the amount and type of work to be done in the light of the services they have contracted to provide.

Council of Europe Meetings

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many meetings of, or organised by, the Council of Europe since January 1995 have been attended by Ministers or officials of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [29352]

Mr. Malone: Since January 1995, 23 programmed meetings of the Council of Europe have been attended by Department of Health officials; none has been attended by Department of Health Ministers.

Read Codes System

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 10 May, Official Report, column 285, what estimate he has made of the approximate average number of hours spent by the clinicians on participation in the Read codes development exercise. [29960]

Mr. Horam: There is no information available centrally on which to base such an estimate.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Council of Europe Meetings

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Attorney-General how many meetings of, or organised by, the Council of Europe since January 1995 have been attended by Ministers or officials of the Law Officers Department; and if he will make a statement. [29360]

The Attorney-General: An official from the Crown Prosecution Service attended two such meetings, and an official from the Serious Fraud Office attended one meeting.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Low Newton Remand Centre

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisoners by gender (a) sentenced and (b) on remand have requested vegan food and toiletries while detained at Her Majesty's remand centre, Low Newton (i) during 1995 and (ii) 1996 to date; [29340]

(2) what representations his Department has received regarding the non-availability of (a) sanitary products, (b) vegan foods and (c) toiletries for vegans at Her Majesty's remand centre, Low Newton in the last year; and if he will make a statement. [29339]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Bill Etherington, dated 17 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about representations on the non-availability of internal sanitary products, vegan foods and toiletries for vegans at Low Newton remand centre; and the number of times prisoners have requested vegan foods and toiletries at the centre during 1995 and 1996.

In the last year, letters were received from the Wear Valley Women's Aid Organisation and from the Vegan Society about provision for two sentenced female vegan prisoners. A number of letters were also received from the families and friends of the two women and these were replied to by the prison.

I am not aware of these items being requested by other prisoners during 1995 and 1996 to date.

Overseas Residents (General Elections)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many overseas residents were registered to vote at general elections in the United Kingdom on 31 December 1995. [29721]

Mr. Sackville: The number is 17,934.

Prisoners (Fine Defaults)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of the prison population have been imprisoned for crimes of fine default; what is the average time spent in prison for people convicted of defaulting on fines of (a) £1–£49, (b) £50–99, (c) £100—£199, (d) £200–£299 and (e) £300–£400; what is the average cost of imprisoning (i) male and (ii) female prisoners for a week; and if he will make a statement. [29393]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 16 May 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 17 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking how many and what percentage of the prison population have been imprisoned for crimes of fine defaulters; what is the average time spent in prison for people convicted of defaulting on fines of (a) £1–£49, (b) £50–£99, (c) £100–£199, (d) £200–£299 and (e) £300–£400; and what is the average cost of imprisoning (i) male and (ii) female prisoners for one week.

Figures for the population of fine defaulters are available for the last day of each month. For January to March, the average population was 266 in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales. This is 0.5 per cent of the total prison population. The average time served by all fine defaulters is about one week. Information is not available centrally on the amount of unpaid fines. The net operating cost per prisoner per week was £512 for female prisoners and £421 for all other prisons in 1994–95.

Sentencing Statistics

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each of the last 10 available years (a) for each of the former police authorities in Wales, (b) for Wales, (c) for England and (d) for England and Wales, the number of people (i) sentenced to terms in prison, (ii) on remand and (iii) the total of (i) and (ii) indicating the percentage change over the period as a whole in each case. [28656]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 10 May 1996]: Information, based on statistics on court proceedings, is given in the table.

[2] Total figures cannot be calculated because there is double counting.

TRANSPORT

Crash Barriers

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of (a) dual carriageway and (b) motorway in the United Kingdom are without crash barriers, and if he will make a statement. [28644]

Mr. Watts: Information on non-trunk dual carriageways and motorways is not held centrally.

The relevant figures for trunk roads are as follows:

(a) all-purpose dual carriageway trunk roads

England: under 31 miles of the programme for installing central reservation safety fencing remains to be carried out

Wales: 15 miles has no safety fencing

Scotland: 43 miles has no safety fencing

Northern Ireland: 74 miles has no safety fencing

(b) trunk motorways

All trunk motorways have central reserve safety fencing apart from about a mile in Scotland

Foreign-registered Aircraft

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to ensure that foreign-registered aircraft based in the United Kingdom and performing passenger charter services for tour operators between states other than the state of registry comply with International Civil Aviation Organisation standards throughout the time they are based in the United Kingdom. [29558]

Mr. Norris: Few foreign airlines base aircraft in the United Kingdom for a significant period in order to carry out fifth freedom passenger charter flights. The Department of Transport checks the airworthiness certificates of all foreign-registered aircraft operating charter flights to or from the United Kingdom as well as the airline's certificate of competency. The procedure followed by the Department is set out in my reply to the hon. Member for Crewe and Nantwich on 7 March 1996, Official Report, column 309. We are considering, as part of our review of fifth freedom policy, whether stricter controls could be applied.

Second Severn Crossing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what work has been carried out on the second Severn crossing in the past three weeks; and what work remains to be done in each of the next three weeks. [29765]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 17 May 1996:

As you know, John Watts has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State, what work has been carried out on the Second Severn Crossing in the past three weeks; and what work remains to be done in each of the next three weeks.

You are aware that the Second Severn Crossing is a privately financed project under the Concession Agreement between Severn River Crossing and the Department of Transport.

The certificate of substantial completion was issued on 26 April; final inspection and finishing works are under way and will be completed to enable opening to traffic on 5 June.

Road Maintenance

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a breakdown of capital and current maintenance of local highways for each of the last 10 years. [29556]

Mr. Norris: The definitions of capital and current maintenance expenditure by local highway authorities have changed during the 10-year period. The figures in the table are for outturn expenditure of English local highway authorities divided between capital and current as defined now. They exclude expenditure on professional and technical services.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each transport administrative region, the detailed expenditure on the capital and current maintenance of motorways and trunk roads for each of the last 10 years. [29555]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 17 May 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about the expenditure on the capital and current maintenance of motorways and trunk roads for each of the last 10 years.

Driving Instructors

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many checks have been undertaken by the Vehicle Inspectorate on driving instructors to ensure compliance with regulations in each of the last five years; [29544]

(2) if he will list for each contractor which supplies legal advice to the Vehicle Inspectorate (a) the total value of the contracts awarded for each of the last 12 months, (b) the number of cases undertaken over the last 12 months and (c) the number of convictions over the last 12 months. [29531]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Vehicle Inspectorate to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ron Oliver to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 17 May 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your questions concerning

a) the number of checks undertaken by the Vehicle Inspectorate on driving instructors to ensure compliance with regulations for each of the last 5 years; and

b) the value of contracts awarded to contractors supplying legal advice to the Vehicle Inspectorate during the last 12 months and the number of cases undertaken, as well as the number of convictions over the last 12 months.

The Driving Standards Agency requests the Vehicle Inspectorate to conduct investigations into alleged illegal instructions by driving instructors. They also request blitz checks with identify those giving illegal instruction. Data is only available for the last 3 years.

Council of Europe Meetings

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many meetings of, or organised by, the Council of Europe since January 1995 have been attended by Ministers or officials of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [29370]

Mr. Norris: None.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

British Energy

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library the independent actuarial advice upon which his decision to set the level of British Energy's contributions to a segregated fund was based. [29475]

Mr. Lang: The independent actuarial advice was provided over a period of several months. Compilation of that advice is being completed by the Government's actuaries and will be placed in the Library of the House when available.

Research Councils

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 29 April, Official Report, column 362, if he will give a breakdown of the allocation by project of the sums given to each research council for expenditure in Scotland. [29488]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 15 May 1996]: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disabled People

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the changes that have been made to social security benefits for people with disabilities since 1986; and what estimates he has made of (a) the number of people whose income has (i) increased and (ii) decreased by each of these changes and (b) the amounts of money involved in each change. [25906]

Mr. Burt [holding answer 30 April 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Member for Chelsea (Sir N. Scott) to the hon. Member for Bristol, East (Ms Corston) on 26 July 1993, Official Report, columns 715–16. Information is in the table on changes that have occurred to benefits for long-term sick and disabled people since July 1993.

Estimates of the number of people whose income has increased or decreased are not available, and it is not possible to estimate the cumulative financial effects of each change. However, expenditure overall on benefits for long-term sick and disabled people has quadrupled in real terms since 1979 and more than doubled in real terms since 1986.

Start date	Benefit	Change
October 1993	Disability Working allowance	Allowed for the introduction into DWA and family credit of payment of benefit in a single lump sum payment.
May 1994	Invalidity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance	Claimants accepted as being incapable of work allowed to do unpaid voluntary work of less than 16 hours a week.
October 1994	Severe Disablement Allowance	The upper age limit for claiming SDA and the requirement to continue to satisfy entitlement conditions, equalised at 65 for both men and women.

April 1995	Disability Working Allowance	Introduction of disabled child's allowance, and access to DWA after period of training.
July 1995	Disability Working Allowance	New 30-hours rule in DWA and family credit.

Start date	Benefit	Change
March 1996	Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit	Clarification of entitlement to reduced earnings allowance and retirement allowance
April 1996	Disability Working Allowance	Child care disregard raised

Council of Europe Meetings

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many meetings of, or organised by, the Council of Europe since January 1995 have been attended by Ministers or officials of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [29368]

Mr. Burt: My hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State—Lord Mackay of Ardbreknish—represented the United Kingdom at the Council of Europe's sixth conference of European Ministers of Social Security in May 1995, supported by Departmental officials. Since January 1995, officials have represented UK interests at five committee meetings, and a Benefits Agency medical adviser attended on three further occasions to serve on various expert groups.

State Earnings-related Pension Scheme

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the administrative cost each year of running SERPS. [29889]

Mr. Heald: The administrative cost of SERPS for each year is included in the estimated total cost of administering retirement pensions and is not identified separately. The figure for 1994–95, the latest year available, is £309 million. This includes the cost of order book encashments at post offices.

PRIME MINISTER

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will discuss with Chancellor Kohl the letter to Mr. Mosey sent by Dr. Mossle on behalf of the Federated Ministry on 6 March about the place of loading of the explosives which caused the loss of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie, a copy of which has been sent to him, and the related statement by the Frankfurt public prosecutor's office. [29825]

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so. The Frankfurt public prosecutor has indicated that he, rather than the German Government, has offered "no recognition" that the bomb was put on Pan Am 103 at Frankfurt.

We believe that this statement was based on the Frankfurt prosecutor's assessment of evidence available to him.

The Scottish petition warrants were based on the entirety of the evidence available to the investigating and prosecuting authorities.

TREASURY

Male Unemployment

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the latest figures for male unemployment (i) in the United Kingdom and (ii) in other member states. [29226]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The statistical office of the European Community—SOEC—publishes comparable unemployment figures based on the internationally standard definition of unemployment recommended by International Labour Organisation. Information on rates of ILO unemployment in the European Union can be found in the SOEC's monthly unemployment bulletin, which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Tax Evasion

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many full-time staff were employed by the Inland Revenue on tax evasion investigations, and at what cost, in each of the last five years. [29594]

Mr. Jack: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 3 November 1995, Official Report, column 503. No later figures are available at this stage.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases of evasion of payments of (a) income tax and (b) other tax have been discovered in each of the last five years; and what has been the value of the revenue recovered in both categories. [29592]

Mr. Jack: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 26 October 1995, official Report, columns 727–28. No later figures are available at this stage.

Inland Revenue Staff (Wales)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time staff have been employed by the Inland Revenue in Wales in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [29598]

Mr. Jack: The number of staff employed by the Inland Revenue in Wales in each of the last five years was as follows:

Position at	Full time	Part time
1 April 1992	4,434	652
1 April 1993	4,244	660
1 April 1994	4,056	682
1 April 1995	3,847	668
1 April 1996	3,640	668

VAT (Tourism Services)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received over the last six months on the level of value added tax currently imposed by Her Majesty's Government on tourism services; and if he will make a statement. [29607]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There have been a number of representations during the past six months to me and to my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor in support of a reduced rate of VAT for tourism services. There is, however, no compelling evidence that the level of VAT in the UK places tourism at a disadvantage.

Tax Complaints

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the compensation awarded by the revenue adjudicator in each year since 1993 following complaints; and if he will make a statement. [29599]

Mr. Jack: The table gives details of the number of cases in the three years to 31 March 1996 in which the adjudicator has recommended that the Inland Revenue pays compensation.

Year	Number of cases	Compensation £	Greatest amount £
1993–94	29	24,379	10,397
1994–95	80	36,000	7,016
1995–96	85	89,098	22,429

The 85 cases in 1995–96 include those where the adjudicator made a recommendation in principle that compensation should be paid, but where the actual costs to be compensated have not yet been fully quantified. As a result, the figure for the total amount of compensation for that year will increase when the cases are finally settled.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how often the revenue adjudicator meets senior Inland Revenue managers to discuss performance and recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [29593]

Mr. Jack: The adjudicator has formal meetings with senior Inland Revenue managers monthly to discuss her work and issues arising from it. She and her staff have also spoken at many Inland Revenue seminars and conferences over the past three years. She sends senior Inland Revenue managers detailed quarterly reports and monthly statistical reports about her findings, and she publishes an annual report.

VAT

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the statutory authority for the imposition of value added tax on advance payments for (a) services and (b) goods; and if he will make a statement. [29642]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Section 6 of the Value Added Tax Act 1994 provides that tax is due when a VAT invoice is issued, or when any payment is received in respect of a taxable supply made by a VAT registered trader if this happens in advance of performance of the service or delivery of the goods concerned.

Education Trusts

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many education trusts have been established by parents. [28927]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 14 May 1996]: I assume the hon. Member has in mind the educational trusts whose charitable status has recently been under review. There are six such trusts, which operate school fee plans for parents and other investors.

Savings Income

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy for taxation of income from savings; and if he will make a statement. [28545]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 16 May 1996]: The Govnerment have introduced a number of measures to encourage and reward savers. In his last Budget, my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor reduced the tax charge on savings income for basic rate taxpayers to 20 per cent. We have also built on the success of targeted savings incentives such as PEPs and TESSAs. Latest figures show that, by March 1995, nearly 6.5 million PEP subscriptions—general and single company PEPs—had been made, totalling over £22 billion. By September 1995, there were nearly 4.5 million TESSAs in existence, representing over £27 billion of savings. Last year, we extended the PEP scheme to allow a wider range of investments, such as corporate bonds, and savers whose TESSAs have matured can now re-invest the whole capital from their first account in a follow-up TESSA for a further five years. Further generous tax reliefs continue to be available to people who save for their retirement by joining tax-approved occupational or personal pension schemes. This year's Finance Act includes a number of improvements to the tax-relieved employee share schemes that are designed to encourage more employees to participate in the success of the companies for which they work.

Income Tax Reductions

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the average amount of recent tax reductions to the individual taxpayer (a) for the month of April and (b) for the coming financial year; and if he will make a statement. [28649]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 16 May 1996]: On average, taxpayers will pay more than £13 less income tax in April[1] and £190 less income tax in 1996–97.

[1] The figure for April is less than one twelfth of the annual figure because tax cuts come into effect only on 5 April 1996.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Permanent Secretary (Applications)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many applications for the post of permanent secretary to the Welsh Office have been received; how many people other than those applying have been approached by the executive selection agency; and when he expects to make the announcement of the appointment. [29939]

Mr. Freeman: It is not the practice of the civil service commissioners to give details of a competition while it is in progress. Relevant information is published in their annual report. It is hoped that an announcement will be made about the appointment towards the end of June.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Careers Service

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what change has taken place in the definition of the key client group of the careers service since its contracting out. [29708]

Mr. Paice: There has been no change.

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures she will take to protect the interests of local education authorities following the contracting out of the careers service, with particular reference to strategic planning. [29707]

Mr. Paice: The duty to provide careers services in England was transferred to the Secretary of State from local education authorities by section 45 of the Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993. Provision of a careers service is no longer an LEA duty. However, in the majority of the new careers service companies, local education authorities are involved in the partnerships.

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what safeguards her Department took in respect of a possible conflict of interest when the careers service inspector who drew up the guidelines for the content and quality of bids for the careers service for the Bolton, Bury and Rochdale area took employment with the Nord Anglia careers service company; and if she will make a statement. [29705]

Mr. Paice: Guidelines for the assessment of the quality and content of bids for careers service contracts are of national application and were decided centrally. The individual to whom the hon. Member refers advised on some aspects of their development and only as part of a team. The Department was aware of his intention to seek alternative employment before his contract expired and took positive steps to ensure that he had no involvement with the contract negotiations for new services.

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the future role of the careers service inspectorate. [29709]

Mr. Paice: Since the enactment of the Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993, the role of the careers service inspectorate—led by the chief inspector—has been to establish arrangements for assessing the performance of careers services against the standards set by the Secretary of State. This includes developing and managing a process for auditing careers services' quality management systems, the direct assessment of aspects of careers service performance and reporting to the Secretary of State on whether the statutory duty has been met. There are no plans to change this role.

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what safeguards her Department took in respect of the possibility of a conflict of interest when the official who had been the point of contact between the Government office north-west and bidders for the careers service for the Bolton, Bury and Rochdale area took early retirement and a job with Nord Anglia careers service company; and if she will make a statement. [29703]

Mr. Paice: All civil servants, including those who have recently left the civil service, are subject to standard terms and conditions which cover their subsequent employment outside the civil service. The official in question has notified the Government office for the north-west that she has been offered a job with Nord Anglia Ltd., and she is currently seeking clearance before taking up this appointment.

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to ensure stable long-term funding for the careers service. [29711]

Mr. Paice: The Department's 1996 departmental report shows the Government's intention to invest in excess of £200 million per annum on the careers service to 1998–99. Plans for funding in future years will depend on the outcome of the annual public expenditure survey.

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what provision her Department has made to preserve the objectivity and impartiality of the careers service following its contracting out. [29706]

Mr. Paice: Careers services are contractually bound to provide their services in an impartial and unbiased way. The careers service inspectorate—led by the chief inspector—has established arrangements for assessing the performance of careers services against these and other standards set by the Secretary of State.

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what monitoring is carried out of career guidance standards (a) nationally and (b) locally; and if she will make a statement. [29702]

Mr. Paice: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State sets the requirements for careers guidance provided by careers services in the requirements and guidance for careers service providers and other documentation. The requirements and guidance for providers specifies the need for all services to have a quality management system, which is monitored locally by staff in Government offices within a national system developed by the chief inspector of careers services. The chief inspector also manages a programme of inspections of aspects of the guidance process in a nation sample of services. The findings of both local and national monitoring are set out in the chief inspector's annual report on the careers service to the Secretary of State, a copy of which is placed in the Library.

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to ensure that the careers service caters to the needs of adults. [29710]

Mr. Paice: The Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993 provides that adults in full-time education and part-time vocational education, except higher education are in the careers service client group.

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received about the bidding process for the careers service for the Bolton, Bury and Rochdale area. [29704]

Mr. Paice: Letters from two Members of Parliament were received by the Secretary of State in support of a partnership bid by the two local education authorities and training and enterprise council that cover the Bolton and Bury bidding area in the third round of competitive tendering for the provision of careers services in England.

School Leavers

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list (a) by local education authority and (b) in total, broken down in each case by gender, the number and percentage of 16-year-olds who left school with no formal qualifications in each of the last five years. [29639]

Mr. Paice: Information on school leavers is no longer collected by the Department. The table lists the number and percentage of 15-year-old—age at the beginning of the academic year—pupils who achieved no GCSE qualifications in each local education authority in England for 1991–92 to 1994–95.

[1] Age as at the beginning of the academic year.
[2] Includes LEA-maintained schools, grant-maintained schools, maintained special schools and city technology colleges.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list (a) by LEA and (b) in total, broken down in each case by gender, the number and percentage of 16-year-olds who left school with fewer than five passes at grades A to C in each of the last five years. [29640]

Mr. Paice: Information on school leavers is no longer collected by the Department. The following tables list the number and percentage of 15-year-old—age as at the beginning of the academic year—pupils who achieved fewer than five GCSE grades A*–C in each local education authority in England for 1991–92 to 1994–95.

[29351]

Mr. David Davis: Her Majesty's Government have promised £3 million to the OSCE/Council of Europe voluntary fund; the full amount was paid on 29 March 1996. In view of the importance and urgency of starting the election process, the Government requested that this money be spent on elections-related expenses. Most of the UK's donation has since been used to fund the printing of voters' lists and registration application forms and the preparation of voter education material. The Government have also given £10,000 to support a centre to promote local non-governmental organisations in Sarajevo.

[26911]

Mrs. Browning: I will write to the hon. Member.

Beef Exports

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of Untied Kingdom beef exports is represented by beef exported from Wales. [29043]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In the 12 months leading up to the export ban on British beef, the estimated amount exported from Wales was 5,000 tonnes—about 1.8 per cent. of the UK total.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he proposes to improve the sales abroad of beef raised in Wales. [29045]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government are seeking to have the export ban on British beef lifted. Once this has been achieved, beef from Wales will once again be able to compete successfully for export orders.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will ensure that at least one member of the board of the Welsh Development Agency has expertise in environmental matters and sustainable development. [29374]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Section 2(3) of the Welsh Development Agency Act 1975 specifies the range of experience that is deemed appropriate for membership of the Welsh Development Agency board. It includes environmental matters. My right hon. Friend takes full account of these requirements when considering appointments to the board.

Coal Tips (Monitoring)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many safety inspectors are employed in monitoring coal tips in the south Wales former coalfields; how many tips are monitored; and what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the inspections. [29337]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This information is not held centrally.

The mines and quarries inspectorate administers the Mines and Quarries (Tips) Act 1969 and has responsibility under that Act for the inspection of working tips. Responsibility for inspection of disused tips rests, under part II of that Act, with local authorities.

Colliery Areas (Regeneration)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what allocation of RECHAR funds will be made available to Wales. [29464]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: £16.9 million has been allocated under the RECHAR II programme for Wales for the period 1994 to 1997. I expect that further resources will be allocated to the initiative from the recently announced additional moneys made available to the UK from the community initiatives reserve.

Public Appointments (Women)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of public appointments made by his Department were held by women, at the most recent date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [29596]

Mr. Hague: The most recent information about appointments that I make is set out in "Appointments by the Secretary of State for Wales, 1 March 1996", which is available in the Library of the House. The summary of appointments by gender included in the preface shows that 28 per cent. of appointments were held by women.

Council of Europe Meetings

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many meetings of, or organised by, the Council of Europe since January 1995 have been attended by Ministers or officials of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [29358]

Mr. Hague: None.

Computer Aided Medical Systems Ltd.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to the answer 10 May, Official Report, column 285, what is the estimated figure for licence income from the NHS in Wales accruing to Computer Aided Medical Systems Ltd. in each financial year since 1991–92. [29961]

Mr. Hague: The answer included the income from the NHS in Wales. The specific amounts were:

1991–92: £14,120

1992–93: £52,048

1993–94 £35,231

1994–95: £14,220

1995–96: £18,570.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Council of Europe Meetings

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many meetings of, or organised by, the Council of Europe since January 1995 have been attended by Ministers or officials of the Privy Council Office; and if he will make a statement. [29365]

Mr. Newton: No such meetings have been attended since January 1995 by Ministers or officials of the Privy Council Office.

SCOTLAND

Control of Advertisements:

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many appeals he has received in the last year under the Control of Advertisements (Scotland) Regulations 1984; and how many he granted. [28327]

Mr. Kynoch: The information, which is available only by calendar year, is as follows:

Calendar year: 1995

Appeals received: 301

Appeals allowed: 42

The appeals are determined under delegated authority by officers appointed by my right hon. Friend.

Public Interest Immunity (Lockerbie Investigation)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the public interest immunity certificates issued in respect of the Lockerbie investigation, and the fatal accident inquiry; and to whom they were issued. [28638]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Five public immunity certificates were signed by Government Ministers in connection with the Lockerbie fatal accident inquiry in relation to matters or documents which Ministers considered not, in the public interest, be the subject of evidence. The then Secretary of State for Transport signed four certificates which dealt with aviation security measures, the size and shape of the improvised explosive device in the radio cassette recorder, the weight of explosives and the content of confidential communications by other Governments. The then Home Secretary signed a certificate which related to information concerning national security. None of these certificates required to be produced at the fatal accident inquiry.

In 1992, the then Secretary of State for Transport signed two certificates and the then Lord Advocate signed two certificates relating to the Lockerbie disaster concerning the taking of evidence for proceedings in the United States. The taking of that evidence, however, did not proceed.

DEFENCE

Armed Forces (Roles)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 April, Official Report, column 456, what is the estimated annual cost to his Department of each of the main functions carried out by Her Majesty's armed forces not carried out by other European members of NATO. [29869]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Tooting (Mr. Cox) on 6 March 1996, Official Report, column 232, which gives a cost for our nuclear deterrent; and to table 1.3 of "UK Defence Statistics 1995", which shows the cost of overseas garrisons and General Officer Commanding (Northern Ireland), a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Council of Europe Meetings

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many meetings of, or organised by, the Council of Europe since January 1995 have been attended by Ministers or officials of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [29356]

Mr. Soames: There is no record of any such attendance by officials or Ministers of my Department.

HMS Sheffield

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action has been taken or is planned to remove radioactive material from the grave of HMS Sheffield. [29764]

Mr. Soames: None.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give (a) the location and (b) the depth at which HMS Sheffield is estimated to lie. [29763]

Mr. Soames: HMS Sheffield sank some 350 miles east of the Falkland Islands, and is lying at a depth of approximately 2,000m.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what actions his Department has taken to retrieve objects on HMS Sheffield, which sank off the coast of the Falkland Islands in 1982; if he will list the objects which have been removed from HMS Sheffield; what forms of monitoring his Department has carried out on HMS Sheffield since she sank; and if he will make a statement; [29880]

(2) how many nuclear depth charges and of what type were carried by HMS Sheffield when she sank; and if he will make a statement; [29882]

(3) if he will list the nuclear weapons that his Department has lost in the past 30 years. [29881]

Mr. Soames: HMS Sheffield was abandoned when it proved impossible to extinguish fires resulting from a direct missile hit. She was later taken under tow, but sank six days after being hit. During those six days, small parties were helicoptered on to the ship on several occasions, primarily to assess the prospects of salvage and to see if lessons could be drawn. I understand that the only equipment that was recovered in this period was firefighting apparatus, which had been borrowed from other ships. No efforts were made to recover further equipment then or subsequently and, as HMS Sheffield sank in very deep water, no form of subsequent monitoring was either necessary or carried out.

It has been the practice of successive Governments neither to confirm nor deny the presence of nuclear weapons in specific locations at specific times. I can, however, confirm that the UK has never lost such a weapon, nor lost and subsequently recovered one.

Road Accident Deaths, Gorazde

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the special investigation branch report into the death of three soldiers from the Royal Gloucestershire, Berkshire and Wiltshire Regiment in a road accident on 12 September 1994, near Gorazde. [29879]

Mr. Soames: In common with civilian police reports, it is not my Department's practice to place service special investigation branch reports in the Library of the House. The witness statements from the SIB report into the deaths of these soldiers, however, have been made available to the next of kin.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 277

SESSION 1995–96

7th May—17th May 1996

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.
